The Pierson Fern

(NEPHROLEPIS PIERSONI.)

There is nothing that you can plant that will increase in value so rapidly as this fern. The demand has been so great, and our advance sales so large, that we have not offered it recently, having only just completed filling advance orders. We have a nice lot of young stock coming on, and can fill all orders received from this date promptly on receipt. Even at the present high price it has been impossible to keep up with the demand, and there is sure to be a tremendous demand for it another season when it can be offered at lower prices. Now is the time to invest in it and get the benefit of the tremendous demand and good prices which are sure to prevail another season. The Boston Fern, although it has been cultivated many years, is still scarce. As Nephrolepis Piersoni will sell better and be in greater demand even than the Boston Fern, we predict a scarcity of Nephrolepis Piersoni for several years to come and at big prices. Owing to the great and continued demand, we do not expect to be more than able to meet the demand this spring, so that customers can rest assured that there will be no change in price this season.

We offer strong young plants, 2 1/4-in. pots, at $9.00 per doz.; 50 plants at 60c each; 100 plants at 50c each; 500 plants at 45c each; 1000 plants at 40c each.

Extra large plants, 6-in. pots, $27.00 per doz; 50 plants at $1.80 each; 100 plants at $1.50 each. These large plants will make fine stock for growing on into large specimens for fall trade, and they are also very nice for immediate sales.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

AN ODD FELLOWS' EMBLEM.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a floral arrangement by W. E. King, East Santa Cruz, Cal., for the funeral of a member of the Odd Fellows' fraternity. The three links are of stocks, carnations and ferns and are surmounted by a star of carnations festooned with adiantum ferns. The links are attached to a wire easel and the treatment of the feet of the latter seems to us to be especially good. The photographer failed to take in the full length of the feet. The lilies at the right had their full length of stem, and they made an excellent contrast to the campanulas, asparagus, etc., used at the left. Below the links but above the lilies is a panel containing the letters "F. L. T." a symbol of the order, and the name of the lodge sending the piece appears on the ribbon at the right.

Designs of this character are frequently asked for and nothing will satisfy the members of fraternal orders except floral representations of their emblems. Often the result is grotesque rather than artistic and it should be the constant effort of florists to avoid this by a somewhat free treatment of the subject. In the arrangement illustrated the emblem is readily recognized, while rigid lines have been avoided and the graceful treatment of the easel helps further to relieve the stiffness of the design.

BACKGROUNDS AND ACCESSORIES.

This is a chapter of "don'ts." Too many decorative plans do themselves injustice by their ill settings. It is just as essential to have harmony between the background and the floral decoration as to require a correct blending among the parts of the decoration itself. Color, of course, lights and shades, spacing and union of lines, depth of space and points of termination, must all be considered in selecting a plan for a decoration in front of which a receiving party is to stand. Suppose it is to be a home wedding. The first essential is to find a place where the best view can be had from adjoining rooms. This is the only thing which should deter the decorator from selecting the prettiest place in all the house. Even then it is seldom one finds a background entirely to his fancy.

A side wall, a corner, a swell window, mantel, mirror or a lace curtain drapery, are among the available places. In the first two, we are apt to run against unpromising conditions. Too often the background is a dark, papered wall of intricate and elaborate design, which displays green draperies and garlands to no advantage whatever. For most purposes, neutral tints in wall decorations are to be preferred, but not often for our uses. The soft olive green wall otherwise so beautiful and desirable throws a sickly yellow glare over the glossy smilax foliage.

Most emphatically, in these cases, don't proceed to put up a decoration without manufacturing a new background. Don't start a new scheme or set of lines over the lines of the permanent decoration, unless you follow and elaborate upon the original design, and on a wall this is practically impossible. The only result of such an attempt would be a confusion of short lines with broken connection and the floral scheme spoiled, too. If green is to be used principally, get a good, clear background that blends with the permanent coloring of the room.

If no suitable material for the new is a good framework. It is not necessary to cover all the wire. It can be gilded or painted the same color as the foliage used. Stretch the panel from the picture moulding to the floor, being careful to avoid puncturing the front of the woodwork and the plastering. Much destructive work can be seen on walls where tacks and nails have been driven indiscriminately, where the use of guy wires from the top and sides of the woodwork would have saved the surface of the wall.

Lace curtains are often used as backgrounds for greenery. This material is legitimate for our use if we keep within the border patterns. The same principle holds good here as with the designs on a papered or frescoed wall. Keep off the patterns. Another "don't" is in place right here. Don't let the new sets of lines which compose the temporary decoration conflict with the general outline of the permanent decoration. Take up the ideas which the frescoer or the textile artist has worked out, and elaborate background can be found in the house, draw on your own stock of accessories or manufacture something out of your inner consciousness. Make a screen or hang some drapery of plain soft material, or make a panel of galax, asparagus, lycopodium, native autumn leaves, Alabama smilax, or some other tough foliage, as the case requires or the market affords. Common chicken wire with flowers and foliage. One test of a good eye is the ability to analyze a design that is set in sight, as well as to create a new scheme.

Right here is another almost necessary requirement of a good floral designer, and that is a knowledge of the principles of design in its widest sense. To know by intuition that a certain bowl of flowers is arranged correctly is by no means all. The ability to judge the accepted laws of design by the system found in natural form, with which we are brought in daily contact, is the correct basis of opinion. Without this attainment we are not fit critics even of our own work.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

ROSES.

Treatment of Meteor.

The summer treatment of Meteor, while not differing greatly from the treatment required by other roses at that season, as does their winter treatment, is yet so far different as to require a few special remarks.

To reap the full advantage of the growing season they require very careful attention as regards ventilation. While other roses may thrive and luxuriate in a temperature which may vary from 35 to 40 degrees between day and night, and where the percentage of moisture in the atmosphere may also vary to an excessive degree without seeming to affect the healthfulness of the stock, Meteor, if subjected to the same conditions, soon begins to show the effects.

The foliage of Meteor when in perfect health has a thick, rubbery texture and a dark green, glossy color which can only be maintained by watchfulness in ventilating, both by night and day, and careful observation in regard to, and ministering to, their wants at the proper season.

Requiring a higher temperature during the night than other roses, sound judgment is needed in setting the ventilators for the night, and the anxious grower will have to devote part of his time to studying weather conditions. In fact, try to become a bit of a weather prophet, as Meteor is very susceptible to the sudden fluctuations of temperature which are so common to our summers.

The peculiar, humpy form of the older leaves of this variety makes perfect syringing a harder and more tedious task than with most other sorts, and requires greater skill and care in handling the hose to oust the spider from his lair. Experienced growers have each his own favorite method and nozzle, to which he pins his faith, to accomplish his object. The main thing is to so direct the spray from the nozzle, by a peculiar kind of up-percut, that the under side of each leaf is thoroughly washed, with sufficient force to dislodge the spider and break up the web. This requires quite a lot of practice before perfection is attained. An expert at this can rid his plants of spider with less effort and half the volume of water employed by the inexperienced, and as spider is the most insidious and persistent insect pest of the summer season, the best means of eradicating or keeping it in check should have our most careful consideration.

While Meteors are making a crop of wood they require large supplies of water, but as the wood and leaves acquire a firmer texture the water can be slightly reduced till they again commence to break. By carefully attending to this both wood and foliage will be of a finer quality than if water is used indiscriminately, independent of the stage of growth.

To help keep the soil from souring a sprinkling of air slaked lime may be ruffled into the soil every two or three weeks. This will also improve the texture of both wood and foliage.

Houses which were planted early should now have the soil well filled with roots and will require no more surface stirring. To keep the roots cool and prevent too rapid evaporation a light mulch should be applied.

Keeping the branches neatly tied up will make syringing easy and more effective, at the same time helping the plants along and adding to the appearance of the house.

RIBES.

ODONTOGLOSSUM CRISPUM.

I have sold my overstock of cattleyas and a large lot of phalaenopsis amounting to over $500, demonstrating beyond contradiction that if you have an overstock and want to get rid of it, advertising will turn the trick. I enclose the amount of your bill. Somehow florists are shy of Odontoglossum crispum, even at $1 each. How do you account for it? Easily managed and unquestionably one of the finest orchids in cultivation, all it wants is a partially shaded house facing north, with plenty of light and a cool, moist atmosphere and it will do the rest, that is, supply its owner with magnificent racemes of beautiful flowers that are the admiration of all.

R. SCHIFFMANN.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Benching the Plants.

The hot weather in this section the past week has brought to our plants that hardy, mature growth so much desired when housing stock. There is less wilting, the plants become established more quickly and consequently less syringing is required.

From the time of digging until the plants have gotten under way every little detail presenting itself as of benefit should receive your personal attention. The main points are to transfer the plants to the bench as quickly as possible after digging; allow no draughts to reach them; water intelligently and syringe with caution.

With two men on opposite sides of a bench and another to deliver the plants, the operation proceeds with dispatch. Our plan is to have no more than twenty-five plants ahead of the planters, the plants being dug and immediately brought in, our field being close to the house.

In case your field is some distance away, it is best to dig very early in the morning, packing the plants in boxes about a foot deep, allowing them to stand upright, removing at once to a cool cellar or shed to be drawn upon as wanted, but be very particular to keep off any draught.

It is advisable that some soil should adhere to the roots when brought in. This is especially necessary since the practice of planting early has begun, and if you followed the plan of potting each cutting when rooted, or sometime previous to planting out, the advantage gained will be plainly seen. With care this same ball can be preserved intact and goes a long ways in keeping the plant through the period of transformation from an outdoor plant to a greenhouse one.

I am not, however, an advocate of lifting and planting a large ball; neither am I in favor of securing all the roots possible. This may seem a radical departure from former methods, when the general advice on lifting any plant has been to secure all roots possible, but from experience I venture to make the statement that there is such a thing as having roots in quantity detrimental to the rapid establishment of the plant. By this is meant a mass of long, fibrous roots, which cannot possibly be arranged in their natural position. Some will lie either coiled or in a tangled and twisted mass, thereby preventing good soil contact.

No one will deny but that the end of practically every fiber is broken off in lifting and new rootlets must form before the main root can be supplied by its tributaries. What harm can come if these fibers are further shortened, thereby facilitating their arrangement in more natural and evenly radiating directions?

It may be well to state that in making the above statement, I am speaking in a commercial sense, where so much depends on rapidity in the handling of plants and where carelessness is apt to enter into the operation of this all-important work.

As soon as fifty plants are benched, they should be watered. This is best done by leaving the plants in a slight furrow, watering each plant well, but not in quantity that the water will run through. Later level the soil around the plants, keeping it loose. With necessary syringing all the soil will soon be as moist as it should be.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Procedure in Benching.

If you have thrown out your old carnation plants as they gave out and re-filled your benches you will have some of them ready to be replanted with young stock by this time. Those who planted out fairly early, and had good plants to put out, will have, by this time, some good plants of fair size and replanting may begin at any time you care to go ahead with it. In fact, I have lately seen several houses already planted with field plants, and they invariably looked in fine shape. We are preparing to plant this week and from then on it will go on unceasingly until it is all done. The middle of August should see us planting our last ones if we have good luck. Our plants have done very well in the field this season and most of the varieties have made very fair sized plants, so that this season's planting begins as promising as any we have made in recent years.

I have several times in previous notes given you our mode of procedure, and to some of you this will seem merely like a repetition of an oft told story, but there are always those that have only begun growing carnations and to those it may be of some help. There is nothing new in this line this year. The main thing is and always has been to get the plants from the field set into the soil in the house with the least possible loss of vitality. Keeping them damp will, of course, help to keep the plants fresh, but every hour that the roots are out of the soil is so much vitality lost; it will take them just that much longer to take hold of the new soil. So you should organize your force of men and give each man a certain part to do and see that he does it right. Just how you divide up the work must depend on the number of men you have at your disposal and you must use your own judgment in dividing up the work so that one man will not need to wait for another.

Be sure that each man is capable of doing his part intelligently; for instance, don't take a man from the plow to do the digging, or a boy who has been on the place a month. The digging is as important as the planting, and one of your best men should at least oversee it. He should be able to detect disease at a glance and he should be able to detect any plants that may have gotten mixed into the variety he is digging, and in fact he should be capable of running the field end of the operation. The planter, of course, is one of your best men, if you do not do the work yourself. Those who pick up the plants and carry them to the house need only be careful and willing to do as they are told.

The main thing for the digger is to get all the roots, and by deep digging is the only way it can be done. If the soil is mellow he can push the spade down its full depth; the surplus soil will readily fall away from the roots. Lay the plants on their side carefully and let the helper shake off what soil should come off, thus keeping the roots covered as much as possible. If you need all the good plants you have he should begin at one end and take every plant of fair size as he goes along, but of course if there are plenty to pick from he will take only the best (not always the largest) plants.

The helper follows the digger just as close as he can and picks up each plant separately and crumbles off enough soil to leave a ball about the size of your fist and dips the roots into a pail of water and finally places it upright in a box which he can pull along with him as he goes. Each box should be taken into the shade as soon as filled and sprinkled.

The planter is the man who often has to bear the blame when the plants fail to do well the next winter. He should set the plants just as deep as they were in the field. Make a hole plenty large enough and fill between and around the roots with fine soil and press well around the roots and leave a slight depression on the surface. But always see that there is loose soil on top.

I started to say that if the soil is in a nice, moist condition when you plant, but you should not plant unless it is moist enough to plant well, about the way you like it for potting; or better, moist enough so it will not draw the moisture out of the roots. After planting a hundred or two take the hose and, having the water run slow, fill up each depression and sprinkle the plants well overhead. This sprinkling must be kept up from this on, several times a day, until you can see that the plants have taken hold. The number of times each day will of course depend on the weather. If the weather is cool about every two hours is often enough, but on very hot days every hour during midday will be necessary and at such times you should wet down the walks and under the benches and in fact every place you can that will help to keep the house moist. No strong draughts should strike the plants either; you may have to keep the ventilators half open, but a few degrees warmer will do less harm than a draught of drying wind.

The question of shading the house while planting has caused many arguments and while we know that there is much harm done by too much shading, yet we find a shade for a few days is a great help in getting the plants through the trying ordeal, especially if the weather is hot. Just as soon as the plants begin to grow, however, we are done with the shade and off it comes. Carnations like the sun when they are in a growing condition.

Topping in the Field.

Now about topping the plants in the field. You usually know a week ahead what varieties you are going to plant next and you should go over them and take off every shoot that will need topping before planting time. That will give the plant a chance to get balanced up again. No good grower will bench plants with buds on them. We used to do that years ago, but we know better now. The blooms never amount to anything and the plant is robbed of the energy it takes to develop the bloom. Even after planting in the house, if the plants are a little undersized, we often keep means all. The ability to judge the accepted laws of design by the system found in natural form, with which we are brought in daily contact, is the correct basis of opinion. Without this attainment we are not fit critics even of our own work.

ROSES.

Treatment of Meteor.

The summer treatment of Meteor, while not differing greatly from the treatment required by other roses at that season, as does their winter treatment, is yet so far different as to require a few special remarks.

To reap the full advantage of the growing season they require very careful attention as regards ventilation. While other roses may thrive and luxuriate in a temperature which may vary from 35 to 40 degrees between day and night, and where the percentage of moisture in the atmosphere may also vary to an excessive degree without seeming to affect the healthfulness of the stock, Meteor, if subjected to the same conditions, soon begins to show the effects.

The foliage of Meteor when in perfect health has a thick, rubbery texture and a dark green, glossy color which can only be maintained by watchfulness in ventilating, both by night and day, and careful observation in regard to, and ministering to, their wants at the proper season.

Requiring a higher temperature during the night than other roses, sound judgment is needed in setting the ventilators for the night, and the anxious grower will have to devote part of his time to studying weather conditions. In fact, try to become a bit of a weather prophet, as Meteor is very susceptible to the sudden fluctuations of temperature which are so common to our summers.

The peculiar, numpy form of the older leaves of this variety makes perfect syringing a harder and more tedious task than with most other sorts, and requires greater skill and care in handling the hose to oust the spider from his lair. Experienced growers have each his own favorite method and nozzle, to which he pins his faith, to accomplish his object. The main thing is to so direct the spray from the nozzle, by a peculiar kind of up-pereut, that the under side of each leaf is thoroughly washed, with sufficient force to dislodge the spider and break up the web. This requires quite a lot of practice before perfection is attained. An expert at this can rid his plants of spider with less effort and half the volume of water employed by the inexperienced, and as spider is the most insidious and persistent insect pest of the summer season, the best means of eradicating or keeping it in check should have our most careful consideration.

While Meteors are making a crop of wood they require large supplies of water, but as the wood and leaves acquire a firmer texture the water can be slightly reduced till they again commence to break. By carefully attending to this both wood and foliage will be of a finer quality than if water is used indiscriminately, independent of the stage of growth.

To help keep the soil from souring a sprinkling of air-slaked lime may be ruffled into the soil every two or three weeks. This will also improve the texture of both wood and foliage.

Houses which were planted early should now have the soil well filled with roots and will require no more surface stirring. To keep the roots cool and prevent too rapid evaporation a light mulch should be applied.

Keeping the branches neatly tied will make syringing easy and more effective, at the same time helping plants along and adding to the appearance of the house.

RIBES.

ODONTOGLOSSUM CRISPUM.

I have sold my over-stock of cattleya, and a large lot of phalaenopsis amounting to over $500, demonstrating beyond contradiction that if you have an over-stock and want to get rid of it, advertising will turn the trick. I enclose an amount of your bill. Somehow florists are shy of Odontoglossum crispum, even at $1 each. How do you account for it? Easily managed and unquestionably one of the finest orchids in cultivation, all it wants is a partially shaded house facing north, with plenty of light and cool, moist atmosphere and it will do the rest, that is, supply its owner with magnificent racemes of beautiful flowers that are the admiration of all.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Benching the Plants.

The hot weather in this section the past week has brought to our plants that hardy, mature growth so much desired when housing stock. There is less wilting, the plants become established more quickly and consequently less syringing is required.

From the time of digging until the plants have gotten under way every little detail presenting itself as of benefit should receive your personal attention. The main points are to transfer the plants to the bench as quickly as possible after digging; allow no draughts to reach them; water intelligently and syringe with caution.

With two men on opposite sides of a bench and another to deliver the plants the operation proceeds with dispatch. Our plan is to have no more than twenty-five plants ahead of the planters, the plants being dug and immediately brought in, our field being close to the house.

In case your field is some distance away, it is best to dig very early in the morning, packing the plants in boxes about a foot deep, allowing them to stand upright, removing at once to a cool cellar or shed to be drawn upon as wanted but be very particular to keep off any draught.

It is advisable that some soil should adhere to the roots when brought in. This is especially necessary since the practice of planting early has begun, and if you followed the plan of potting and cutting when rooted, or sometime previous to planting out, the advantage gained will be plainly seen. With this same ball can be preserved intact and goes a long way in keeping the plant through the period of transformation from an outdoor plant to a greenhouse one.

I am not, however, an advocate of lifting and planting a large ball; neither am I in favor of securing all the root possible. This may seem a radical departure from former methods, when the general advice on lifting any plant has been to secure all roots possible, but from experience I venture to make the statement that there is such a thing as having roots in quantity detrimental to the rapid establishment of the plant. By this is meant a mass of long, fibrous roots, which cannot possibly be arranged in their natural position. Some will lie either coiled or in a tangled and twisted mass, thereby preventing good soil contact.

No one will deny but that the end of practically every fiber is broken off in lifting and new rootlets must form before the main root can be supplied by its tributaries. What harm can come if these fibers are further shortened, thereby facilitating their arrangement in more natural and evenly radiating directions?

It may be well to state that in making the above statement, I am speaking in a commercial sense, where so much depends on rapidity in the handling of plants and where carelessness is apt to enter into the operation of this all important work.

As soon as fifty plants are benched, they should be watered. This is best done by leaving the plants in a slight furrow, watering each plant well, but not in quantity that the water will run through. Later level the soil around the plants, keeping it loose. With necessary syringing all the soil will soon be as moist as it should be.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Procedure in Benching.

If you have thrown out your old carnation plants as they gave out and refilled your benches you will have some of them ready to be replanted with young stock by this time. Those who planted out fairly early, and had good plants to put out, will have, by this time, some good plants of fair size and replanting may begin at any time you care to go ahead with it. In fact, I have lately seen several houses already planted with field plants, and they invariably looked in fine shape. We are preparing to plant this week and from then on it will go on unceasingly until it is all done. The middle of August should see us planting our last ones if we have good luck. Our plants have done very well in the field this season and most of the varieties have made very fair sized plants, so that this season's planting begins as promising as any we have made in recent years.

I have several times in previous notes given you our mode of procedure, and to some of you this will seem merely like a repetition of an oft told story, but there are always those that have only begun growing carnations and to those it may be of some help. There is nothing new in this line this year. The main thing is and always has been to get the plants from the field set into the soil in the house with the least possible loss of vitality. Keeping them damp will, of course, help to keep the plants fresh, but every hour that the roots are out of the soil is so much vitality lost; it will take them just that much longer to take hold of the new soil. So you should organize your force of men and give each man a certain part to do and see that he does it right. Just how you divide up the work must depend on the number of men you have at your disposal and you must use your own judgment in dividing up the work so that one man will not need to wait for another.

Be sure that each man is capable of doing his part intelligently; for instance, don't take a man from the plow to do the digging, or a boy who has been on the place a month. The digging is as important as the planting, and one of your best men should at least oversee it. He should be able to detect disease at a glance and he should be able to detect any plants that may have gotten mixed into the variety he is digging, and in fact he should be capable of running the field end of the operation. The planter, of course, is one of your best men, if you do not do the work yourself. Those who pick up the plants and carry them to the house need only be careful and willing to do as they are told.

The main thing for the digger is to get all the roots, and by deep digging is the only way it can be done. If the soil is mellow he can push the spade down its full depth; the surplus soil will readily fall away from the roots. Lay the plants on their side carefully and let the helper shake off what soil should come off, thus keeping the roots covered as much as possible. If you need all the good plants you have he should begin at one end and take every plant of fair size as he goes along, but of course if there are plenty to pick from he will take only the best—not always the largest plants.

The helper follows the digger just as close as he can and picks up each plant separately and crumbles off enough soil to leave a ball about the size of your fist and dips the roots into a pail of water and finally places it upright in a box which he can pull along with him as he goes. Each box should be taken into the shade as soon as filled and sprinkled.

The planter is the man who often has to bear the blame when the plants fail to do well the next winter. He should set the plants just as deep as they were in the field. Make a hole plenty large enough and fill between and around the roots with fine soil and press well around the roots and leave a slight depression on the surface. But always see that there is loose soil on top.

I started to say that if the soil is in a nice, moist condition when you plant, but you should not plant unless it is moist enough to plant yet, during the way you like it for potting; or better, moist enough so it will not draw the moisture out of the roots. After planting a hundred or two take the hose and, having the water run slow, fill up each depression and sprinkle the plants well overhead. This sprinkling must be kept up from this on, several times a day, until you can see that the plants have taken hold. The number of times each day will of course depend on the weather. If the weather is cool about every two hours is often enough, but on very hot days every hour during midday will be necessary and at such times you should wet down the walks and under the benches and in fact every place you can that will help to keep the house moist. No strong draughts should strike the plants either; you may have to keep the ventilators half open, but a few degrees warmer will do less harm than a draught of drying wind.

The question of shading the house while planting has caused many arguments and while we know that there is much harm done by too much shading, yet we find a shade for a few days is a great help in getting the plants through the tying ordeal, especially if the weather is hot. Just as soon as the plants begin to grow, however, we are done with the shade and off it comes. Carnations like the sun when they are in a growing condition.

Topping in the Field.

Now about topping the plants in the field. You usually know a week ahead what varieties you are going to plant next and you should go over them and take off every shoot that will need topping before planting time. That will give the plant a chance to get balanced up again. No good grower will bench plants with buds on them. We used to do that years ago, but we know better now. The flooms never amount to anything and the plant is robbed of the energy it takes to develop the floom. Even after planting in the house, if the plants are a little undersized, we often keep the buds off until vigorous growth commences.

What varieties to plant first is also an important question. There is not a very great demand for carnations until the asters are gone, which means late September or October, and by that time you want to be cutting some blooms. Some varieties will come into bloom by that time if they are planted by August 20, but some others need to be planted much earlier. Mrs. Lawson will give longer stems when planted very early. White Cloud and Lorna will come in by that time if planted early, while Queen Louise and Flora Hill come into bloom quickly. Dorothy does not take near as long as Ethel Crocker and Crane comes into good shape quicker than America or Estelle. Mrs. P. Palmer takes a little longer, too, to round into form, but Christmas will usually see it in perfect condition. However, if you get your plants established on your benches in good time you can regulate your crops easily by pinching back or letting them come, as the case may be, and so I would advise getting in all your plants early, and the late bloomers first.

GIGANTIC BAY TREES.

The accompanying illustrations show what are probably the largest bay trees in this country. They were imported by Siebrecht & Son, New York. They sold three pairs of the globular shape, two pairs of the standard form and ten pairs of the pyramid form. The illustrations give a very inadequate idea of the size of the specimens except by comparison. The Messrs. Siebrecht appear in the illustrations and serve to show the relative height of the trees.

EASTER LILIES FROM SEED.

In his pamphlet on growing Easter lilies from seed, George W. Oliver says that there exists a widespread belief that in raising plants from seed a long time elapses before they come into bloom, and it is urged against the seed method that a certain percentage of the plants in a batch are late coming into flower. It should be remembered, however, that this is more or less the case with all kinds of plants where the method of vegetative reproduction is suddenly changed to that of reproduction from seed. In all cases this irregularity of the blooming period lasts only for a time. But, even were there no possibilities of fixing types from seminal reproduction, the supposition that this method of propagation is a drawback because of late bloomers is erroneous. This point has been raised against the method chiefly because it has never been tried systematically. A batch has been raised giving only about 75 per cent of bulbs that can be depended upon to produce plants that will open their flowers within, say, a period of ten days; but even so, with the gain of increased vigor and the saving of time required in the production of a marketable bulb, it will pay handsomely, even if the late bloomers are discarded while in the growing stage in the field and only the early blooming buds are harvested. However, there is no necessity for so radical a treatment. The early bloomers can be separated from those which bloom late, and sold accordingly. There is a demand for healthy bulbs at whatever time they bloom. Furthermore, by judicious selection of seed parents—that is, those which come earliest into bloom, having other desirable characteristics to recommend them—and by careful cross-fertilization of these forms there is an absolute certainty of fixing types which will be satisfactory in every way.

Nearly every lily has been propagated asexually up to the present time, and the system is, to a certain extent, answerable for the wretched condition of the crops, which, even with intelligent care in our greenhouses, show from 40 to 60 per cent of diseased plants. Most growers would greatly prefer to have only 25 per cent of late bloomers in a batch of healthy bulbs from seed than that the present conditions affecting the Bermuda and Japan bulbs should continue.

Emasculating and Pollinating.

To raise seedlings of any desired variety of Lilium longiflorum which will reproduce as nearly as possible the same characters possessed by the parents, it is necessary to take precautions against the possibility of pollen from less desirable forms being deposited upon the stigmas of the flowers selected to bear seed. In the flower of the Easter lily the anthers reach maturity a little in advance of the period when the stigma is in a receptive condition. The early ripening of the pollen and the large size of the anthers make it easy to remove the stamens at quite an early stage in the life of the flower.

Emasculation can be performed with a certain degree of safety after the perianth segments expand, but it is accomplished with greater certainty while the flower is in the bud stage. When the operation is performed early it seems to divert to the pistil the substance which otherwise would be utilized in the development of the stamens. Thus, if the stamens are allowed to remain and pollinate the same flower with its own pollen, or that from the flower of another individual, the resulting capsule of seed is smaller than that borne by an artificially pollinated flower which had previously been emasculated.

To remove the stamens at an early stage it is necessary to cut off one or two divisions of the perianth for at least one-third of their length. The stamens, being very large, are then easily removed with the aid of a pair of forceps. The condition of the stigma most favorable for the reception of the pollen is indicated by its having acquired full size and by its color changing from a greenish white to creamy white. This period occurs just before the surface of the stigma is copiously covered with a viscid secretion. Before the secretion appears the pollen takes immediate effect. Fecundation, when successful, is indicated by the rapid withering of the perianth; also by the ovary, which, in a few days, will assume a vertical position instead of remaining horizontal.

It is of importance that the actual work of applying pollen from the anthers of one flower to the stigma of another is performed during the early part of the day, choosing a time when the sun is likely to be unobscured for several hours. The air should also be dry and warm. It is not necessary to use a brush in applying the pollen. With a pair of forceps an anther may be removed by severing a filament at about half an inch below the point of attachment. The pollen grains on a single anther are sufficient to cover thoroughly the surface of the stigma. While held by the forceps the anther should be rubbed against the stigma until the latter is covered with the pollen grains. This condition is easily observed by the bright yellow color and copious supply of pollen.

The pollinated flower should not be covered with paper bags. These, as a rule, serve well with other kinds of flowers where artificial pollination is resorted to in keeping out insects and preventing pollen being brought by other agencies, but in the flowers of lilium they are usually hurtful, because the atmosphere surrounding the stigma is to a certain extent stagnant on account of the thick texture of the paper interfering with the free admission of air. If this condition is present while the very copious secretion is over the large stigma, some of the pollen grains decay, and the result is that a moldy growth will occur over the entire pollinated surface. Light gauze or cheese-cloth bags will be found excellent substitutes for paper bags. There is little probability of pollen grains being carried about by a movement of the atmosphere or the visitation of insects, but it is better to guard against the danger of undesirable pollen gaining access to the stigma.

In all the varieties the seed vessels take from eight to ten weeks to reach maturity. This is indicated by a change of color from pea-green to a light straw-colored hue, at first near the apex, then gradually extending toward the base. When the basal part changes its color the seeds are ripe. The seed vessel at this stage begins to dehisce, starting at the apex and splitting into three parts, each part containing two rows of seed closely arranged lengthwise. When the vessels begin to open they should be gathered and kept in an uncovered receptacle until most of the moisture in the walls of the seed vessel has evaporated. In a day or two the seeds must be removed from the capsules. They are then damp to the touch and should not be excluded from the air while in this state, as there is danger of their becoming moldy. They should be spread out on trays for a day or so to dry. Afterwards they can be kept in jars until wanted for sowing.

Sowing the Seed.

In places having a similar winter climate to that of the Bermudas, or where the minimum temperature does not fall below 45 degrees F., the seedlings may be raised out of doors without the aid of greenhouse structures, but with the protection of sash throughout the germinating period and until the plants have made the first three or four leaves.

The plants can be brought to this stage by the beginning of September and transferred to convenient distances apart in beds, where they will make rapid growth. The seeds should be sown in beds in rows from five to six feet wide. To have the soil in which the seed is to be sown of sufficient warmth to promote a steady growth, there should be at least three inches of stable litter and leaves placed in the bottom of the bed. Loamy soil, mixed with one-third vegetable humus, should be placed over the litter to a depth of at least six inches. This should be well firmed and raked smooth. The seed should be sown quite thickly, as the seedlings have small, narrow leaves and occupy but little space until they are ready for pricking off.

After the surface of the seed bed has been raked quite smooth the seeds should be sown evenly over the bed, from six to ten to each square inch of surface, according to the quality of the seed. The seeds can be pressed into the soil with the back part of a spade or a smooth piece of board and covered with one-half inch of sifted and sterilized soil composed of loam and leaf soil in equal parts. The soil, if sterilized, will prevent the disturbance of the surface in removing weeds. The surface should be pressed moderately firm and watered with a fine sprinkler only when the soil appears to be on the dry side. The surface of the bed can be kept in excellent condition for successful germination by covering it with an inch of sphagnum moss, which should be sprinkled occasionally, and the soil should be examined frequently to ascertain its condition.

The seeds require a considerable time in the ground before the first leaf appears above the surface. Therefore, to provide seedling plants for a large crop the seed beds will occupy a comparatively small space. They will thus be easily tended, so far as watering, shading, and weeding are concerned, until the seedlings have attained sufficient size to warrant pricking off. If bulbs are planted and seeds sown at the same time, the bulbs naturally can be flowered quicker than the seedlings, but only by a few weeks. Therefore, the seeds should be sown early—say, during the month of June. When sown at this period the seedlings will attain a fair size during warm weather, and will all the better be able to withstand the lower temperature of the winter months.

With regard to raising seedlings in the middle and northern states, there is little probability of success unless the seed is sown, say, during the month of January indoors and the seedlings are transplanted to outdoor beds as soon as the weather permits. For experiments of this nature the seeds would necessarily have to be of the previous season's crop, and in order to have them ripen late, so that as short a time as possible would elapse between ripening and sowing, the seed-bearing plants should be grown outdoors.

Picking Off the Seedlings.

The seedlings will bear pricking off as soon as the seed leaves reach full size. Nothing is gained, however, by undertaking the operation at this early stage. It is more easily accomplished after the plantlets have made two or three leaves. They should be transferred to beds similar in size to those in which the seeds were sown and at a distance of from two to three inches apart. The work of pricking off can be very rapidly done, and wholly with the fingers or without the aid of a dibble. The protection of shaded sash may be given for the first few days if found necessary. When the plants are supplied with leaves of such size as to be in danger of crowding each other they should be removed to the field beds. It may be stated that the plants, even in their younger stages, are not at all impatient of removal.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market is dull and inactive. There is a light demand, chiefly for stock suitable for funeral work. The quantity of flowers coming into town continues large. Very many are wasted. Especially is this true of sweet peas after a day of sunshine. Outdoor flowers are plentiful. So are roses of pretty fair quality. Asters and dahlias have made their appearance, rather short in stem as yet, but giving a pleasant variety. E. Bernheimer is receiving both, and also some flowers of the Balduin rose, rarely seen here.

The surface should be pressed moderately firm and watered with a fine sprinkler only when the soil appears to be on the dry side. The surface of the bed can be kept in excellent condition for successful germination by covering it with an inch of sphagnum moss, which should be sprinkled occasionally, and the soil should be examined frequently to ascertain its condition.

The seeds require a considerable time in the ground before the first leaf appears above the surface. Therefore, to provide seedling plants for a large crop the seed beds will occupy a comparatively small space. They will thus be easily tended, so far as watering, shading, and weeding are concerned, until the seedlings have attained sufficient size to warrant pricking off. If bulbs are planted and seeds sown at the same time, the bulbs naturally can be flowered quicker than the seedlings, but only by a few weeks. Therefore, the seeds should be sown early, say, during the month of June. When sown at this period the seedlings will attain a fair size during warm weather, and will all the better be able to withstand the lower temperature of the winter months.

With regard to raising seedlings in the middle and northern states, there is little probability of success unless the seed is sown, say, during the month of January indoors and the seedlings are transplanted to outdoor beds as soon as the weather permits. For experiments of this nature the seeds would necessarily have to be of the previous season's crop, and in order to have them ripen late, so that as short a time as possible would elapse between ripening and sowing, the seed-bearing plants should be grown outdoors.

Picking Off the Seedlings.

The seedlings will bear pricking off as soon as the seed leaves reach full size. Nothing is gained, however, by undertaking the operation at this early stage. It is more easily accomplished after the plantlets have made two or three leaves. They should be transferred to beds similar in size to those in which the seeds were sown and at a distance of from two to three inches apart. The work of pricking off can be very rapidly done, and wholly with the fingers or without the aid of a dibble. The protection of shaded sash may be given for the first few days if found necessary. When the plants are supplied with leaves of such size as to be in danger of crowding each other they should be removed to the field beds. It may be stated that the plants, even in their younger stages, are not at all impatient of removal.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market is dull and inactive. There is a light demand, chiefly for stock suitable for funeral work. The quantity of flowers coming into town continues large. Very many are wasted. Especially is this true of sweet peas after a day of sunshine. Outdoor flowers are plentiful. So are roses of pretty fair quality. Asters and dahlias have made their appearance, rather short in stem as yet, but giving a pleasant variety. E. Bernheimer is receiving both, and also some flowers of the Balduin rose, rarely seen here.

Our Leading Decorator.

The name of Hugh Graham has for years been connected with many of the largest and handsomest decorations seen in this city. This firm had the rugs, tapestries, electric lights, everything, in short, that was needed to beautify a large hall in addition to the plants and flowers when a large entertainment was to be given. Hugh Graham, Sr., died last spring and his entire business, both at the city store, 104 S. Thirteenth street, and at the greenhouses at Logan, has passed into the hands of his son, Hugh Graham, Jr. The greenhouses are famous for their carnations, two pink seedlings, Mrs. Van Rensaeller and Prince Henry, having attracted special attention. Roses, Easter plants and decorative plants are also extensively grown. Most of this stock has been used by the firm's retail store, but during the last two years quite a large business has been developed in foliage plants among florists. Mr. Graham said a few days ago that the florists' business in this city was still in its infancy and that he proposed to push it with all the brains and energy he could command.

The Flower Market.

The Market has called on its stockholders for the second payment of 25 per cent, or $5 a share on its capital stock, payable on or before July 31. Accompanying this call is a report of the Market's business during the first eight months of its work. The language of this report is optimistic, but the deductions are decidedly pessimistic. Instead of there being a deficit, as the report states, the figures actually show a small profit. The expenses are given in full, while the receipts are passed over with merely a word of comment. The Market has done good work on a very small capital. With the extra amount called in there is every reason to believe that sphere of usefulness will be greatly enlarged.

Various Notes.

C. F. Knorr & Bro., at Lawndale, have just completed two new houses, 152x24 feet each. They are planted with 4,000 Maids and Brides in solid beds. These houses have iron supports and gutters, are open between, and glazed by 16x24 glass put in the wide way. This addition increases the firm's area of glass nearly 40 per cent. The place is entirely devoted to roses, there being about 8,000 Brides and Maids, and 1,000 each Kaiserin and La France.

C. A. Dunn & Co. are receiving a good assortment of summer flowers, hardy phlox, petunias, candytuft, sweet peas, etc. Their new quarters are being rapidly put into shape.

Herbert G. Tull, of the firm of Henry A. Dreer, is at Glen Cottage, near Mt. Pocono, Pa., for a short vacation.

William K. Harris runs over to his cottage at Ocean City, N. J., for a day or so each week.

D. Fuerstenberg, president of the Floral Exchange, has crossed the Atlantic with his nephew for a holiday in Europe.

Samuel J. Bunting has decided to leave the ranks of the growers and enter the brick making industry. He has made a specialty of Easter plants for several years.

Thomas Butler and wife have been at Atlantic City during Mr. Butler's vacation from his duties as salesman for H. Waterer.

Bowling.

The sixth series of games for places on the team at Milwaukee was rolled at the Tuxedo alleys last week. The feature of the evening was President Harris' score of 203 in the third game. The scores were remarkably high, the alleys being in fine condition. Five of the players appear to have dropped out of the race, and one, Walter Yates, was ill. The final games on the home alleys will complete the contest.

The next sporting event of the season is the ball game to be played on the big field in West Philadelphia, and many of our florists are expected as spectators at the contest. The "Hustlers" team is slated as follows: C. Gray, r. f.; F. Heron, c. f.; H. Crawford, l. f.; C. Harley, 1st b.; E. Upton, 2nd b.; W. Reynolds, 3rd b.; F. Warfield, s. s.; C. Colflesh, c.; W. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The condition of the market during the past week has been anything but favorable. There was a scarcity of good stock in most lines, but this was not felt very much, as there was little business going on with the exception of funeral work, which seems plentiful. We are badly in need of rain and the roses show the effects of the hot weather. The Brides are small and the Maids are off color. Kaisers are more used at present. Some good Meteors are in the market. Beauties are very soft and good quality are very hard to get around here. There are plenty of carnations for the demand and the stock is of good quality. Flora Hill, Crocker and Dorothy are among the best. Sweet peas have shortened up some and are not so good in quality as they have been. They have very short stems and are sold cheap. Gladioli and asters are becoming more plentiful and hydrangeas will soon be in, which is propitious for funeral work. The market is well supplied with greens of all kinds at the usual prices. The wholesalers report that shipping trade is at a standstill.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its June meeting last Thursday at "Billy" Winter's place in Kirkwood. The meeting was largely attended, thirty being present. Before the meeting opened the members inspected the large and well kept place of Mr. Winter, who grows exclusively carnations in solid beds. His large field of some 50,000 carnations is looking fine. The meeting opened at 3 o'clock with President Dunford in the chair and all the officers present except Vice-President Windler and Trustee Ellis. The transportation committee reported that nothing definite could be stated as to rates to Milwaukee until the next meeting.

Mr. Juengel reported that some twenty-five had signified to him their intention of attending. The picnic committee reported everything in readiness for a good time on July 23 at Preister's Park, and that invitations had been sent to all in the trade. State Vice-President Juengel reported that he had his yearly report to the S. A. F. ready.

The nomination of officers then took place. For president, J. J. Beneke was the only nominee; for vice-president, Wm. Winter and Max Herzog; for treasurer, Otto G. Koenig; for secretary, the old reliable Emil Schray; for trustees, J. W. Dunford, of Clayton; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville; Mr. Bentzen, St. Louis; Edward Guy and A. S. Halstedt, of Belleville, and W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood. Application for membership was made by George R. Frow, son of Richard Frow; F. W. Ude, Jr., H. G. Ude and Arthur Farber, of Kirkwood, and Joseph Hauser, of Webster Groves, Mo.

J. J. Beneke read an essay on "The Future Florist," which he ended in rhyme, paying especial compliment to his old friend of thirty years standing, F. J. Fillmore.

For the good of the club A. Jablonsky invited the members to hold their next meeting at his place in Wellston, Mo., and J. F. Ammann invited them to hold their September meeting at his place in Edwardsville. The invitations were accepted with thanks, so at the former place the election will take place and at the latter the installation. A great time is expected at both places.

The question "Advantages of Planting Carnations Early" brought out a lively and spirited discussion. John Steidle stated that the best results come from early planting, as also did Messrs. Ude, Winter and others, but E. W. Guy took the other view of it and said that from early planting it is true that early flowers are obtained, but thinks that it weakens them later in the season and produces more or less stem-rot and bacteria. Years ago, he said, they never thought of planting carnations before October, as the weather around St. Louis is too hot during August and September, and they never heard of stem-rot and bacteria in those days. He thinks that better results can be obtained from late planting than from early planting, especially around St. Louis. The hour was growing late and the meeting adjourned, after which we sat down to an elegant lunch, at which refreshments of all kinds were served by Mrs. Winter and her two daughters. This was much enjoyed by us all. After visiting the places of the Udes, W. J. Pilcher, Berdan and others, which we found in excellent shape, we bade our Kirkwood brother good-by with three cheers for "Billy" Winter and his family, and started for home, unanimously agreeing that the July meeting will long be remembered by all of us.

Notes.

Joseph Heintz, of Jacksonville, Ill., was a visitor last week. Mr. Heintz arrived too late to attend the club meeting at Kirkwood.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., E. W. Guy, A. S. Halstedt and A. G. Fehr, of Belleville, came over last week to attend the club.

Henry Blixen, foreman for J. F. Ammann, at Edwardsville, and Miss Emma Hartung were married last week. The church decorations were elaborate and the wedding bouquets fine, the work of J. F. Ammann, and were much admired by all.

Mr. Blixen is a member of the club and the members are with me in extending to the young couple hearty congratulations.

John Koenig, of the Koenig Floral Co., was married last week and is off to the east for a bridal trip of a month. John is well known among the craft, who wish him much luck.

Park Commisssioner Aull is in Buffalo attending the meeting of the Outdoor Art Association, the next meeting of which he expects to land for St. Louis during the World's Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Carew Sanders left last Friday for a six weeks' trip through Colorado.

George Waldbart was seen in Clayton, near the court house, by the members who were returning from the Kirkwood meeting. Some were very suspicious as to what George was looking for.

It has been reported that Dr. R. M. Bird, of the Missouri Experiment Station, at Columbia, Mo., has discovered a dry powder for spraying fruit trees and plants that has proven more deadly to all insects than any of the liquid sprays now in use. The powder is very fine and contains copper in the same form as in the liquid mixture. Dr. Bird says it is the result of so many inquiries being received at Columbia early this spring regarding the manner of destroying insects.

The Michel Plant and Bulb Co. is offering its plant at Old Orchard for sale. The improvements consist of over 12,000 feet of glass, with steam heat. The place has a frontage of 330x170 feet.

Fred Ammann reports that he has finished planting and that his place is looking better than ever before. His Perles and Beauties are the best of any. He is cutting some fair Beauties at present.

Chas. G. Fleckenstein, formerly connected with the Mound City Cut Flower Co., was in the city last week, looking as well as ever.

Bowling.

The bowling club rolled four games on Monday night. The bowling was of a high order. Charlie Kuehn especially was in good form, with an average of 191½; Beyer second with 176, and Will Adels made the highest single score, 200. The following scores were made:

Player—	1st.	2nd.	3rd.	4th.	Total.	Av.
C. A. Kuehn.....	191	194	182	199	766	192
Carl Beyer	155	177	180	192	704	176
Will Adels	152	200	193	146	691	173
J. J. Beneke.....	160	159	194	155	668	167
Theo. Miller	147	137	159	138	581	145
F. M. Ellis.....	144	159	104	140	547	137
F. Weber, Jr.....	127	108	131	110	476	119

It looks as though the team that will bowl at Milwaukee will be made up as follows: C. A. Kuehn, Carl Beyer, J. J. Beneke, E. W. Guy, Will Adels, Theo. Miller, F. C. Weber and F. M. Ellis. The best average six men of these will bowl as a team at Milwaukee.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There is very little doing at present, but there is hardly anything to do with, so that it is hard work to fill the few orders which do come in. Beauties were seldom scarcer and good ones are wholly out of the question. The cuts from young plants are beginning to come in, but of course the stems are very short and the buds small. Color, too, is lacking. Here and there one sees a pot of Brides or Maids which are of good summer quality, but most of the cut is almost unsalable. One sale is on record for Tuesday where 400 roses were sold just as received from the grower for 25 cents, and the buyer tried to back out after his offer had been accepted.

There are plenty of carnations sold at a nickel a bunch, but anything fair is held pretty firm. Sweet peas are nearly done for and are very poor. Lilies are abundant and many good ones are seen. Auratums sell best of all. Asters are seen occasionally and will be plentiful in a few days. Gladioli are abundant and good ones sell well. "Green goods" are up to all requirements.

Various Notes.

The sale for year-old Beauty plants is a notable development. It is only three or four years ago that the old plants were thrown out and burned at replanting time, but now there is a ready sale for them at $5 a hundred. John Muno sold every plant he took out of the benches, and the Reinbergs, Wietors and others sold many thousands.

Brant & Noe have 30,000 carnation plants in the field, ready for early benching.

Matt Mann is sending in some exceptionally fine gladioli and auratum lilies. They go to Budlong, and, acting on John Zeck's suggestion, the auratums are cut very close in bud, with the result that they can be handled with little loss and to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Lee Walz has not been at the Floralia since June 23.

M. Olson is again on duty at Budlong's after a short vacation.

Gus Allers is back at Wietors' after a week's vacation, spent with his family visiting at Waukegan and Milwaukee.

W. E. Lynch has returned from a two weeks' visit at his old home at Hatfield, Mass.

One of Peter Reinberg's numerous chimneys was struck by lightning last Thursday night and twelve feet knocked out of the middle of one side. Mr. Reinberg is now directing his energies toward the rebuilding of nine of his older houses, using a very narrow iron gutter, cast especially for him by George M. Garland. Benching carnations will begin next week.

George Reinberg is fortunate in having a very fair cut of Brides and Maids now on.

J. A. Budlong is awheel somewhere between here and Providence, R. I.

Wietor Bros. have a house of Lawson carnations which have been indoors all summer and report them looking fine.

J. F. Kidwell says that he still has some of Kennicott's Von Bombock peonies in good condition, after having stood a week in his ice box. It is noteworthy, because they had been in cold storage from four to five weeks.

C. M. Dickinson writes from Cedar Lake, Wis., that the bass are biting fine.

Walter Kreitling has been digging up a few prizes to enliven the Milwaukee bowling tournament. Among others he has two balls from the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co.

F. Blondeel, until recently of Blondeel & Vanburgen, has bought the greenhouses of A. Pedersen and leased the property for a term of years.

The Florists' Club held a midsummer meeting at Handel Hall last evening.

A. C. Wasson, formerly of Jamestown, N. Y., and Glenville, O., is now at Lincoln park.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago was held at the Great Northern Hotel Tuesday afternoon, with the attendance of the usual participants. Little was done beyond a general discussion of the prospects for a fall show. A committee on nominations was appointed, also on a hall for the show and another to arrange the premium list. Adjournment was to meet at the call of the secretary.

The geraniums at Washington Park are in good shape but the cannas have hardly grown at all, although fine plants when set out. The season has been one of slow growth.

Bowling.

The following is the record of the bowlers for July 14:

Player—	1st.	2d.	3d.	4th.
Lambros	145	119	162	138
F. Stollery	153	166	151	152
Winterson	188	189	144	166

MONTREAL.

Trade was good throughout last season and June was one of the best months on record, but now summer is with us and business is at the usual slow stage.

There was a well attended meeting of the club on July 7. It was proposed to do away with the membership fee of $2, but the vote was heavily against the plan.

It is reported that Hall & Robinson are to open a store on St. Catherine street, West, about September 1.

Mr. Alcock is convalescent and getting about slowly.

The craft has lost a valued friend in the death of James Cooper, a patron of horticulture.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club held its sixteenth annual picnic at St. Rose, June 10. It was beautiful weather and the affair was a great success. There was a fine array of prizes for the winners in the games, mostly collected by W. Hazel, who won the silver trophy in the quoits match. Frank McKenna won the open race. H. Dupuis, John and Willie Allen won the boys' races, Estelle Dupuis and G. Guerin the girls' contests. Mabel Robinson and Miss Guerin won the young ladies' races and Mrs. Harry Eddy that for members' wives. Mr. Eddy was the swiftest member among 30 and W. Hazel the best sprinter over 40. Frank McKenna was also the speediest young man. Mrs. Pidduck was the winner of the elder members' wives. Harry Eddy won 4' hop, step and jump and W. Whitney was the best walker among the committee-men.

ALEXANDRIA, IND.—George Rentschler has sold the Alexandria Greenhouses to Chas. Nye, of Indianapolis.

DULUTH, MINN.—W. W. Seekins has removed his stock from Panton & White's to 116 West Superior street, where he has a neat store all to himself. His old range of greenhouses is being dismantled and will be replaced by five new houses covering a total of 12,000 square feet of space.

NEW YORK.

State of Trade.

"The melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year." It is hard to remember that the conditions a twelve-month ago were the same as now, the dullness universal and the general business on the street the worst ever known. But it was so and it will be so again. It seems as though trade never was so bad as now, however, and it may safely be said that it was never worse. Optimistic faces are few and far between. Wholesalers and retailers alike have yielded to the inevitable and sails are trimmed and decks cleared for action in the early fall. Meantime many have departed for their summer outing at the seashore and the mountains and loneliness prevails in the busy marts bounded by Twenty-sixth and Thirtieth streets. The supply of outdoor flowers increases daily. The demand for smilax and asparagus has ceased. Sweet peas are here by the million. Imagine 100 bunches selling for a quarter! Asters are here and selling fairly well. No demand for lily of the valley. Carnations are abundant, far in excess of requirements, and prices last week fell to most discouraging figures. Many express a belief that there will be a change for the better before the end of the week. Meanwhile, rents continue, expenses are high, and it would be money in the pockets of the wholesalers if the doors could be closed and a holiday indulged in until after the convention.

Convention Matters.

Hard to realize this great annual reunion is only a month away, and yet, through the alertness of Pollworth, Holton and a host of Milwaukee hustlers, everything is almost in readiness for the great gathering, which the Cream City expects to be the largest the society has ever known. There is good ground for these anticipations. The desires of the majority of the members of the society to visit this wonderful city extend back to that memorable hour of angelic eloquence when the unexpected happened and the counting of votes took us to the pretty little town amid the Carolina hills. After all, "whatever is, is best," and the pleasure of the present year will be all the greater for the waiting. More and more yearly are making the convention week a holiday trip, and this year by combining with their Milwaukee visit a trip through the Great Lakes and a week in and around Chicago and St. Louis, a delightful inspiration and memory for a year can be gathered and stored away to make the coming twelve months the happiest and most prosperous of your life. The arrangements for the trip of the eastern host are about complete and the attendance promises to be larger than anticipated. The West Shore expects to fill two Pullmans from New York alone, thus insuring a direct journey without change of cars, and every comfort and convenience known to modern travel.

Mr. Pollworth's suggestion as to an evening of song and merriment by members of the society after the president's reception meets with general approbation. Nothing could create a greater interest nor serve to foster more rapidly the friendships and harmony that should prevail. Everybody wants to hear the Chicago quartette and Miss Fulmer sing, and many others of the well known vocalists and musicians that the society claims as its own. No one will leave the hall while Warren Ewell, Robert Craig and J. D. Carmody give their orations, and if Edgar Sanders will sing "The Little Brown Jug" and Edwin Lonsdale "The Duke of York" and Brother Bencke will give some of his far famed recitations, the programme will be complete.

Various Notes.

The Bermuda and European travel continues. There has never been a year when so many of the florists from this section have gone abroad. Two of the leading florists of the city are enthusiastic yachtsmen and are drinking in health and happiness with the ocean breezes and making their handsome yachts their summer home. James Weir, of Brooklyn, commodore of the Shelter Island Yacht Club and formerly vice-commodore of the Atlantic Yacht Club, is on his boat, the "Uncas," with his family at Shelter Island. And Alex. McConnell lives in his beautiful yacht, the "Eleanor," which is anchored at City Island harbor. This handsome boat was built by Inspector Williams and is as complete and comfortable as money could make it. Mr. McConnell is a member of the New Rochelle Yacht Club and a trip with him on the Sound is not soon forgotten. His paper to be read at the convention in Milwaukee on "Modern Methods in Floral Decoration" will be valuable to the host of the present generation of florists who attend. It will be based on over thirty years of practical experience.

Lecakes & Co. have moved into their new store on West Twenty-ninth street, formerly occupied by Hicks & Crawbuck, where they will have ample room for their increasing business. They still retain the basement on West Twenty-eighth street, where they have been so long, and maintain their stands in the Coogan building and at the Thirty-fourth street market. They do an immense business in galax, ferns and leucothoe sprays.

The discussion relative to the plant and flower market will be considered at the City Hall on Wednesday of this week and a large number of interested gardeners and plantmen are expected to be present.

Recent visitors were W. W. Lindsay, of Birmingham, Ala., and W. Walker and family, of Louisville, Ky.

The extremely hot wave of last week, lasting for three days, developed a temperature of over 100 degrees and caused many deaths and hundreds of prostrations. Cooler weather arrived on Sunday and seasonable rains are gladdening the hearts of the gardeners, for whom the season has been a strenuous one to date.

C. W. Ward has been ill for several days but is now convalescing.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PITTSBURG.

The past few days of very warm weather have hurt the quality of stock. Roses are on the wane. Carnations are still good. Lilies are more plentiful and sell well. Beauties are the best flowers obtainable. The supply of outdoor gladioli is increasing. There is an oversupply of smilax, rather unusual for us, as smilax was very scarce all last season.

The Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club expects to send a large delegation to the S. A. F. convention at Milwaukee. The committee of arrangements is E. C. Ludwig and E. C. Reineman. A rate of $17.40 for the round trip has been secured, tickets good returning August 24.

Wm. Lauch is shipping the Cut Flower Co. quantities of Scott carnations of quality hard to beat.

H. P. Joslin was first in the market with outdoor gladioli.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

B. E. GAGE, of the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, is at Colorado Springs for a couple of weeks.

E. F. STEVENS, of Crete, will discuss "Orchard Interests in the Platte Valley" before the Nebraska State Horticultural Society July 28.

It was four years ago that J. B. Power left the printing office and established the Rose Lake Nurseries, three miles from Nacogdoches, Texas. He has sixty acres in fruit and forty acres in nursery stock, with a fine business.

THEODORE WIRTH, of the Hartford parks, says he has found red fescue (Festuca rubra), a good grass for shady situations or in sandy soil. The United States Department of Agriculture has recommended Festuca heterophylla.

THE H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Company, St. Louis, has been incorporated with $50,000, divided into 500 shares, of which Henry J. Weber holds 378. The rest are divided between William A., Walter T., Anna M., Emil C. and George A. Weber.

J. A. PETTIGREW, of the Boston park system, says he wants to speak a word for the ginkgo. It is of rapid growth and seems to have no fungus or insect enemies. It requires a rich, deep or well loosened soil, but should be very valuable as a street tree as far north as the great lakes.

M. OWEN, of London, Ont., has applied for a patent in Canada and other countries on a process of "administering to the growing tree certain ingredients which promote a vigorous and healthy growth and protect against borers, moths, caterpillars, San Jose scale, black-knot, yellows, leaf curl and other insect, parasite and fungous enemies to trees." If it does half of it, it ought to be a good thing.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Trade is much the same as reported last week. There is a little doing all of the time, but the prices obtained from these sales are so low that the sum total of each day's business is small. There is also a let up in the supply of stock. Good roses are scarce and many more could be disposed of. By good I mean good for this time of the year. The majority of the stock is short-stemmed and very poor. Beauties are improving in quality and there is quite a demand for them. Meteors and Liberties are very scarce.

There is a steady demand for white carnations. Some days there are not enough to go around. Good pink ones, too, find a ready market. Reds are now almost used up by the hot weather. Some Prosperity, which now come almost pure white, are first-class and bring the top market price.

The change in the weather has helped out the sweet peas a great deal. The usual supply of white flowers are coming in goodly quantities with fair demand.

Various Notes.

Gus Adrian had a narrow escape from losing his entire plant by fire. The blaze originated in the boiler house, which was totally destroyed, and the ends of the greenhouses nearest the sheds were burned. Several valuable decorating plants were scorched, besides other stock. There was no insurance.

W. Rodgers and H. D. Edwards are back from their vacations and each reports having had a fine time.

David Knott has been appointed florist in the city greenhouses.

Club Meeting.

The first summer meeting of the club was held July 9 at the residence of D. Rusconi. More than 100 people were present and, notwithstanding the heat, they all expressed themselves as having had a great time. The menu was very elaborate and included many delicacies unknown to the visitors, besides wine imported from Italy. George Walker and Ben George, who are decided epicures, ate a majority of the lobsters in sight; that is, the cooked ones. Tom Hardesty, of Kentucky farm life fame, did his full share of devastation to the spread, but was not visibly affected in size. R. A. Kelly and Frank Huntsman arrived in time to fatten their batting averages in the eating lines. William Rodgers was on deck and lived up to his reputation. E. G. Gillett arrived very late, but there was still enough to satisfy his raving appetite. Mr. Rusconi was very busy seeing that everybody got his share of the good things and was very much at home as the host.

After the feast a meeting of the society was held. A committee consisting of Wm. Murphy, E. G. Gillett, Gus Adrian, Ben George and Geo. Loeber, was appointed to revise the constitution. The outing committee reported everything in readiness and prospects point toward a very good time on that day. It's only a question of the florists turning out. July 23 is the date. After the meeting dancing was in order.

C. J. OHMER.

MCDONALD, PA.—Max Schreiber is building a carnation house 23x100.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Thomas Ford, one of the most extensive market gardeners here, died suddenly July 6 of Bright's disease. He was 62 years of age.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Keudell, Cleveland, O. The 22d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

HARRISII are now arriving at New York.

ROGERS BROS. will erect another elevator for seeds at Alpena, Mich.

VISITED PHILADELPHIA. — L. H. Archias, of the Archias Seed Co., Sedalia, Mo.

THE Evans Seed Co., of West Branch, Mich., was incorporated July 13, capital stock $3,000.

THE beets in France are in a bad way and there is a practical certainty of still higher prices.

JOHN GARDINER, a wealthy Philadelphian who was in the seed trade for eight years prior to 1896, is dead.

MR. COOK, long with Wm. Henry Maule, Philadelphia, has severed his connection with that well known house.

THERE is a scarcity of the Early Pearl onion set. This is a variety in much demand at the south for early planting.

FRANK IMBACH, Newport News, Va., reports celery and parsley doing well; he expects a good crop, both quality and quantity.

THE seed and grain warehouse of D. S. Gay, Winchester, Ky., burned recently, with a large stock of grass seed. Loss about $100,000, insurance $75,000.

THE Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, just issued, contains, in Secretary Wilson's report, the same illusive promise of an improvement in the plan of seed distribution.

MANY seedsmen doing retail business are commencing catalogue work for the season of 1904, considerably earlier than usual. Several novelties of unusual merit will be introduced the coming season.

PHILADELPHIA.—There was quite a free demand for seed potatoes during the past two weeks, prices ranging from $2 to $2.25 per bushel for sound stock, with not near enough seed to meet the demand.

A CAREFUL canvass of all the onion set sections shows the crop to be much shorter than at first anticipated. The number of bushels that will be handled is likely to fall much below the lowest estimate so far named by any of the experts.

CHICAGO.—The Leonard Seed Co. reports: Pea crops in Wisconsin considerably shortened by adverse early conditions. Weather at present favorable and the harvest of Extra Earlies, Alaskas and the dwarf early wrinkled sorts near at hand. In northern Michigan close inspection shows that there will be a shortage on all the varieties. On the whole the outlook is middling to fair. Bean crops pushing along with the usual drawbacks noted; some fields good, some bad, some fair. In general the conditions are about up to the average for this time of year. Radish, tomato, squash and cucumber, nothing extra. Failure to get a good stand has cut down the cucumber acreage. The cold weather has kept tomato backward; radish only middling; squash poor.

A SEED dealer of Hamburg, Germany, writes C. A. King & Co.: "Here in Europe the red clover starts well, weather is fine, therefore being a surplus of food, farmers let stand for seed quite a quantity more than in the past ten years."

MUCH of the 1903 crop of Delaware grown crimson clover was injured by wet weather and many of the samples shown are quite dark in color. Under free offerings of French grown seed prices remain low, much too low to encourage its production for seed in this country.

VISITED CHICAGO:—J. B. Kidd, representing Cox Seed Co., San Francisco; Frank T. Emmerson, Waterloo, Neb.; Oscar H. Will, Bismarck, N. D.; Mr. McFall, of McFall Pharmacy, Danville, Va.; M. H. Ross, formerly in the seed department of Adolphus Wysong, Lebanon, Ind.

THE PEA CROP.

The John H. Allan Seed Co. sends out the following under date of Sheboygan, Wis., July 13:

The past two weeks have been favorable to the growth of the pea crop in most places in Ontario and northern Wisconsin; heavy showers in most localities followed by warm weather. Further examination of fields in Wisconsin show greater damage from frost than expected, and extending nearly over the whole of northern Wisconsin with great damage to all the earlier fields that were in bud or blossom at that time. Early dwarf peas, Excelsiors and Wonders, seem to have been specially subject to injury and the shortage on these will be heavy, and while frost has not injured our crops in Canada, dwarf peas are unusually short there because of early drought and because of short straw much will be wasted in harvest, and the yield light. Gradus seems to have suffered greatly from the cold spring, as fields sown with seed of perfect germination stand very thin and the yield of this pea will be light. Medium and late peas generally promise well, also Alaskas.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Last week witnessed the height, or the depth, of dullness for this season, the call for cut flowers being practically limited to those for funeral occasions, pretty much all social functions being at an end. The supply grows more limited, as houses are being emptied of roses, and carnations which fluctuate daily from paucity to over-abundance are, thanks to the tropical weather, of very poor quality. Outdoor stuff has been in excess of calls until today (July 13), when there was none in evidence.

Yesterday there was a storm of rain and wind of great violence, with the usual result that outside flowers were for a time put an end to. Cochet roses, sweet peas and asters were destroyed in great quantities. The fury of the storm was greatest in the city, where houses were unroofed by the hundreds. In the environs the losses, except of growing crops, do not, so far as reported, seem to be great. There was some hail, but it was limited to narrow localities. Today there

OMAHA.

The florists have settled down to their summer business. All of the local growers and retailers report a satisfactory trade. The heat last week affected the roses and carnations, but as rain and colder weather have set in, the stock is coming in better shape.

CARNATION SOCIETY.

In addition to the premiums offered in the preliminary list, J. B. Valentine, of the Park Floral Co., Denver, Col., offers $25 in cash for the best twelve blooms of one variety of an undisseminated seedling, shown by the originator. All varieties are excluded that are shown in classes requiring a larger number than twelve blooms, but competition for this prize does not exclude the exhibitor from showing the same variety in Class H, or any similar class that may hereafter be added requiring but twelve blooms or less of a variety to be shown.

Parties having promising seedlings with a limited number of plants will do well to note this premium and if not members of the society write the secretary asking that their names be put down for the regular premium list after January 1, so as to get the needed information for making entries, etc.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

"A BRIGHT SPOT."

Are you coming to the convention? You have but a few weeks to deliberate on this important question, but you should not lose a moment's time hesitating about this great event.

It is an assured fact that every able-bodied florist is coming and the florists' business will be at a standstill all over the country, except at Milwaukee, where there will be something doing. You cannot afford to miss this opportunity of meeting your brethren in the trade, exchanging notes and renewing acquaintances. The east is coming strong and New York is already talking carload lots, both in exhibits and human freight. Now let the west and south respond from each and every hamlet and we will have one of the greatest gatherings of florists in the history of the society.

The entries in the trade exhibit are exceptionally large and our spacious convention hall will be filled with the latest novelties in our line. This feature alone is worth coming miles to see. The various committees of the Milwaukee Florists' Club are perfecting plans for the comfort of every visitor. The entertainment committee is completing arrangements which will take the cares off your business at least for the time being. The ladies' day committee will look after the welfare of the ladies in a way that will please them. The bowling committee promises a cool temperature but a hot time. The Olympia alleys, where the bowlers will hold sway, are perfection. There are twelve alleys, all under one roof, with plenty of light and fresh air and sufficient room to accommodate a large crowd of spectators. There will be such a large entry that there will be no chance to lose, so don't fail to enter a team. The more the merrier.

The hotels of Milwaukee are many in number, both on the American and European plans. The fact of the hotel capacity of our city being so great and the solid comfort offered by these host-leries so excellent will be a potent factor in giving to our city a reputation as an ideal place for holding the convention. If you wish to reserve accommodations in advance write H. V. Hunkel, chairman hotel committee, 454 Milwaukee street, or to the hotel direct.

C. C. P.

MILWAUKEE COMMITTEES.

There is a general committee, consisting of the officers of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, who will have general charge of the entire entertainment to be given to the visitors at the coming convention of the S. A. F. The committee will make all final arrangements and decide the best entertainment possible for the money that can be secured. The committee consists of C. C. Pollworth, president; H. V. Hunkel, secretary; J. Dunlop, vice-president, and C. B. Whitnall, treasurer.

A ladies' day committee will make all necessary arrangements for the proper entertainment of the ladies. This committee consists of F. P. Dilger, chairman, J. Heitman, R. Zepnick and Jos. Pollworth.

A bowling committee will have entire charge of the entertainment at the bowling contest, the committee consisting of F. H. Holton, chairman, A. Klokner, W. A. Kennedy, also all members on the bowling team.

A shooting committee will have charge of the arrangements for the shooting contests. The committee consists of Fred Schmeling, chairman, Wm. Edlefsen.

The president's reception committee consists of C. C. Pollworth, chairman,

C. B. Whitnall, Wm. Currie, B. Gregory and H. V. Hunkel.

A reception committee, which will see to it that the visitors are received in the proper manner, consists of Wm. Currie, chairman, Wm. Ellis, J. Arnold, R. Preuss, Nic Zweifel, B. Gregory, P. KANSAS CITY.

Hot weather is here in earnest and business is sadly wilted. Most of the florists are busy, however, remodeling houses and preparing for their winter crops. Mrs. Edgar and Messrs. Roschneider and Barbe have closed their stores for the summer. Carnations and roses are not very plentiful and the quality nothing extra, even for summer stock. Sweet peas are abundant and good in all but price, ranging from 15 to 20 cents per hundred.

Midsummer dullness prevails. There isn't an oasis in the desert. The past week was the worst of the season; it seems impossible that conditions could be more deplorable. Shipments of bloom have been enormous, quality up to the average, but the demand is dead and the waste is sad to contemplate.

Trade is quiet and there is plenty of stock. Carnations are holding up well in quality in spite of the hot weather, but roses run somewhat small. There is quite a variety of outdoor flowers, but little demand for them.

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—James Goodhue is remodeling his place and about doubling his glass area.

WATERTOWN, WIS.—Loeffler Bros. have dissolved partnership, Ferdinand Loeffler continuing at the old stand while Albert Loeffler starts in for himself, with two houses 22x100 at 1118 Center street. Each will grow violets for the wholesale market.

OSHKOSH, WIS.—Mrs. Mary Ann Miles, widow of the late Isaac Miles, died June 26. She was born April 9, 1825, in Hodson, Wiltshire, England. In 1853 she came to the United States and settled in Oshkosh, where she made her home almost continuously until her death. Her husband was for a great many years a prominent florist and after his death, about a year ago, the family continued the business. Those surviving Mrs. Miles are five daughters and one son.

CAMDEN, N. J.—The greenhouse business conducted for the past thirty years by Theodore Wiles will be continued by his son-in-law, Spencer Cummings, Mr. Wiles having retired.

FREMONT, NEB.—C. H. Green has received from Moninger the material for two carnation houses, each 15x120, high gutters with walk under same. He will also put up a violet house this fall, 120 feet long. Mr. Green expects to put up a nice exhibit for the State Fair this fall. Carnation stock in the field is coming along nicely, as is everything else. They will finish benching roses in the next ten days.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Cooler weather is the rule in San Francisco for the past week and the usual brisk westerly winds are with us again. Flowers are plentiful enough, as business is extremely quiet. Roses are about as poor as I have ever seen them. The several weeks of exceedingly hot and dry weather we have recently passed through have left their mark on greenhouse flowers in general and roses in particular. They are all sunburned more or less, and we will have to have a new crop before we see anything up to size or color. I saw some very fine American Beauties today, however. They were from John Young's place in Berkeley. He seems to be particularly fortunate with this variety. Carnations are plentiful and cheap, but as a rule the stems are weak and the flowers off color. Sievers & Boland have the finest show I have seen recently of this popular flower and most of their stock is really good considering the off season. I paid a visit to their greenhouses recently and found everything in excellent shape. Mr. Hooper, the foreman, certainly knows a thing or two about carnation growing. Ferrari Brothers are cutting some good Testout and Kaiser-in roses, and with a few weeks of cooler weather the quality of roses generally will materially advance. Lilium longiflorum is to be had in good quantity and lily of the valley is in fair supply.

Notes.

A large and enthusiastic monthly meeting was held on July 10 by the California State Floral Society. Miss Mary Elizabeth Parsons addressed the members. Quite an exhibit of flowers was arranged.

Howard Prentice, the floral artist, of Oakland, is building a large greenhouse on his property in Alameda.

Chas. Olaine, the landscape gardener of Palo Alto, paid a visit to town this week. He says the prospects are good for plenty of planting in his locality during the coming season. G.

DENVER, COLO.

Though we had a very cool and backward spring, yet the demand for plants was much greater than last year; the florists having sold out pretty nearly everything in the plant line.

In the line of cut flowers trade held up remarkably well all through June, there being a great many weddings, though most of them did not call for very large amounts. Decoration day business far surpassed any previous season.

The Denver Floral Club has taken a recess until October 9, when they expect to start in with renewed vigor and are planning some very entertaining meetings.

I don't hear of any exhibition for Denver this fall, but undoubtedly some of the prominent florists will make exhibits at the State Fair, which is held at Pueblo. They offer some handsome premiums, it is understood.

Adam Balmer has left for Seattle.

Ernest Flohr is with Crump, of Colorado Springs.

Lyle Waterbury has returned from Georgia, where he spent the winter.

WASHINGTON.

Business in general seems to be very quiet and practically no stock to do business with. It seems that all are refilling the benches at the same time, making the supply very short. The carnations in the field are finer than they have been for several years. The season has been very favorable for them. Quite a few of the growers are going in for early planting.

From present indications Washington will be fairly represented at the S. A. F. convention at Milwaukee. All arrangements will be completed at our next club meeting. Every member is urgently requested to notify the secretary if he is going. On account of the warm evenings a very few of the bowlers showed up. Below are last week's scores:

Players—	1st.	2nd.	3rd.	Total.
George Shaffer	180	214	154	548
Wm. H. Ernest	168	195	175	538
Geo. H. Cooke	151	161	185	497

F. H. KRAMER.

BENSENVILLE, ILL.—W. F. Duntzman is busy housing his carnations. His stock is in fine shape and he hopes to have the benching completed by July 20.

TORONTO.

If we have had it cool this spring we are now making up for it. Hot weather has had its effect on cut flowers generally. Outdoor stock is coming in with a rush and indoor stuff is going off with equal celerity. Especially notable are the great quantities of sweet peas which have been on the market during the last few days. The retail men tell us that the hot weather has killed the sale of cut flowers and that they are losing more than they are selling. Even our great home-coming festival did not have the effect of pushing business very much. One of the features of the event was a floral parade in connection with the open air horse show. One of the most elaborately decorated vehicles was that put up by W. Jay & Son, in which great quantities of American Beauties and longiflorum lilies were used. J. S. Simmons & Sons captured third prize for delivery wagon turnout.

H. G. Dilleuth, manager of Dunlop's store, has gone back to the haunts of his childhood, near Pittsburgh, for vacation.

J. H. Dunlop has returned home after a two weeks' trip to New York and the vicinity.

The Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association is making preparations for entertaining their brethren when the Canadian Horticultural Association meets here. We are certain that everything that can be done will be done, so far as Toronto is concerned, to make this the greatest gathering of the Canadian craft. In fact, it is hinted that it should be as big a meeting of florists as was held here some years ago when the S. A. F. met in Toronto. D. J.

THE HEUCHERAS.

Heuchera sanguinea is known as one of the easiest plants to accommodate itself to the hardy border and is a most valuable florist's flower, as it may be used in many ways when cut. In this connection the following from the Gardeners' Chronicle will be of interest:

The complete revolution in floral fashions that has been experienced during the last few years has driven many growers to the verge of despair, as after years of patient labor, expended in the production of massive flowers and striking effects, fickle fashion has suddenly led the public to regard them as vulgar; and where huge flowers were in demand five years ago, the æsthetic taste that holds the sway today decrees that the subjects must be light and graceful. There are, of course, many plants that come up to the desired standard of perfection at once, but too many who have to supply a heavy demand for cut flowers for dinner tables, etc., overlook the heucheras. Being perfectly easy to manage, there need be no fear of burdening oneself with extra work, as they thrive in the front of any ordinary herbaceous border; and if protected from the encroachments of their neighbors, and given a little liquid manure when throwing up their flowers, they will never fail to please. One of the best for general purposes is Heuchera sanguinea splendens, a brilliant coral-scarlet variety of the common type. Other good varieties of sanguinea are grandiflora, a very useful form, with flowers of a crimson-scarlet, and somewhat larger than those of the other varieties; alba, a pure white form; and rosea, a variety with flowers of a soft rose color. Heuchera macrantha has cream flowers borne on red stems, and is thus very effective when cut and mixed with other varieties. H. erubescens is an exceedingly graceful form, with white flowers pleasingly flushed with pink. H. macrophylla and H. Richardsoni are grown chiefly for their foliage; their ruddy leaves being very effective under artificial light. By crossing sanguinea with Richardsoni, a hybrid has been obtained that is useful for both flower and foliage; it is named brizoides. The above are all quite hardy, and increase rapidly; they are also very effective as pot plants.

PIPING.

I want to heat two houses with one boiler, using 1-inch and 2-inch pipe. How many of each will it take? The houses are 16x70 and 12x80, both under ground to the eaves, general stock in the former, carnations and lettuce in the latter. The temperature will have to be about 45 at night. J. F. S.

For the heating of the two houses described, if by steam, one 2-inch overhead flow and six lines of 1-inch returns will be required for the general purpose house and one 1½-inch flow and four 1-inch returns for the carnation and lettuce house. If water heat be used ten lines of 2-inch pipes will be necessary in the one house and eight lines in the other one. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

HEATING FIVE HOUSES.

Will you kindly tell me which system, steam or hot water, is the better to heat five greenhouses 15x55 feet, used for bedding stock? Will a return tubular boiler 10 feet long and 42 inches wide heat these houses? The houses run from southeast to northwest. How many runs of pipe will be needed? J. C. F.

For the heating of five greenhouses each 15x55 feet I would certainly advise low pressure steam as the best medium. The boiler mentioned will have capacity to heat these houses, with a surplus for doing more than as many again. The approximate arrangement of pipes within the houses would be one 2-inch overhead flow pipe with six lines of 1-inch pipes for returns. The definite arrangement could better be stated if a sketch of the houses showing grades of floor and arrangement of benches and paths had accompanied the inquiry.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

DES MOINES, IA.—By the combined efforts of the downtown florists in Des Moines, the city ordinance against the use of sidewalks and alleys by fakirs, has been enforced. This spring has been our first serious experience with this kind of metropolitan airs.

EXCELSIOR, MINN.—Mrs. N. S. Sawyer is one woman who has developed her own private flower garden into a commercial enterprise. Without a greenhouse she is able to propagate a large number of perennials which find a ready sale, as there is no florist in the town. For the past three years the business has steadily developed until she now has about an acre of ground under cultivation. Mr. Sawyer is traveling salesman for a local nursery.

Zirngiebel GIANT PANSIES

Market and Fancy Strains are the finest grade this season that we ever sent out. when large size and colors are wanted.

As growers, we know every strain of note in cultivation and we can recommend our pansies as unequalled.

New crop seed ready now in trade packages of either strain, at $1.00 each.

Denys Zirngiebel

NEEDHAM, MASS.

CLEVELAND.

The market report must of necessity be very small for the past week, as business has certainly reached the low water mark. Stock is poor and very little of it coming in, which saves lots of labor in carting it out to the dump. The past week has been very hot, and roses and carnations show the effects of it. Peas still continue altogether too plentiful.

We noticed an enterprising move on the part of the retail firm of Westman & Getz, located at 502 Euclid avenue. Their large show window was decorated with kodaks, cameras and photographers' supplies, which ought to prove a profitable side line for the dull season, as taking snap-shots seems to be a fad in Cleveland at present.

Mr. Brown, foreman for the F. R. Williams Co., is away on his vacation and expects to visit Pittsburg, Philadelphia and New York City before his return.

The Ehrbar Floral Co., 716 Lorain street, is out with a fine new horse and wagon for its cut flower delivery. It is a stunning outfit and will attract attention everywhere. E.

CROMWELL, CONN.

The past month has seen a great many changes, which is usually the case at this season of the year. The chrysanthemums have been nearly all benched and a majority of the roses have been planted. With us one house of carnations was benched the first of May and is now promising excellent returns. By early planting good flowers will be had early in the fall. Two more houses were benched the first week in July and the others will follow as soon as they can be conveniently handled. This is earlier than in former years, but conditions are different this year and warrant earlier benching. Two very fine houses of Adiantum Farleyense are bidding fair to make fine plants by fall and a large stock of small ferns is being potted off. The repairing of the entire place is under way and proves to be a big job. The rule this year is that each man shall paint his own houses.

A. N. Pierson, who, accompanied by Mrs. Pierson, has been in California for the past two months, returned recently, and the roses of Oregon he reports to be the most interesting thing that he saw from the florists' standpoint. E. G. Hill, who was in Oregon about the same time, has also made very favorable mention of them. W. R. PIERSON.

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

PIPING A RANGE.

Having five houses 115 feet long, 10 feet to ridge and seven feet to gutter, two houses 12 feet wide, two houses 10 feet wide, one house eight feet, glass three feet high from gutter down, no partitions in these houses, I would like to hang pipes, on each side of the posts under gutters. How many 3½ or 4-inch pipes would it require for carnations? Also have a palm house running north and south, across said five houses, it being 16 feet wide, 16 feet to ridge, 10 feet to gutters. West side gutter is connected on top of ridges of the five houses; five feet glass, under east gutter. How many feet of 4-inch pipe would it take to heat this palm house?
I. W. G.

For heating the several houses described by I. W. G. by hot water circulation through 3½-inch pipes (four inches outside diameter) the following quantities will be necessary: In each of the twelve-foot houses five lines of pipe; in each of the ten-foot houses four lines, and in the eight-foot house eight lines. For the effective heating of the palm house one foot of pipes will be required for each two and one-half feet of glass exposure.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

PLANS FOR RANGE.

I have a house 16x75 and parallel to it, but two feet distant, two houses 18x57 feet without partition walls. Along the west end of the range is a palm house 13x54. The boiler pit is in the eastern end of the long house. The long house is 10 feet to the ridge with side walls 5½ feet high. The attached houses are 12½ feet to ridge, side walls 6½ feet high, with 30 inches of glass. In each house 55 degrees is needed when the temperature outside is sometimes 10 to 14 degrees below zero. With hot water, how many 2-inch pipes will be needed, and how would you arrange them?
A. J. B.

The palm house should have at least twelve lines of 2-inch pipes connected direct to the boiler by means of a 2½-inch main through the western greenhouse. The western greenhouse will need eleven lines of 2-inch pipes and the two connected houses together will require twenty-six lines. The mains for the two connected houses will necessarily cross the outside space between the connected houses and the western house.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

DEAR SIR:—The boiler we purchased from you last fall I believe was the best investment we ever made. It does the work of two good sized steam boilers. Our coal dealer here says we used one twenty-five ton car-load of coal less this winter than usual, which is quite an item at the advanced price of coal during the winter. And we are heating more space than usual. We used all kinds of coal, and I believe if we could have had a good grade of coal all winter we would have burned still less. I must say we are well pleased.

Wishing you the best of success, I remain,

Yours truly,

The Pierson Fern

There is nothing that you can plant that will increase in value so rapidly as this fern. The demand has been so great, and our advance sales so large, that we have not offered it recently, having only just completed filling advance orders. We have a nice lot of young stock coming on, and can fill all orders received from this date promptly on receipt. Even at the present high price it has been impossible to keep up with the demand, and there is sure to be a tremendous demand for it another season when it can be offered at lower prices. Now is the time to invest in it and get the benefit of the tremendous demand and good prices which are sure to prevail another season. The Boston Fern, although it has been cultivated many years, is still scarce. As Nephrolepis Piersoni will sell better and be in greater demand even than the Boston Fern, we predict a scarcity of Nephrolepis Piersoni for several years to come and at big prices. Owing to the great and continued demand, we do not expect to be more than able to meet the demand this spring, so that customers can rest assured that there will be no change in price this season.

We offer strong young plants, 2½-in. pots, at $9.00 per doz.; 50 plants at 60c each; 100 plants at 50c each; 500 plants at 45c each; 1000 plants at 40c each.

Extra large plants, 6-in. pots, $27.00 per doz.; 50 plants at $1.80 each; 100 plants at $1.50 each. These large plants will make fine stock for growing on into large specimens for fall trade, and they are also very nice for immediate sales.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The Aster Beetle.

One of the seasonable visitors of the midsummer time is the aster bug—properly, of course, beetle—but the word bug is sort of a generic name for every insect or worm that attacks the vegetable kingdom. And further, if you have a strong and active idea on any subject your friends say “You have a bug,” and if the ideas are numerous and somewhat mixed you are then “bug house,” so it's quite a word. But to the point, or rather the bug. A subscriber, H. A. C., asks “What remedy is there for destroying blister beetle, the black bug that destroys asters, etc., that can be used with no danger?” I must confess not to know the aster beetle by the prefix of blister. We have had some trouble with the beetle in former years, but this season there is a full crop and it is doing much damage, particularly on Semple's and Vick's Branching varieties. They seem to go for them in preference to Boston Market and Victoria, because they are large stemmed, meaty and juicy.

It will do no harm to repeat what all florists should know, yet a few don't, that there are chewing insects and sucking ditto, and the means to destroy each are entirely different. Any beetle or worm that chews the surface of the leaf can be easily destroyed by poison. Paris green, London purple, black death, hellebore, slug shot and perhaps many other mixtures will kill the chewers. The suckers, so called, put their beaks through the surface of the leaf and suck out the juices of the plant, as do the aphid and red spider. Poison has no effect on them, because they don't swallow any of it. Now, this aster beetle with which we have the trouble just now, seems to be half way between the two. I am open and glad to receive some expert advice relative to his extinction. Just let me say that the beetle we have is about the size of a small house fly. He flies readily when disturbed and has a little yellow spot on each wing and under a magnifying glass is most beautifully marked. Not being an entomologist, I cannot describe him further, but like the present comet, he has two tails and several delicate nose pieces and delicate hair-like appendages, doubtless most useful when diving into the stem of the aster. His attack is mostly on the leading young growth at the axil of the leaf, where he just files a hole and then bores into the stem. That's why I say that this beetle cannot be classed strictly as either a chewer or a sucker.

Within a few days we have smothered some aster plants with tobacco dust with no effect at all. Then we tried Paris green and no more beetles have been seen on the plants. We syringed and now we will give all the plants a spraying with Paris green. The principal thing to observe is to thoroughly wet the plants and not to use the solution too strong. A good sized teaspoonful of the poison to three gallons of water is strong enough. If you use it too strong you can easily burn the aster leaves. Once more, let's hear from some large aster grower as to his method of killing this beautiful little pest.

Some Useful Plants.

Just a word about a simple little plant or two. The sweet alyssum, the double, of course, comes very useful in designs, and it is a plant that you can grow on the edge of a carnation bench without any, or very slight, detriment to the carnations. If you have any old plants in the house now, put in some cuttings in a shady, cool house and keep them well watered and you will have young plants to put on the bench by the end of August.

Don't forget some time while the weather is warm to put in cuttings of some of the more desirable kinds of alternantheras. A flat three inches deep and of convenient size, say 24x12 inches, filled with light, sandy soil, will hold a lot of them. In a shady place in warm weather they root like chickweed, and the sooner you get them in, the stronger plants they will be before cold weather comes and the better they will endure a low temperature and rough usage during winter. Leave them in the flats until next spring.

It is time to sow pansy seed for those who grow large quantities and don't protect them by sash during winter, and I must confess that the earliest and finest pansies I saw this spring, about half an acre of them, had no protection from the day the seed was sown, at the end of

and you will have fine, stout plants. It takes a little longer, but it is more economical of seed to sow thinly in drills, the drills two inches apart. I have nothing to say about the many fine strains advertised, but be sure to have plenty of purple and blue and yellow, as people ask for these in separate colors for filling vases and beds.

Poinsettias.

Keep on rooting poinsettias. The plants put in now and for the next month are just as useful as those rooted earlier. In fact, cuttings put in the last of August and early September are just the thing for pans, and it's all pans that the people want now as a Christmas plant. In rooting these, as with chrysanthemum cuttings at this season, they must be soaked twice a day in the sand if the weather is bright, and have no sun on them. With shade and water they must be kept from wilting, and there is no trouble in rooting them. If you grow poinsettias just for cutting, by all means plant them out in six inches or more of soil, either on a bench or in the ground. As I have often remarked, it's not always the low temperature that takes the leaves off this tropical plant; it's far oftener that the roots are exhausted. We had many plants in pots last December that lost their leaves in a night temperature of 60 degrees, while a lot of old plants in a solid bed kept their foliage green until February and many nights they were down to 45 degrees.

Young primroses now want the coolest and at the same time the airiest place you can give them. A shelf in a shaded house does very well, or a frame with the sash shaded and raised a few inches back and front. Try to get some real leaf mold when you shift these into 3-inch pots. It helps them very much, as it does cyclamen.

Violets.

Perhaps you haven't planted your vio-

Juneau Park, on the Lake Front, Milwaukee.

July. If sown under shaded glass or boards the bed is easily kept moist by an occasional watering, but by this method the little seedlings quickly draw up. You can sow them in the broad sun if you will be sure to keep the bed moist, and to do this a sprinkling may be necessary four or five times a day. Never let it be dry until the plants are well up lets yet. If so, don't delay if they are in pots or flats. Those who still believe in planting them outdoors for the summer will, of course, be in no hurry for a month or two. If you plant on benches in six inches of soil, you can give them only that amount of soil, but if you have the advantage of solid beds you can give the roots more depth and they will, I

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The Aster Beetle.

One of the seasonable visitors of the midsummer time is the aster bug—properly, of course, beetle—but the word bug is sort of a generic name for every insect or worm that attacks the vegetable kingdom. And further, if you have a strong and active idea on any subject our friends say "You have a bug," and if the ideas are numerous and somewhat mixed you are then "bug house," so it's quite a word. But to the point, or rather the bug. A subscriber, H. A. C., asks: "What remedy is there for destroying aster beetle, the black bug that destroys asters, etc., that can be used with no danger?" I must confess not to know the aster beetle by the prefix of blister. We have had some trouble with the beetle in former years, but this season there is a full crop and it is doing much damage, particularly on Semple's and Vick's branching varieties. They seem to go for them in preference to Boston Market and Victoria, because they are large stemmed, meaty and juicy.

It will do no harm to repeat what all florists should know, yet a few don't, that there are chewing insects and sucking ditto, and the means to destroy each are entirely different. Any beetle or worm that chews the surface of the leaf can be easily destroyed by poison. Paris green, London purple, black death, hellebore, slug shot and perhaps many other mixtures will kill the chewers. The suckers, so called, put their beaks through the surface of the leaf and suck out the juices of the plant, as do the aphids and red spider. Poison has no effect on them, because they don't swallow any of it. Now, this aster beetle with which we have the trouble just now, seems to be half way between the two. I am open and glad to receive some expert advice relative to his extinction. Just let me say that the beetle we have is about the size of a small house fly. He flies readily when disturbed and has a little yellow spot on each wing and under a magnifying glass is most beautifully marked. Not being an entomologist, I cannot describe him further, but like the present comet, he has two tails and several delicate nose pieces and delicate hair-like appendages, doubtless most useful when biting into the stem of the aster. His attack is mostly on the leading young growth at the axil of the leaf, where he just files a hole and then bores into the vein. That's why I say that this beetle cannot be classed strictly as either a chewer or a sucker.

Within a few days we have smothered one aster plants with tobacco dust with no effect at all. Then we tried Paris green and no more beetles have been seen on the plants. We syringed and now we will give all the plants a spraying with Paris green. The principal thing to observe is to thoroughly wet the plants and not to use the solution too strong. A good sized teaspoonful of the poison to three gallons of water is strong enough. If you use it too strong you can easily burn the aster leaves. Once more, let's hear from some large aster grower as to his method of killing this beautiful little pest.

Some Useful Plants.

Just a word about a simple little plant or two. The sweet alyssum, the double, of course, comes very useful in designs, and it is a plant that you can grow on the edge of a carnation bench without any, or very slight, detriment to the carnations. If you have any old plants in the house now, put in some cuttings in a shady, cool house and keep them well watered and you will have young plants to put on the bench by the end of August.

Don't forget some time while the weather is warm to put in cuttings of some of the more desirable kinds of alternantheras. A flat three inches deep and of convenient size, say 24x12 inches, filled with light, sandy soil, will hold a lot of them. In a shady place in warm weather they root like chickweed, and the sooner you get them in, the stronger plants they will be before cold weather comes and the better they will endure a low temperature and rough usage during winter. Leave them in the flats until next spring.

It is time to sow pansy seed for those who grow large quantities and don't protect them by sash during winter, and I must confess that the earliest and finest pansies I saw this spring, about half an acre of them, had no protection from the day the seed was sown, at the end of

and you will have fine, stout plants. It takes a little longer, but it is more economical of seed to sow thinly in drills, the drills two inches apart. I have nothing to say about the many fine strains advertised, but be sure to have plenty of purple and blue and yellow, as people ask for these in separate colors for filling vases and beds.

Poinsettias.

Keep on rooting poinsettias. The plants put in now and for the next month are just as useful as those rooted earlier. In fact, cuttings put in the last of August and early September are just the thing for pans, and it's all pans that the people want now as a Christmas plant. In rooting these, as with chrysanthemum cuttings at this season, they must be soaked twice a day in the sand if the weather is bright, and have no sun on them. With shade and water they must be kept from wilting, and there is no trouble in rooting them. If you grow poinsettias just for cutting, by all means plant them out in six inches or more of soil, either on a bench or in the ground. As I have often remarked, it's not always the low temperature that takes the leaves off this tropical plant; it's far oftener that the roots are exhausted. We had many plants in pots last December that lost their leaves in a night temperature of 60 degrees, while a lot of old plants in a solid bed kept their foliage green until February and many nights they were down to 45 degrees.

Young primroses now want the coolest and at the same time the airiest place you can give them. A shelf in a shaded house does very well, or a frame with the sash shaded and raised a few inches back and front. Try to get some real leaf mold when you shift these into 3-inch pots. It helps them very much, as it does cyclamen.

Violets.

Perhaps you haven't planted your vio-

July. If sown under shaded glass or boards the bed is easily kept moist by an occasional watering, but by this method the little seedlings quickly draw up. You can sow them in the broad sun if you will be sure to keep the bed moist, and to do this a sprinkling may be necessary four or five times a day. Never let it be dry until the plants are well up lets yet. If so, don't delay if they are in pots or flats. Those who still believe in planting them outdoors for the summer will, of course, be in no hurry for a month or two. If you plant on benches in six inches of soil, you can give them only that amount of soil, but if you have the advantage of solid beds you can give the roots more depth and they will. I think, give you larger flowers. In addition to the six or seven inches of soil which you remove and replenish, dig down another six inches and work in a lot of well-rotted manure. The roots will go down to the cool depth and pay you for the labor. Don't use much animal manure and only that which is very well rotted in the surface soil, but use fine bone meal. We put a lot of Imperial violets out of doors in flats early in June and the almost continual showers and damp nights have given them a fine lot of spot. Those kept under glass are perfectly free from it, and so it goes. However, spot is not such a formidable enemy. They quickly recover from it; only it weakens the plant. The miserable little black aphid is the violet's greatest curse and he succumbs to the right kind of tobacco dust or the cyanide gas.

Watering and Syringing.

Planting is finished with most growers and the usual routine of work is now in order. The young plants when they are established and growing freely will take lots of water, though at no time should they have so much that the soil gets sour and a green scum forms on it. With some soils that are heavy in texture this scum forms much more quickly than on lighter and more porous soil, though it can be obviated by lightly scratching up the surface of the beds once a week, which will keep things sweet and allow the air to penetrate.

The plants should be sprayed over two or three times a day during hot weather and the paths and roof should be sprayed at the same time, to keep down the temperature. If the weather has been cloudy for several days, it will be noticed that the plants will wilt more or less when the sun comes out again. At such a time it will pay to syringe frequently, to keep the foliage from scalding until the plants are again accustomed to the bright sunlight.

Ventilation and Supports.

Always leave the full air on, night as well as day. Prop the doors open, and if Running strings up to a wire, strung along well up over the plants, is the method quite generally adopted and it is a cheap and fairly satisfactory method. Personally we prefer to use wire stakes, supporting them by wires running lengthwise of the house, catching the stakes about half way up. With the stakes tied to these wires you have a support that will not sag with the weight when the plants get large and heavy, nor will it get tangled or upset, no matter how heavy you may syringe. The first cost of the stakes is a large item to the average grower, but once bought they will last practically for a lifetime if taken care of.

Disbudding.

Many varieties are producing buds and these, of course, must be rubbed off. When this is done, the plant produces three or four shoots from the tip, and of these the best looking shoot may be retained, to continue on, and form the stem. The others should all be removed. It is best not to keep the shoot that comes right next to the bud, as this sometimes makes a short growth of several joints and then produces another bud. The second shoot will generally make the best stem, if retained. Do not let the superfluous shoots get too long before pinching them off and pinch them off close; then the retained shoot comes away clean and straight, and a slightly thickened joint is the only indication after the growth is completed that a bud was produced at that point.

Side shoots and suckers should be kept closely removed from the plants. It is simple work and often neglected, but it should be remembered that every superfluous shoot a plant produces means that a certain amount of energy has been diverted from its proper channel. If this work is done often it takes little time, comparatively. The suckers should be removed as one runs over the bed loosening the soil and with this, as with any other job, it pays to keep ahead of your work.

Insects.

Insects are, as usual, putting in an appearance, and from now on considerable watching is necessary to keep every-keeps a close watch, and where a leaf is just beginning to get eaten up the young colony of caterpillars can be removed before they have scattered over the plant.

There is a green striped bug looking something like the cucumber beetle that causes havoc on the young foliage in some sections. A weak preparation of whale oil soap sprayed over the tips of the shoots will make things so unpleasant that this bug will often take his departure elsewhere.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Syringing and Watering.

In connection with the housing of stock, it is well to study the change which the plants must undergo in getting established in their new quarters. Plants fresh from the field where they have been subject to heavy rains, dews and more or less handling in planting have a certain raw appearance, due to the foliage lacking that bluish bloom so necessary to their perfect health.

Syringing and watering play an important part in reaching the desired end and these operations must be done intelligently and not in a careless, routine way. In syringing as a help to the establishment of plants, do not use the amount or force of water you would to dislodge red spider, but let it be in the form of a heavy mist, descending evenly over the plant. This leaves undisturbed what bloom is on the foliage and no plants are toppled over. Use no more water than is needed to give the appearance of a heavy dew having fallen. It is not the amount of water but the way it is used that produces the right effect.

The practice of watering a newly-planted bench to the point of saturation, or so that water runs through the bottom, is not to be commended any more than the shifting of plants from 2-inch to 8-inch pots. Remember the course of water when applied to soil is not only downward but by capillary attraction is carried outward in the natural direction taken by the roots. Thus it will be seen it is only the soil immediately surrounding the stem of the plant that needs to be watered, or at most a narrow furrow across the bench. As soon as signs of growth appear, the depression or furrow should be filled in with loose soil from between the rows.

In the case of varieties known to be susceptible to stem-rot during this trying period, we have found that when covering in around the plant with loose soil it is a good plan to make a furrow between the rows and water in this only until the plants are well on their way.

Weather conditions here have somewhat delayed our planting, but those housed early in July have come along nicely, especially Enchantress, which with us has taken hold of the soil very quickly after benching. Its behavior thus far has been all that we could ask, but the end is not yet.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

A little experience we had two years ago, which may be of interest to some and which may save you some time, happened about the end of our planting. The summer had been very dry, as all those in this vicinity will remember, and many delayed planting until we might have some rain to freshen up the plants, which looked wilted every day. you have side or bottom ventilators, and you ought to have them in a chrysanthemum house, leave them open also. The cool night air is just what the plants love, as one can tell by the way the leaves stand out from the stem, and their crisp, leathery feel to the touch.

Before the plants begin to lay around they should be supported in some manner or the stems will get crooked, and it is a hard job to get them into shape again.

thing in shape. Caterpillars are perhaps the worst, as they disfigure the foliage so much. When they are so numerous that hand picking is too much of a job, Paris green diluted down to a small teaspoonful in a pail of water may be sprayed on the undersides of the leaves. Paris green is best applied in the evening or on a dull day, as if applied in the sunlight it will burn the tender foliage. Much work can often be avoided if one with the rest, for a time, but as it did not rain one day after another, we decided to plant our carnations, rain or no rain. On the suggestion of a friend we turned the hose into the carnation path and soaked the ground until it was a wonder it did not leak through into China. After it had dried off somewhat and the plants were nice and fresh, we began digging and we had all the stock planted before we had a rain that amounted to anything. The plants took hold nicely in the houses and went right to growing and by winter you would hardly have known that the summer had been so dry.

Now the most interesting part was that a batch of Ethel Crocker that had not received the soaking along with the rest was needed to plant the last bench, and we decided to find out whether the soaking was really a help or not. We got the soil in the benches in a good moist condition and the first thing in the morning, while the plants were yet fresh, we dug enough to fill the bench. They were, of course, brought right into the cool shed and sprinkled and kept covered until they could be planted. You should have seen those plants! The way they took hold of that moist soil reminded one of a half-starved animal, and they were established in less time than those that were soaked in the field.

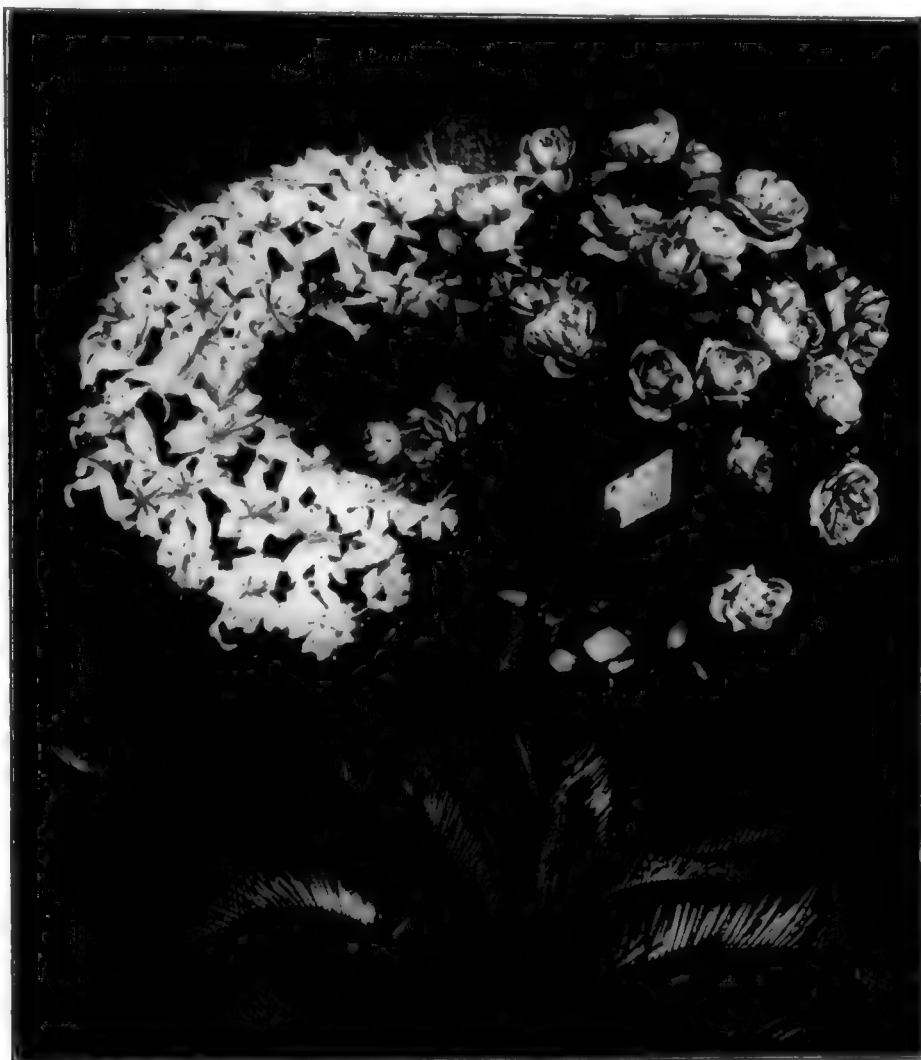

Ever since that time we have preferred a moderately dry spell just previous to digging our carnations from the field, believing that as the growth is more natural and the roots are less active there will be less wilting and consequently a quicker renewal of growth. And in case of extreme drought, instead of watering before digging, only dig in the morning before the plants show signs of wilting, or in the evening after they straighten up again. But do not dig while the plants are in a wilted condition.

I meant to say last week, but forgot it, that we prefer to mix our bone meal into the soil a few days or a week before planting, and give the bed a good watering or two before it is planted. It gives the bone a chance to become a part of the soil, and instead of causing the soil to be dry at planting time, it will be in shape for the plants to assimilate as soon as the roots are able to take up food again. We mix from 25 to 35 pounds into a bed of 500 square feet and rake it in well, after which we water and, if planting is not done within a few days, we keep the soil in a fair planting condition from that time on by watering lightly each day.

We use a line stretched lengthwise over the center of the bed to plant by, and a stick with notches cut into it to regulate the distance of the plants in the row. After we have our center row planted we use our eyes to get the others straight across the bench as well as lengthwise. A good planter needs no more, and any one who needs more than that is not a good planter, although he may be able to set the plant into the soil just as perfectly as the other. Some growers mark off the bed like a checkerboard before planting and, while that may insure straight rows if the lines are not obliterated, yet we consider it a waste of time when time is valuable.

There will not be so much dry foliage on your plants now as there is likely to be in a month later, and there will be no need of stopping to pick it off before planting. You will have plenty of time a little later.

WATERING FIELD CARNATIONS.

Much has been written about watering carnations when in the field, or rather about not watering them, as it is claimed that constant or frequent cultivation will produce good plants, even if there be a scarcity of rain. The claim is set up that watering will induce stem-rot and therefore should be avoided. I suppose it will be conceded that cultivation will not produce moisture. At best, if the cultivation be shallow enough, a layer of fine soil will be secured at the surface which will prevent rapid evaporation and so aid in conserving the moisture in the soil. It also prevents the growth of fungus at or just below the surface.

Believing, as I do, that stem-rot arises from the composition of the soil and conditions of the fertilizers used, and not from moisture, I have always watered my field carnations as I water them in the houses, when water is needed, using the hose to do it, and have never had stem-rot, either indoors or out. But I am careful not to use much manure in the field, and have the ground broken up at least seven inches deep. Shallow plowing won't do. A sprinkling of wood ashes I find is a benefit, if it be done just before cultivation. My soil is high and well drained and is rather light and inclined to be sandy. J. Y. LAMBERT.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

At this season the grower should keep a sharp lookout for thrips, so they may not secure a lodgment among the young stock. Before the plants begin to bear a crop these insects give little evidence of their presence, and it requires a sharp and trained eye to read the signs, but as soon as the buds begin to develop, their work becomes manifest to even the most inexperienced.

While infesting all sorts and varieties of roses, thrips commit their most destructive ravages among Beauties, and to houses containing these the grower should direct his best efforts and attention.

There are many species of these pests, some of them natives, and many of them imported, and they are all inimical to rose culture under glass. They are all so nearly alike as to make it hard to distinguish them, but as their habits are so much alike, and the methods of treating them so similar, the grower does not need to spend his time in determining their identity.

Prevention being so much better than cure in this case, rigid precaution against their increase in, and in proximity to, rose houses, and their introduction into the house among such materials as soil, manure, litter, etc., should be in force the whole summer and fall. Keeping the ground near the houses and in the vicinity of soil piles clear of weeds is one of the best preventives.

If the weeds have been neglected they ought to be cut down at once and burned. It is also a good plan to burn the grass and ground herbage near the houses during a hot spell. Weeds in the houses, on the paths and underneath the benches, should be strictly looked after and destroyed, as these afford both feeding ground and shelter.

During the growing season and while we are practicing disbudding is the best time to apply the remedies, as we can use more radical measures than when we can apply with either safety or prudence after we allow a crop to come. The buds think, give you larger flowers. In addition to the six or seven inches of soil which you remove and replenish, dig down another six inches and work in a lot of well-rotted manure. The roots will go down to the cool depth and pay you for the labor. Don't use much animal manure and only that which is very well rotted in the surface soil, but use fine bone meal. We put a lot of Imperial violets out of doors in flats early in June and the almost continual showers and damp nights have given them a fine lot of spot. Those kept under glass are perfectly free from it, and so it goes. However, spot is not such a formidable enemy. They quickly recover from it; only it weakens the plant. The miserable little black aphid is the violet's greatest curse and he succumbs to the right kind of tobacco dust or the cyanide gas.

But do not dig while the plants are in a wilted condition.

I meant to say last week, but forgot it, that we prefer to mix our bone meal into the soil a few days or a week before planting, and give the bed a good watering or two before it is planted. It gives the bone a chance to become a part of the soil, and instead of causing the soil to be dry at planting time, it will be in shape for the plants to assimilate as soon as the roots are able to take up food again. We mix from 25 to 35 pounds into a bed of 500 square feet and rake it in well, after which we water and, if planting is not done within a few days, we keep the soil in a fair planting condition from that time on by watering lightly each day.

We use a line stretched lengthwise over the center of the bed to plant by, and a stick with notches cut into it to regulate the distance of the plants in the row. After we have our center row planted we use our eyes to get the others straight across the bench as well as lengthwise. A good planter needs no more, and any one who needs more than that is not a good planter, although he may be able to set the plant into the soil just as perfectly as the other. Some growers mark the bed like a checkerboard before planting and, while that may insure straight rows if the lines are not obliterated, yet we consider it a waste of time when time is valuable.

There will not be so much dry foliage on your plants now as there is likely to be in a month later, and there will be no need of stopping to pick it off before planting. You will have plenty of time a little later.

WATERING FIELD CARNATIONS.

Much has been written about watering carnations when in the field, or rather about not watering them, as it is claimed that constant or frequent cultivation will produce good plants, even if there be a scarcity of rain. The claim is set up that watering will induce stem-rot and therefore should be avoided. I suppose it will be conceded that cultivation will not produce moisture. At best, if the cultivation be shallow enough, a layer of fine soil will be secured at the surface which will prevent rapid evaporation and so aid in conserving the moisture in the soil. It also prevents the growth of fungus at or just below the surface.

Believing, as I do, that stem-rot arises from the composition of the soil and conditions of the fertilizers used, and not from moisture, I have always watered my field carnations as I water them in the houses, when water is needed, using the hose to do it, and have never had stem-rot, either indoors or out. But I am careful not to use much manure in the field, and have the ground broken up at least seven inches deep. Shallow plowing won't do. A sprinkling of wood ashes I find is a benefit, if it be done just before cultivation. My soil is high and well drained and is rather light and inclined to be sandy. J. Y. LAMBERT.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

At this season the grower should keep a sharp lookout for thrips, so they may not secure a lodgment among the young stock. Before the plants begin to bear a crop these insects give little evidence of their presence, and it requires a sharp and trained eye to read the signs, but as soon as the buds begin to develop, their work becomes manifest to even the most inexperienced.

While infesting all sorts and varieties of roses, thrips commit their most destructive ravages among Beauties, and to houses containing these the grower should direct his best efforts and attention.

There are many species of these pests, some of them natives, and many of them imported, and they are all inimical to rose culture under glass. They are all so nearly alike as to make it hard to distinguish them, but as their habits are so much alike, and the methods of treating them so similar, the grower does not need to spend his time in determining their identity.

Prevention being so much better than cure in this case, rigid precaution against their increase in, and in proximity to, rose houses, and their introduction into the house among such materials as soil, manure, litter, etc., should be in force the whole summer and fall. Keeping the ground near the houses and in the vicinity of soil piles clear of weeds is one of the best preventives.

If the weeds have been neglected they ought to be cut down at once and burned. It is also a good plan to burn the grass and ground herbage near the houses during a hot spell. Weeds in the houses, on the paths and underneath the benches, should be strictly looked after and destroyed, as these afford both feeding ground and shelter.

During the growing season and while we are practicing disbudding is the best time to apply the remedies, as we can use more radical measures than than we can apply with either safety or prudence after we allow a crop to come. The buds and leaves taken off when disbudding should be taken out of the house and destroyed, and light and frequent fumigation put in force. This has more effect if applied during the early morning, before sunrise, as the fumes fill the house more evenly at that time than at any other. Fumigating every alternate day till we begin to take our first cut will make a sure job of this, and will in no way injure the plants. Once a week afterwards will keep the stock clean.

After crops are ready to cut the means of destroying these pests become more limited as persistent use of fumes of any kind has a deleterious effect on the color matter in the petals, bleaching them so that however fine the bud and stem may be, their value is destroyed, and consequently our most strenuous efforts should be now directed to their eradication, especially in the Beauty houses, where the ravages, if unchecked, are likely to cause a financial loss, and where the chagrin and worry consequent on their presence adds more weight to the burden which is already heavy enough.

RIBES.

FUMIGATION METHODS.

I have just read an article by Wm. Scott, in a recent issue of the REVIEW, and have been very much interested in his description of Mr. Marquisee's method of burning tobacco dust. We have given this method a trial for some months and have found it to be very effective in destroying both aphids and thrips. It must, however, be systematically done, for we have found that once these pests get a hold it is hard to rid the houses of them by this method, or in fact, by any method we have tried.

There are a few points in connection with this method which have not been touched upon and these may also be of interest. There is often something lacking in the dust and we have found that by moistening the dust slightly with Rose Leaf, or some other good extract of tobacco, that the fumes will be more effective.

In the construction of the pans we have not found it necessary to rivet a piece on the end to hold them in a slanting position; we merely bend back the strip cut from the bottom and then double this with a hammer, and the extra work of riveting can be dispensed with.

In connection with both burning and steaming tobacco stems, the addition of some extract is also of benefit, as it adds to the strength. By arranging a system of valves so that steam can be carried through the water pipes, and this steaming done before the sun is up, is also a satisfactory method and if good dust cannot be procured and good stems are available it will be worthy of a trial. In this case we use narrow boxes about three feet in depth and by means of a short hose introduce the steam into the bottom of the box, from each faucet. We use six boxes for each 300-foot house and allow the steam to completely fill the house, which requires from ten to twenty minutes, depending on the steam pressure. The tobacco in these boxes should be fresh at least every other time they are used.

Of the two methods we are now using the pans and dust by preference, and will no doubt as long as we can get good dust.

EASTER LILIES IN THE U. S.

In his pamphlet on growing Easter lilies from seed, George W. Oliver, the government expert, says that for some years efforts have been made to cultivate the lily in the southeastern states, but it has not been demonstrated that, with the methods used, it can be grown to compete with the foreign product. The cultivation of the lily in the southern states has evidently been conducted with a view to producing bulbs which would ripen in July, or early enough to compete with the Bermuda grown product. So far, practically nothing has been done in experimental work with a view to giving the bulbs the most favorable conditions to develop, leaving out of consideration altogether early ripening for forcing the following fall. It is the intention of the Department of Agriculture to work with this end in view, not only in the south, but in the middle and northern states and also in the west. A knowledge of the proper time to plant the bulbs in the various sections of the country in order to produce a bulb of maximum size in as short a time as possible but in a thoroughly ripe condition before being harvested is most important and this knowledge is to be gained only by carefully conducted trials. Every florist who is interested should experiment in a small way to ascertain how the bulbs will succeed out of doors in his section.

The soil problem does not present many difficulties beyond the selection of well drained situations and a light, sandy loam, which can be kept sufficiently moist during the growing season to prevent the plants from receiving a check. Treatment should be accorded a portion of the bulbs similar to that found to succeed with bulbs of Lilium auratum. This consists in placing in the vicinity of the bulb, moss or other material which will retain more moisture than the surrounding soil. During dry weather this is found to be an excellent provision for supplying the growing roots with moisture until a fresh supply is received from rains and until the roots penetrate deeply into the ground. In trials of this nature the bulbs should be allowed to stay in the ground as long as possible after the tops decay. They should be harvested just before growth would commence again, because interference that tends to cause premature decay near the base of the bulb provides ready means for the ingress of fungi and bacteria.

Batches of lilies for experimental work in ascertaining localities favorable to the production of bulbs should be planted late or early, according to the particular section of the country in which the experiment is to be conducted. In the north it may be considered safe to put them in the ground during the latter half of September. Farther south the planting should be delayed so that there may be no danger of the growth showing above ground previous to freezing weather.

In the north, as hard freezing weather approaches, the ground in which the bulbs are planted should have a heavy mulch of such a nature as to be easily removed in spring. The mulch will serve several purposes; it will help to keep the soil around the bulb at an equable temperature and prevent rapid thawing and freezing at and near the surface of the soil. Throughout the south, especially in the districts within the frost belt, the mulch need not be heavy, and should consist of half decayed leaves or very old manure, so that there will exist no necessity for its removal when the growths are making their way through the soil. It should not be applied too soon, as there is then a danger of the soil being kept too warm, thus encouraging the shoots to push above the soil before the advent of cold weather. In all cases a mulch should be spread over the soil during hot, dry weather.

So far as the requirements of the lilies are understood, correct conditions would not be supplied by repeated cultivation, between the rows. These conditions could be secured best by a system of mulching to keep the sun from warming the soil too much near the surface or else by the substitution of some kind of a shade crop to protect the soil from the sun's rays. This crop would, of course, have to be of such a nature as not to rob the soil of too much of the food and moisture necessary for the growth of the lilies.

Again, the bulbs may be grown in beds, as in the Bermudas, and close enough together to shade the ground to a certain extent. In any event, the cool and fairly moist condition of the surface soil is a most essential point to be observed in the cultivation of the lily. In planting, the depth to which the bulbs should be placed should range from four to six inches, according to the size of one-year-old bulbs.

In this as in every other crop, there are so many details essential to successful cultivation, all differing with the localities, that the above directions must be construed merely as suggestions. Lily farming in the United States is so new that one must not be discouraged if at first failure results from treatment which applied to other crops would mean success.

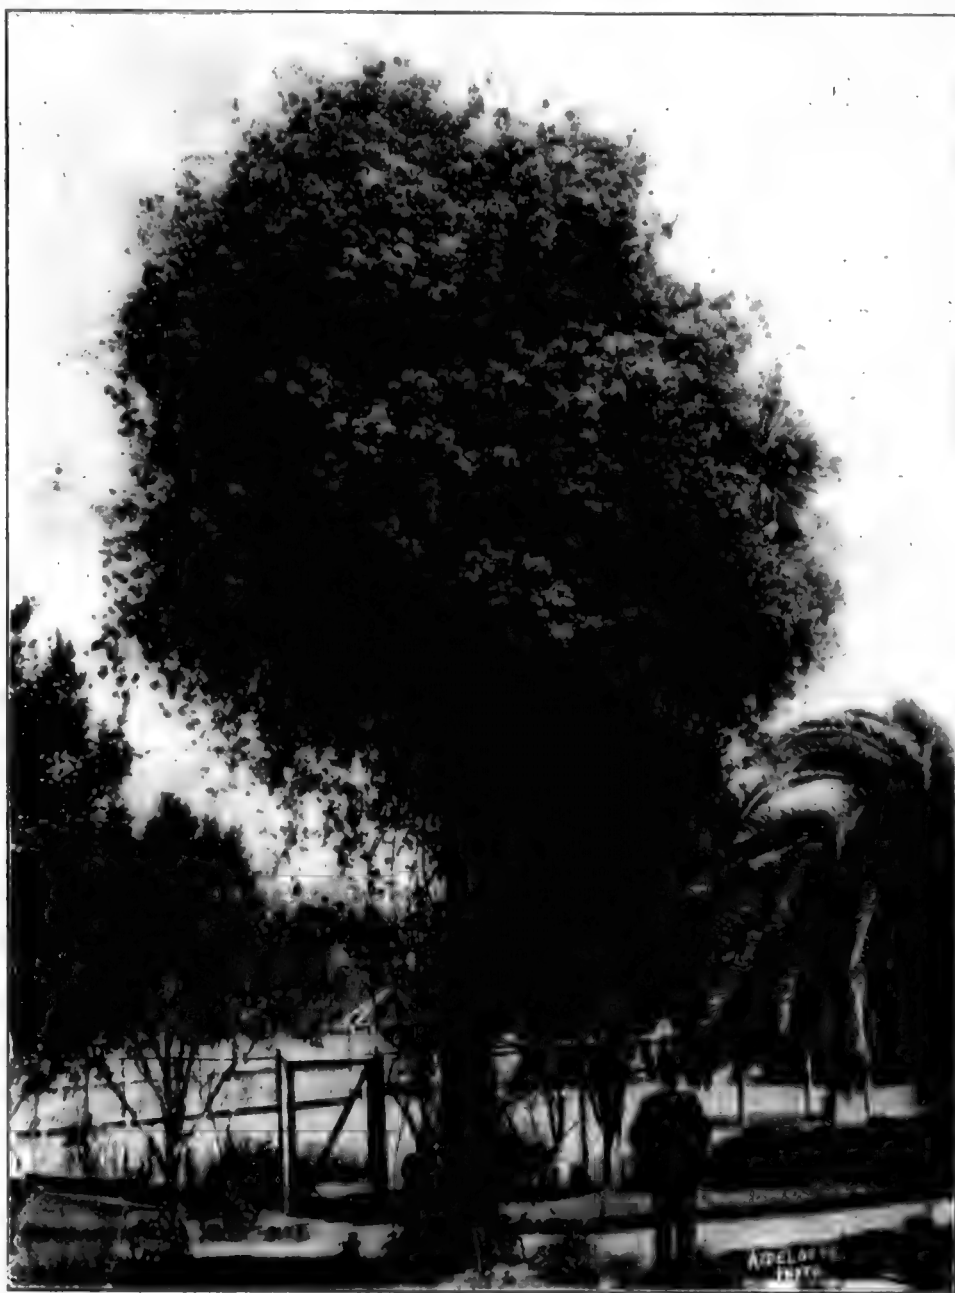

ENGLISH MARKET ROSES.

July is generally admitted to be the month for roses, and certainly we do obtain our largest supply in the markets during this month, writes J. B. Riding in the Gardeners' Magazine, but it must not be thought for a moment that there is a special season for these flowers in Covent Garden. They can be, and are, purchased there every morning throughout the year, not by incidental growers, but by a few large firms who take them up every morning. Few people realize what this means, and doubtless would be somewhat skeptical when they were told how many thousands of plants are required to keep up this daily supply.

But I am not dealing with this phase of the subject, but rather with the popular varieties that one sees in the florists' windows and in the streets. These varieties are cultivated in fields in most of the home counties, Middlesex, Herts, Essex, Surrey, and Kent sending the largest quantities. This is quite natural, for the roses grown in these counties can be gathered bunched, and put on the market in a very short time, thus ensuring their freshness, for second-day roses always have to be sold cheaper.

Rose growing for market, like all other sections of commercial gardening, has undergone considerable changes during the past twenty years, and nowadays the market man watches all the new varieties as they are introduced, and any that are likely to be useful for the market are purchased in quantity; in fact, I think it would be quite safe to say they are the largest purchasers of new roses at the present time. The cultivation has also greatly improved as one result of keen competition. I remember the time when a pair of shears was quite good enough for pruning purposes, and I have also known a couple of acres operated upon with a bagging hook, but we should not meet with such cultivation now, simply because it pays to do the work better, and with greater efficiency. There is just one curious point, however, adopted in some districts that will strike the rosarian as being strange, that is, the rose pruning is carried out during the winter months, at any time when the labor can be put on to it.

The method of bunching and packing has also undergone considerable changes. At one time all were cut with about four to six inches of growth, and bunched tightly in dozens. Now all the best blooms are sent with long stems, packed in damp grass, and placed in layers; in this way they keep almost perfect in shape, and travel without any bruising. Magnificent blooms can now be seen in the market any morning with eighteen inches of growth, a thing unknown a decade or so ago. The cheaper trade is also still catered for, and thousands of bushels are sold in flats, with just a few inches of growth, many without stems at all. These latter are "legged" (a stem tied on) by the street hawkers, and sold for buttonholes, or made up into bunches.

As to varieties, there seems to be an idea abroad that very few roses are suitable for market work, but this is entirely erroneous, as a walk through Covent Garden will quickly demonstrate. Perhaps the most popular hybrid perpetuals are General Jacqueminot—one of our oldest varieties, and one which the general public never tire of—Mrs. J. Laing, John Hopper, Duke of Edinburgh. Baroness Rothschild, although scentless, sells well, as does also its white relative, Merveille de Lyon. Captain Hayward is largely grown, and its habit of producing large clusters of buds on each stem while young becomes rectified with age. Boule de Neige is also grown. The popular hybrid teas are greatly appreciated, and many of the colors that one would hardly think suitable for market work appear to sell well. The following varieties are strongly in evidence: Mrs. W. J. Grant, Liberty, La France, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Caroline Testout, and Viscountess Folkestone. The stronger-growing teas, such as Gloire de Dijon and Madame Berard, are sent in thousands for the cheap trade. The old common moss rose is largely in evidence, and well grown too. The China roses are popular in the early part of the season. The tea section is chiefly grown for the high-class trade, and the following varieties are most generally grown: Catherine Mermet, Safrano, Niphetos, Sunrise, Bridesmaid, Madame Hoste, The Bride, Marechal Niel, Perle des Jardins, Madame Falcot, Maman Cochet, W. A. Richardson, and White Maman Cochet.

These varieties by no means exhaust the list, but I have given the chief varieties. The prices, naturally, vary very much. Even in July some will be selling at six shillings per dozen bunches, while other samples will only be making a shilling per bushel.

A Case for Action.

On Friday evening, July 17, Mendota, Ill., was visited by one of the most severe storms on record. The damage was greatest in the northeast portion of the town, where Henry Schweitzer's greenhouses, residence and outdoor crops were almost totally destroyed. The loss in his case will be not far from $8,000, and he was practically without insurance. Mr. Schweitzer is well known in the trade and has many friends who extend their sympathy. It was Mr. Schweitzer who was at the depot at Mendota, with refreshments, when the Ready cash is what is most wanted, but clothing will be a great help, also building materials and later plants to restock the greenhouses. He is deserving of prompt and liberal assistance from all florists who know the straights they would be in were their establishments and homes wiped out without a moment's warning. To start the good work Bassett & Washburn give $25 and some stock. Send direct to Mr. Schweitzer or in care of the REVIEW.

REMEDY FOR ANTS.

A very effective remedy for ants on lawns is to mix granulated sugar with arsenic and then with fresh bread crumbs, and sprinkle around their nests. One application is generally sufficient. Having wanted something to clean ants from lawns myself and trying a number of recipes, I submit the above for the benefit of others similarly afflicted. Mix the sugar and arsenic thoroughly first; then add the crumbs and mix again.

CHANGES IN BANKRUPTCY LAW.

The bankruptcy act of 1898, establishing a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States, was one of immense importance to the country's commercial interests, and of far-reaching consequences. For five years the country has been adjusting itself to the new conditions, and the act has been under the closest judicial scrutiny. Changes and corrections have been found desirable, and the past session of congress made many under the advice of experts.

The bill modifies the existing law in several important particulars, the principal one of which is a provision in regard to preferred creditors. Under the existing law those who had received payments from a person who had soon after been declared a bankrupt could not have other claims passed without surrendering the amount received. This provision was modified so as to allow the creditor to retain the money received unless the previous payment was fraudulent. This change is in conformity with a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court.

Another amendment provides four new objections to a discharge, intended to prevent persons from going through bankruptcy, the most important of which are the giving of false mercantile statement or the making of a fraudulent transfer of property. The bill also provides that it shall be an objection to a discharge if a voluntary bankrupt seeks to go through bankruptcy more than once in six years.

Another amendment provides that the appointment of a receiver for a corporation which is insolvent is an act of bankruptcy, entitling the creditors to choose their own trustee. Another important change is one which gives the federal courts concurrent jurisdiction of suits to recover property which has been fraudulently transferred.

Other amendments allow the wives of bankrupts to testify in the proceedings; provide for an increase of the fees of referees and trustees to an average of about 50 per cent over the fees allowed by the present law, and prohibit the courts from allowing greater fees than the law permits in any case, and add to the list of debts from which a bankrupt cannot be relieved by a discharge from bankruptcy. The new list includes debts to wife and children, and alimony.

With these amendments, dictated by wise experience, it is believed that the United States has a system of bankruptcy which is most equitable, favoring neither debtor nor creditor, and is the equal if not the superior of any bankruptcy law or system in the world.

DIVISION OF PROFITS.

The writer has a party who is willing to furnish capital sufficient to put up a modern greenhouse containing about 6,000 square feet of glass. On a ten-year contract, what would be a fair and equitable basis to make a division of the profits between the capitalist and the working partner? The latter is to furnish coal, help, stock, make necessary repairs, market and sell all stock and to take entire charge of the plant. Would be glad of any suggestion on the subject from any of the readers of the REVIEW.

NEW YORK.

Vacations in Order.

Michael Ford, of Ford Bros., is at Greenwood Lake, breathing the healthful country air. Joseph Fenrich, the firm's head salesman, leaves on Saturday for Lanesville, in the heart of the Catskills, for a two weeks' rest, and William P. Ford goes on August 6 to Barnegat Bay, near Forked River, N. J., on his annual fishing trip with the Sterling Fishing Club. James A. Hammond is occupying his cottage at Port Washington, L. I., for the summer. Hugh Nelson, foreman for J. J. Perkins, leaves the first week in August for an extended European trip.

Peter A. Downing, formerly with the Rosary and now with Thorley, will enjoy his vacation in the Adirondacks.

Miss Robbins, bookkeeper for Mr. Perkins, goes to Cape May August 1 for a month's meditation by "the salt sea waves." Julius Lang is at Livingston Manor, N. Y., with his family. Mrs. Thomas Young, Jr., left on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II. on Tuesday, for Baden-Baden and will be joined later by her husband in a European pleasure trip that will extend into September.

Walter Sheridan has returned from a breathing spell in the mountains and John I. Raynor started last Saturday for his annual outing. Mr. Ghormley's lieutenants, Messrs. Coyle and Baker, are away for two weeks, and Mr. Miller, of the Noe forces, is at Pt. Jervis, N. Y. Mr. Miller, from Sheridan's, will put on his "coat of tan" during the next two weeks in Sullivan county, and Mansfield, of Madison avenue, will try to have a pleasant time for a month at Point Pleasant, N. J.

Mackintosh, the Broadway florist, is rusticated at Long Branch. Last year he saved a man from drowning as a part of his summer recreation. This year he hopes to save a lady. Sullivan county is a favorite resting place for florists. Miss Walreich, cashier for Alex. Guttman, is spending her holidays there.

Various Items.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Dailedouze have the sympathy of their many friends in the loss of their only daughter, whose death occurred on July 11, of scarlet fever. The young lady was only fifteen years of age and was one of the happiest and most healthful of the young people at the club's outing.

The many friends of A. H. Hews, of Boston, learn with regret of his demise. He was a man of most charming personality.

The old landmark on Broadway and Seventy-eighth street, so long occupied by David Clarke's Sons, has vanished. No vestige of the greenhouses remains. The firm is utilizing the old material in the construction of two new houses on its property at Fordham Heights and will ultimately cover a large part of the two acres there with a modern plant, the stock from which will find a ready outlet at the new store on Broadway and Seventy-fourth streets.

The projected plant and flower market is still under consideration. Last Wednesday the official board heard arguments in favor of the $250,000 appropriation and everything indicates a favorable conclusion by "the powers that be." That every stand in the great building would be taken is a certainty, and that a completed enterprise may be announced before the snow flies is "a consummation devoutly to be wished."

The yacht races unfortunately occur the week of the convention. Some devoted water spirits cannot forego the influence and threaten to cut out the convention in their favor. The opinion of good horticultural authorities seems to favor the chances of Sir Thomas. To the speculative afar off this tip is given without authority. Ask Davy Mellis for particulars.

Convention Matters.

The desire of the St. Louis florists to entertain the S. A. F. next year will doubtless be gratified. The majority always rules, even if it be but a majority of two, as the Ashevilleans demonstrated in 1902. The desire of the practical for a convention for "business only" is natural, but the conventions are becoming more and more great reunions of old and new friends, and their real value is in the opportunities they give for recreation and rest and the inspiration that comes from the renewal of acquaintances and the business relations formed. There will be plenty of time for business at St. Louis and for the great fair also. The great west becomes more influential with every anniversary. In 1905 it will be Portland, Oregon, with its exposition and its wonderful possibilities that will appeal to us, and a $50 round trip fare would insure a large attendance. No one now regrets the trip to Asheville, great as was the opposition developed when the result of the vote was realized. "Famous City" folks won't be caught napping again. We all look ahead a year to our conventions and plan for them if we can, no matter where they are. This Milwaukee gathering will be a surprise to many. Its trade exhibit will certainly be "the best ever." The hotels are up to date and convenient to exhibition hall, and the majority of them most reasonable in their rates. The fare from New York, including special sleeper all the way through and return, will cost a lot under $40 by the West Shore, which has been made the official route, and which is making special arrangements for its patrons on this occasion, including a practical chaperone who knows his business.

Preparations are going on quietly by the leading bowlers, under the coaching of Messrs. Lang and Traendly, which assures the city a creditable representation at Milwaukee. The average strength of the members has been so well demonstrated in the past that regular practice for the event is not deemed necessary.

Visitors.

Among the visitors during the past week were W. L. Rock and wife, of Kansas City; Julius Neidnagel, Jr., of Evansville, Ind.; J. K. Farquhar, of Boston; H. H. Groff, the Canadian gladiolus king, and J. L. Dillon, of Bloomsburg, Pa.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There has not been much change in the market conditions since last report, either as regards the quality and supply of stock or the demand. We have had several good rains during the past week, which should do a world of good to outdoor stock. Funeral work has been quite plentiful all over town, but aside from this, business is reported as very dull.

Some fairly good stock in roses is in, Kaiserin and Meteor being in the best condition. Brides and Maids are the poorest, as is usual at this time of the year. Beauties from the newly planted stock are in, with short stems, though fair flowers. There are enough carnations in to supply the demand; quality only fair. White sell the best. Sweet peas are about over. Very few are coming in and the stems are short. Asters are not yet overplentiful and are not any too good in quality. White and purple sell the best, at $1.50 per 100 for the choice. Gladioli are beginning to be more plentiful and will soon be seen in large quantities. The market is stocked with plenty of greens, such as smilax, asparagus, fancy ferns and galax, at the usual market prices.

Various Notes.

At Tower Grove Park they have a new seedling nymphaea, James Gurney, whose parents are N. O'Marana and N. Frank Trelease. It has large bronze leaves, more fringed than its parents, and large, beautiful pink flowers. Anyone who sees it can forget all the other varieties. Phil Gobel, who has charge of the pond, and James Gurney, the head of the park, are very proud of their new find. Tower Grove Park is also the home of the grand new salvia, St. Louis, and the beautiful Stella Gurney ageratum. The park is looking better than ever. Mr. Gurney laid it out in 1863 and has been at its head ever since. He planted every tree in the park but three. If able, he will be at the convention next month to meet his many friends.

Everybody is talking picnic to-day (Monday), and if the weather is fine a record breaking crowd will be present Thursday at Priester's Park. The prizes are costly and beautiful. Among the prizes are a beautiful pearl necklace for the little girls' race, an elegant gold watch charm, set with a diamond for the single men's race, a fine ornament for the married ladies' race, and a silk umbrella for the ladies' bowling match. These are the best prizes. By the time this issue is out the St. Louis florists will be having a good time.

State Vice-President Charles Juengel, who has the transportation matter in hand, has not yet decided by which road the St. Louis contingent will travel to Milwaukee. The rate, he says, will be $13.40 for the round trip. This is the very best that can be had, all the roads having the same rate, and it is simply a matter of choice as to roads. Mr. Juengel says it cannot be definitely stated as to how many will go until the next meeting of the club. His list to date is twenty-five, including five or six ladies, but the chances are that we will send in the neighborhood of thirty or thirty-five. The present arrangement is for the St. Louis party to leave Sunday noon, arrive in Chicago at 7:30 p. m., spend Monday with our friends in that city and travel to Milwaukee on their special.

Mr. and Mrs. Carew Sanders did not go on their western trip last week, as was stated, owing to the sudden sickness of Mrs. Sanders, but will start just as soon as Mrs. Sanders is able to travel.

F. C. Weber has been sick the past week and not able to attend to business. Fred will take a short trip to the Springs this week. He never misses a convention and hopes to attend this year.

Charles Richter, aged 92, and the oldest florist in St. Louis, who is now living out on old Morgan Ford road, is very sick and his physicians report the chances for his recovery as very slim. Mr. Richter has been on the retired list for the past thirty years.

Bowling.

The bowling club rolled its usual practice games on Monday night. Carl Beyer and Will Adels were not able to roll, owing to late business. Some good scores were made. The new set of pins made it hard to get strikes. Kuehn was high for three games and Beneke for single game. The convention team, after next week, will have an extra night for practice. The score:

Player—	1st.	2d.	3d.	T'l.	Av.
Kuehn	177	187	168	532	177
Beneke	213	164	150	527	176
Sturtz	169	187	171	527	176
Miller	147	118	155	420	140
Ellis	118	143	157	418	139
Weber, Jr.	141	114	143	398	133
Young	102	122	140	364	121

BUFFALO.

The Market.

As is the case in other cities, according to reports, sweet peas have been very much overdone, and the weather being favorable to their continuous growth, there are still plenty. Gladioli are now on the market and asters have been for the past two weeks, so there are plenty of cheap flowers. Roses, except Kaiserin, are a poor lot, and carnations have collapsed the past two weeks. There should be more of the hybrid perpetual roses grown—a good, large planting of Baroness Rothschild, Ulrich Brunner, Paul Neyron, Magna Charta, Gabriel Luizet and half a dozen others but more particularly Ulrich Brunner—and with attention to disbudding and good cultivation you could have stems two feet long of these beautiful flowers, only you must be up by 5 o'clock in the morning to cut them before King Sol's shining face has burst open their petals. Business is no quieter than we expect. The passing away of old and young friends is the cause of the heaviest part of the business.

Convention Matters.

As I did not send you any word last week, it's rather old news that our club had a rather well attended meeting. There was more than the usual interest shown in the Milwaukee convention. The route and the railroad to travel by was left to a committee of which William F. Kasting is chairman. When it comes to dealing with passenger agents it takes lots of nerve and diplomacy and our Billy is blessed with both. There is no doubt that we shall have a bowling team at the city that Schlitz made famous, and Capt. Braik will select his team. We are to have a picnic before the convention to work up enthusiasm. Mr. Keitsch and his committee have full power to select the spot, but the prevailing sentiment was that we have had enough of Grand Island for a few years. I trust the same good crowd will turn out that we saw last year. Now, boys, go to the convention. Very few of you travel. Travel is a great educator, if not the greatest. Suppose you spend your little savings on this trip, you will gain ten times the amount in your knowledge of the great country in which we live. It will widen your horoscope and you will be able to say for years afterward, "Yes, I know Milwaukee; it's a great town. I almost fancied I was in Berlin without the kaiser and the military." The sidewalks are rather high above the streets, but after you have been an hour in the company of Mr. Whitnall your perceptibility of grades and levels will have vanished, and not until you have been steadied up by the conservative influence of Mr. Polworth will you return to any criticism. I feel a sort of something that says Milwaukee will have a great convention. There are hundreds of fine men in the great states of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois and Iowa who will be glad to see and welcome the men from the east and west. I have no patience with those men who will tell you they were off on a fishing excursion that week, and almost as bad are those who say they were too busy. And then again, don't say that a convention is of no use to you, that a few "run it." You have just as much opportunity to be one of the "runners" as anyone else. Its fraternal and social features are doubtless the most important and enjoyable to the great majority, and no harm if it is, but inside that it is an organization that has done much to advance our profession and guard our interests and it is our duty to be loyal to this glorious and good society of the S. A. F. & O. H.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Supplies of stock are at about the lowest ebb. Very few roses are coming in and the carnations are mostly thrown out preparatory to replanting. As outdoor carnations are not yet largely in evidence, and asters are only just beginning to make their presence felt, it leaves the market pretty bare. The demand is ample to take up all of the better grades of stock, but that is not necessarily saying much. Beauties are very scarce, several large growers cutting almost none at all, and what few there are would be scarcely identified were it not for the foliage. Some good Kaiserin are offered, also Meteor and some clean stock from young plants.

With the decrease in the receipts of carnations there has come a pronounced demand for white, and good prices are obtained wherever the condition of the stock will warrant. In a few days asters will be in heavily. Gladioli are selling fairly well and are not in large supply. Sweet peas are about gone and Harrisii are not so abundant as a few weeks ago. There are plenty of auratums. Galax and cycas leaves are in demand for hot weather funeral designs.

Various Notes.

Tuesday noon the wholesale district was alarmed by the heaviest hail storm in many a day, but a quick resort to the telephone served to show that no more than a light shower was falling on the big greenhouses north of town. Wienhoeber lost some glass, but no hail fell as far north as Wittbold's, and on the west and south sides the storm was within narrow limits.

Weber Bros. have Meteor roses in the house the lilies occupied until after Easter. Ernst Weber is away on a vacation.

W. J. Smyth is spending most of his time at his summer home on Lake Marie, at Antioch. He has telephone connection with the store and comes to town only once or twice a week.

Peter Reinberg recently bought forty acres of city property just west of Rose Hill and there are visions of still larger ranges of glass.

O. P. Bassett is dividing his leisure between golf and his automobile.

C. A. Samuelson is planning a fishing trip to Ludington, Mich., about convention time.

W. A. Kennedy was down from Milwaukee Monday, buying material for two carnation houses 23x256. Miss Kennedy accompanied him.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of Amling's, is fishing near Gray's Lake, Wis., and Max Ringier is at home, anticipating an important event.

J. B. Deamud is in southeastern Kansas with a party of gentlemen with whom he is interested in developing some oil property.

E. E. Pieser is taking his vacation a half day at a time this year, going home at noon and spending the pleasant hours with a book under a tree in the park. G. H. Pieser will go into the woods in northern Wisconsin in August for his annual fishing trip.

Herman Lochman, of Bassett & Washburn's force, is a son-in-law of Henry Schweitzer, of Mendota, whose place was destroyed by hail and a tornado July 17.

He visited there Sunday and says the greenhouses and residence are a wreck.

Wietor Bros. say it is a wonder the way the chrysanthemum plants and cuttings sold.

Hugh Woll has returned from two weeks spent with his parents in New York City.

Bowling.

The competition was very close and exciting at the match Tuesday night, Winterson, Hauswirth and Scott each having a chance for sixth place. The latter finally won out by a margin over Winterson of one pin in twenty games. The strain seemed to be too great for some of the old-timers, as will be noted by the score. New pins were responsible for many splits. Following is the record of the concluding series:

Player—	1st.	2d.	3d.	4th.	T'l.
Winterson	120	179	105	125	529
P. J. Hauswirth	170	146	116	140	572
G. Asmus	163	146	177	163	649
Balluff	117	123	180	171	591
Sterrett	135	136	135	129	535
F. Stollery	136	121	126	157	540
G. Stollery	162	163	184	159	668
Lambros	197	119	94	157	567
Scott	152	158	190	137	637

Following is the record for the full twenty games:

Player—	Games.	Total pins.	Av.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business has slightly improved since last week. There are hardly so many flowers coming to town and the demand seems better. The stock of roses has been reinforced by some really fine young Beauties. Samuel S. Pennock is getting some good flowers on fairly long stems, from Robert Scott & Son, that bring the top price. Of the other roses, Kaiserin is the best; a few really fine flowers may be had. Carnations are becoming scarcer, really fine stock being difficult to obtain. Asters are becoming more plentiful, but as yet they are small. Leo Niessen received his first shipment of tiger lilies on Monday. Lilium auratum is in evidence. Sweet peas are on the wane. Valley is hardly up to the mark. Greens are selling slowly.

Various Notes.

Keller Brothers, of Norristown, Pa., makers of flower pots and pans, have changed their firm into a stock company, to be known as the Keller Pottery Company.

George C. Watson, seedsman, has removed from 211 to 259 S. Juniper street.

Edward Reid left this week for an extended business trip through the south and west. He will also visit his home in Dakota.

Myers & Samtman are beginning to cut a few nice Beauties from their young plants. It is understood that they do not expect to plant Queen of Edgely this season.

Miss Miles, who so ably conducts the accounts at the Flower Market, has just returned from a trip to the Delaware Water Gap.

Rain caused the postponement of the baseball game last Saturday.

The street had it that a new assistant had just been secured at the Flower Market. This proved, however, to be a jocose way of saying that Manager Charles E. Meehan had welcomed a new arrival in his family, a little daughter born on Saturday.

F. & H. Mergenthaler have their place in unusually fine condition this season. Their Brides, Maids and Kaiserins, so successful last year, promise even better results next winter.

Wm. Graham, formerly with Hugh Graham, has purchased the seven greenhouses of Julius Reis, at Olney, and is looking for a suitable store to open for himself.

George M. Moss is in financial difficulties and his place is closed.

Bowling.

A team average of 162 pins in a series of twenty-one games rolled on seven different alleys is the proud record of the bowling team that Philadelphia will send to Milwaukee next month. The team will consist of Frank Polites, George M. Moss, S. Adelberger, Robert Kift, Walter Yates, Wm. Robertson and D. T. Connor, substitute. Eleven other players entered the competition and all of them rolled some good games. The contest was the fairest test that ingenuity could devise, but, as the schoolboy explained to his father, "Somebody has to be last," and they couldn't all be winners.

PHIL.

BLUFFTON, IND.—Myers & Co. have put in a gasoline engine to furnish water supply. They will now add one house 18x100 for vegetables. This will give them a total of 12,000 feet of glass.

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y.—Mrs. H. D. Irwin says the season has been very satisfactory, particularly on bedding plants. On the Assembly grounds she planted three large beds of cannas from Conard & Jones. All bedding plants are looking fine, with plenty of rain since June 1.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

THOMAS B. McCLUNIE, the well known landscape gardener of Hartford, Conn., died July 11, aged 77 years.

DAVID W. WRIGHT, the nurseryman, of Portland, Ind., was married to Miss Grace Sutton, at Columbus, O., July 5.

THE Association of American Cemetery superintendents will hold its seventeenth annual convention at Rochester, N. Y., September 8 to 10.

CLYDE L. LEESLEY, formerly assistant superintendent at Graceland cemetery, Chicago, is in charge of the engineering and landscape work at a new cemetery at South Elmhurst, Ill.

E. A. KANST has begun upon his thirty-first year in charge of the propagating and planting for the South Parks system at Chicago. He now has 250,000 shrub cuttings in fine condition in the nursery at Jackson Park.

TRADE AND PROSPECTS.

E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex., writes: "Stock and trade are rapidly increasing in the southwest. Prices are also increasing. The season is very favorable and the grades promise to be high. The outlook for trade in both fall and spring is good; both price and volume will be increased about 10 per cent."

J. G. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md., report: "The condition of nursery stock at this time is all that we could ask for. While we had it extremely wet in the early part of the season, later on it was dry and at this time it is quite seasonable. The stock is making most excellent growth. Our principal items planted last spring were more than three million apple grafts and probably about 200,000 apple seedlings and we have more than a million peach seedlings and a good stock of cherry, plum and quince. Our planting of Kieffer pears last spring was about 200,000, but these have not all grown; in fact, there has been considerable loss all over the country in many kinds of seedlings and grafts planted and we look for a scarcity in nursery stock in certain lines. The prospect for fall trade looks favorable, although there have not been many large orders booked as yet. The feeling seems to be fairly good all over the country, but a little unsettled."

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We have not been bothered by the heat for several weeks and the chances are that the cool weather will stay with us. Flowers are coming in much better of stem and deeper of color than we have had the privilege of seeing for some time. Roses are scarce enough and it will be a few weeks yet before we have a quantity. Carnations are good, and cheap as well. They are selling at about $1.50 per hundred for ordinary sorts and fancy varieties sell at $2 to $3 per hundred. Lilium longiflorum and valley are plentiful and good. Business is quiet in all lines except funeral work. Most of our folks with money to spare are up in the mountains or at the seashore. Quite a few florists are rustivating, also, and they have all earned a few weeks' vacation.

Various Notes.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held its annual outing at San Rafael Park. While the reunion was limited to members, their families and invited guests, the attendance was large. The following constituted the committee of arrangements: Julius Eppstein, chairman; Chas. Baker, F. A. Munro, M. Borkheim and Max Eisner.

H. M. Sanborn, the well known Oakland florist, is on a two weeks' outing in the northern part of the state, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Abbie Sanborn.

F. Ludemann is at present very busy at his Milbrae nursery. He is budding about 30,000 roses for next year's trade and his stock is in splendid condition. His grounds consist of about seventy-five acres and he carries a general nursery stock.

We are to have the G. A. R. Encampment next month and this will stimulate trade in the line of decorating, but as a general thing the florists do not have any particular increase of business in the stores during any of the big reunions of which San Francisco has a goodly share.

A visit to Sutro Heights, near the Ocean Beach, shows these popular grounds in good shape. Many thousands of plants have been bedded out this season and the effect of such a quantity of blooms is very striking. J. T. Murphy is in charge and is one of the pioneer gardeners of California. He spent many years as head gardener to Senator Stanford, founder of Stanford University, at his mansion on California street.

MURPHYSBORO, ILL.—Lewis R. Allen is building a house 19x70 for roses.

EARLVILLE, ILL.—Charles Hoss, mayor of Earlville, would like to correspond with a competent, energetic young greenhouse man who would like to go into business. There is a fine opportunity to establish a profitable business here.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—At the World's Fair work has begun on the Horticulture building. It will be finished before winter and the conservatories will be used for tender plant exhibits arriving this fall. April 30 next is the opening day of the exposition.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 22d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

VISITED LOUISVILLE.—John M. Clark, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago.

ARNOLD RINGIER, with W. W. Barnard & Co., is in Bermuda looking after lily business.

HOT weather in the California seed growing district has injured crops during the past ten days.

JESSE E. NORTHRUP, of Minneapolis, is about again, after being laid up with a ruptured blood vessel in his leg.

VISITED ST. PAUL.—Max Wilhelmi, Lawrence, Kan.; Louis Goeppinger, representing Peignaux & Lorin, Angers, France.

ORDERS for Harrisii have been booked at 20 to 25 per cent less than last year, although the crop promises to be fully that much less than a year ago. Deliveries are now at hand.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—E. Leedham, the bulb grower, has sold an interest in his business to Messrs. J. T. Lowry and Theo. Wust, and it will be continued as the Leedham Bulb Co. Ten acres of additional land will be secured, making sixteen acres of fine sediment soil for bulb growing. A new house 30x320 will be added to the present one, which is 28x150. The company will grow mainly daffodils, gladioli and dahlias, largely for the wholesale trade. The gladioli and dahlias now in bloom show that the collection of varieties has been most wisely made, and some of Mr. Leedham's seedlings are of really great merit.

PHILADELPHIA.—On July 18 this part of the state was visited by a very heavy down-pour of rain, accompanied by a high wind, which did great injury to the tomato and fruit crops. Corn looks as though a roller had passed over it. Many fine fields of tomatoes had the green fruit threshed from the vines. Egg plants likewise suffered. Spinach seed is not giving more than one-half the expected yield, rutabagas not more than forty per cent. We have one thing to encourage us, however, and that is the farmer and market gardener are realizing very good prices for all their produce. Tomatoes, peas and potatoes have not brought such uniformly high prices for years.

ONION CROP PROSPECTS.

The Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., sends out its usual report on onion seed prospects, from which the following is summarized:

New York.—Acreage a slight increase over last year. Drought necessitated much re-seeding. Maggot doing considerable damage, but except in Orange county, where there are 1,000 acres of Red Globes, the conditions are generally rather more favorable than at this date last year.

Ohio.—Acreage considerably increased, Hardin county alone having 700 acres more than last year. Largely Yellow Globes. Some loss has occurred, but crops looking rather better than last year at same date.

Indiana.—Total acreage about as last year, about half Red and half Yellow Globes. Considerable loss by failure to germinate, floods, wireworms, etc., and some re-seeding necessary. Many stands thin, but conditions better than a year ago.

Michigan.—Acreage reduced 25 per cent and crops hardly looking as well as at this time in 1902. Conditions in Wisconsin and Minnesota on a par with last year, at Chicago a little better, in New England not so good as a year ago.

NEBRASKA CROP REPORT.

The very general and unusual climatic conditions have not escaped us, and owing to the continued cold weather, excessive rains, floods, hail storms, etc., the planting season has been very unfavorable for all kinds of crops. We were unusually fortunate in arranging nice acreages, but above conditions caused a great deal of late replanting, and the limited supply of stock seed has in some instances materially reduced contracted acreages, which will necessarily create some shortages.

Both sweet and field corns are very backward and much will depend upon the character of our fall season as to the proper ripening down of crops. With favorable conditions, judging from reports received, we ought to be in fair shape on sweet corns, with the exception of Early Mammoth, Late Mammoth, and Chicago Market. The two former are partial failures and the latter variety was drowned out.

Cucumbers from present indications promise well. However, we have lost our crops of Giant Pera and Fordhook Pickle, and probably a few odd varieties will be short.

In the muskmelon line we experienced much trouble in securing a stand. The striped beetle is also causing considerable damage, and while we have some nice acreages remaining, a general shortage may be looked for. The following varieties are reported failures: Arlington Nutmeg, Columbus, Chicago Market, Delmonico, Long Island Beauty, Jersey Belle, Round Yellow cantaloupe, Surprise, Shumway's Giant, and unless we have an exceptionally fine melon season other varieties will be in short supply. A portion of our watermelon district has been hailed out. Some of the crops have been replanted later, but it is a question if they will mature merchantable seed.

Varieties of winter squash and the larger kinds of pumpkins are late and backward, and it is difficult to surmise what the outcome will be. All crops of a late character will be so largely governed by fall conditions that it is impossible to arrive at early definite conclusions.

BALTIMORE.

Storms of great violence follow each other every few days, and as a result outdoor stock does not flourish, although in the intervals there is delightful weather. There is general complaint of the poor quality of the White Cochet roses, which are the great stand-by in this section for summer use for design work. All last week, although the demand was not excessive, the supply of flowers was not equal to the requirements, which were almost exclusively for funeral purposes. The Elks are in town this week. Whether it will add anything to the volume of business remains to be seen.

Various Items.

Mary G. Vincent, the widow of Richard Vincent, Sr., an old-time florist of the eastern section of the city, and mother of Richard Vincent, Jr., the well known plant grower of White Marsh, and of Thomas Vincent, the florist on West Baltimore street, died July 18 at an advanced age.

Gilbert H. Patterson, who has been quite ill, is rapidly convalescing. He has been a pretty regular attendant at the S. A. F. conventions and, although well along in years and no longer in active business, takes a great interest in all that pertains to the trade. For many years Mr. Patterson was gardener to Johns Hopkins, whose estate is now Clifton Park and who left his millions to the university and hospital which bear his name. Mr. Patterson was celebrated for his skill in grape forcing, which in his day were a principal product on every gentleman's place where there was a glass structure. Now this culture seems almost entirely abandoned.

B.

CLEVELAND.

The market reports show about the same results as last week, the only demand being for funeral work, and not very much of that. Prices remain about the same as last reported.

J. W. Wilson has several houses planted with carnations and is pushing the work along rapidly. His plants in the field and those he has already planted are as fine as any grower could wish for. Mr. Wilson believes in early planting and it pays, judging by the quantity and quality of blooms sent in from his place.

The large brick stack of the F. R. Williams Company seems to be an attraction for lightning, as it has been struck three times within the past year, and twice last month, each time knocking off a different corner and scattering a few bricks around on the houses.

Frederick Aul reports his chrysanthemums in fine condition, and he has almost finished planting. His carnations in the field are fine.

Casper Aul is still showing the effect of his collision with the street car but thinks he will soon recover the full use of his leg. His stock looks fine, and shows his usual care.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

We are having a spell of cool, rainy weather, which has had quite an effect on the supply of stock. Business has assumed its usual summer aspect and the demand for stock is very light. The wholesale houses are receiving gladioli in large quantities, so with lilies, Beauties and asters we are able to help ourselves out very nicely. Carnations are rather scarce and poor. Roses are somewhat improved and look much better than a week ago.

The only florists who are really busy are the ones who are packing valises for their vacations. The following have already left the city: John Baldinger and Wm. Hall are at Niagara Falls. George Marshall is fishing at Conneaut, Ohio. John Bader and daughter are at Atlantic City. Christ Hansen, salesman for Wm. Lauch, is at Ocean Beach.

Notes.

The Florists' Club picnic, held July 16, was a success. The attendance was large and everybody had a good, jolly time. G. & J. W. Ludwig did nobly; they closed up their Allegheny market stand at noon, which allowed all their employees to attend the picnic.

H. L. Blind & Bros. are now cutting some good longiflorum lilies.

Last Wednesday Louis Weigen, a gardener and florist of Murray Hill avenue, had a narrow escape from burning to death. Louis had $300 which he kept in his bureau drawer, and in saving it from the burning building he was forced to leap from a window to the ground.

Harry Dillemath, of Toronto, Ont., is visiting his parents at Bakerstown, Pa. Hoo-Hoo.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

We have been having all sorts of weather since last writing, but now it is all that can be desired. We get showers enough to keep everything in good shape and plenty of warm, sunny days. Business has taken a decided drop the past two weeks. There is a little funeral work once in a while, and that is about all. Sweet peas are getting scarce. They were very plentiful for about one week, A. B. Hathaway having so many that he invited children off the street to come in and help themselves to all they wanted. He says he wishes he had them as plentiful now; it would be no trouble to sell them. Asters are beginning to show themselves, John Hennessey being the first to bring them in.

A. B. Hathaway is erecting a new house and has his chrysanthemums all benched in it. R. S. Hoxie, of Mattapoisett, one of our suburbs, is also adding one more house to his range.

S. S. Peckham, of Fairhaven, will have a float in the trades procession during the celebration of Old Home week in Fairhaven July 27.

H. V. Sowle reports business very good in his new store.

W. G. Kroeber has left us and gone in business in Danbury, Conn.

Wm. P. Pierce has moved his family to the seashore for the summer.

Mr. Zirkmann, of Sigmund Geller, G. W. Golden, of Reed & Keller, New York, and F. T. Baldwin, of Foxboro, Mass., were recent visitors.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Samuel Murray says trade was never better at this season of the year. He is feeling fine.

RUTHERFORD, N. J.—Bobbink & Atkins have mailed their new fall catalogue and report prospects bright for a big season's business.

OMAHA, NEB.—L. Henderson, secretary, has mailed to all in the trade invitations to the annual picnic of the Nebraska Florists' Society, to be held at Courtland Beach, July 23.

TACONY, PA.—Isaac Layer warns florists not to employ a man by the name of Thomas Weiser, a German, speaking good English; 5 feet 6 inches in height; stoop-shouldered; dark complexioned; 45 years of age; baldheaded; mole under right eye; draws his words in talking; has worked in Camden, N. J., Olney and Ridley Park, Delaware county; last employed by Isaac Layer, Tacony, Philadelphia. During absence of family July 5 he ransacked the house, taking jewelry and money valued at $135.

DAVENPORT, IA.—Chas. Danacher, who recently resumed the greenhouse business he sold to Otto Klingbiel, will shortly open a down-town store.

HOUGHTON, MICH.—The Lutey Floral Company is now in its handsome new store, with new fixtures in curly birch. A handsome soda fountain is one of the adjuncts and on the opening day A. E. Lutey treated every flower buyer to a glass of soda and gave every soda drinker a carnation. A conservatory 25x50 is now being built.

Good Fortune is the Chum of Opportunity.

This is your chance to lay in a stock of Godfrey Aschmann's tip-top Araucaria Excelsa. Do it now and they will help to fill your treasure box; they will be growing into money for you while you're asleep. We are headquarters for this great favorite among decorative plants. Our houses are full of choice April importations—no seedlings—raised in Belgium from top cuttings only. Here is my very lowest quotation. Who can beat such stock as I offer for the money?

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

The book treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

It is a book that you need in your business just as you need any other useful labor and money saving implement or device.

The price is $5.00, carriage prepaid.

If you have not already obtained a copy of this book order one now.

If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

10,000 KENTIAS, fine, from $50.00 to $150.00 per 100.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

There is "something doing" all the time, so that business is not dead by any means. Flowers are scarce and each day finds everything salable closed out. Good roses are as hard to obtain as at any time during the year. Very ordinary stock sells at $4 to $6 per 100 at wholesale, while the retailer still asks $1.50 per dozen, or mid-winter prices. Beauties are particularly scarce. We never knew the time when the demand for Beauties was so good in the summer. Carnations are still of fair quality, but are decreasing in quantity right along.

Longiflorum and Harrisii lilies come in very handily for funeral work. Sweet peas are very late this season and also scarce. Four dollars per 1,000 is the present price.

Various Notes.

The growers are busy replanting and repairing. Mums will be more generally planted than usual, owing to the impetus given by our little flower show last year.

There are not many new buildings being erected, owing to the high price of labor and material. Swanson is adding a new rose house, and Holm & Olson have the glass and material for another plant house. May & Co. are renovating their oldest range, putting in new bars and posts, and repainting their entire range.

The Minneapolis brethren have cut loose from St. Paul and will hold their picnic at Excelsior, on the shores of Lake Minnetonka on July 23. The St. Paul florists will hold theirs the same day at Wildwood, on White Bear lake.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, returning from an eastern trip, still thinks his native town the best of them all.

Gust Colberg, with L. L. May & Co., has been on a vacation at Chisago Lakes.

Otto Hiersekorn is in Germany.

1903 Florists' Peonies 1903

Sept. 1 to 15 delivery. We offer the following list of Peonies which have been grown by us for several years for cut flower purposes. The stock has been carefully grown, bloomed the third year and rogued while in bloom. All are good bloomers and shippers and all varieties have been culled out and destroyed that do not flower freely. Prices include packing and a discount of 5 per cent. will be given on all orders where cash is received with the order. The wet Fall and Spring have been very favorable for the growth of peony roots and our stock will be found in excellent condition.

Officinalis Section.

These are the earliest to bloom of all the peonies and for this reason are very desirable, as they furnish cut flowers a week before the Chinensis Section are in bloom.

No. 5. Officinalis Rosea Superba. Brilliant salmon pink tinged rose, 5 to 6-inch bloom; a pure, clear, true shade of pink without any magenta; the most pleasing of the officinalis section; the first good, early, clear pink peony. 500 plants, 3 to 5 eyes, at $25.00 per 100.

No. 208. Officinalis Rubra. The old-fashioned deep crimson peony of Colonial days. 1000 strong plants, 6 to 8 eyes, at $10.00 per 100.

No. 212. Officinalis Rosea. The old-fashioned deep pink variety of our grandmothers' gardens. 500 strong clumps, 6 to 8 eyes, at $10.00 per 100.

No. 198. Officinalis Mutabilis Alba. Opens rose flesh, fading to blush white; very double 5-inch bloom; the earliest white peony. 300 good plants, 3 to 5 eyes, $20.00 per 100.

Chinensis Section.

This is the most useful of the different sections. The flowers are larger than the Officinalis and are borne upon longer, stronger stems and are richly fragrant. The blooms are especially valuable for cut flower purposes and are consumed in enormous quantities in the cut flower markets of Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago and other large cities. The sorts we offer have been thoroughly tested for a number of years and the blooms sold upon the New York, Philadelphia, Buffalo and other markets where they are in steady demand.

Early White Varieties.

No. 4. Queen Victoria. Guards light rose, center creamy white, with a few petals edged or tipped with light pink, flower finishing white. Good grower; 24-inch stem, 5 to 5½-inch bloom; very free, fragrant, ships well and is a good keeper; a standard double white peony for all purposes. 200 strong plants, 4 to 5 eyes, at $25.00 per 100.

No. 200. Achillea. Guards delicate rose, center delicate rose flesh fading to creamy white; vigorous, erect grower; strong stem, 30 to 36 inches long; bloom 6 inches in diameter; a chaste, beautiful variety; good keeper and shipper. 300 plants, 3 to 4 eyes, at $20.00 per 100.

No. 270. Marie Lemoine. (Early variety.) Guards delicate rose with center of blush white, flower finishes a tender blush white; strong 30 to 34-inch stem; erect, vigorous habit; 5-inch bloom; delicate, pleasing fragrance; good keeper; abundant bloomer. 200 fine roots, 3 to 5 eyes, $20.00 per 100.

Early Pink Varieties.

No. 201. Grandiflorum Roseum. (Sometimes known as L L L Pink.) Bright rose with silvery reflex, general effect clear, bright silvery rose; vigorous grower; 28-inch stem; 5-inch bloom; strong, rich fragrance; exceptionally free bloomer; good keeper and shipper. 400 strong plants, 6 to 8 eyes, $20.00 per 100.

Early Pink Varieties.

No. 267. Golden Harvest. Very large tufted bloom, guard petals blush pink with a collar of lemon yellow petals which fade to nearly white, with a blush white tuft in the center, a few of the center petals tipped with light crimson. Good strong grower, 18 to 24 inches in height, a very striking variety, blooms deliciously fragrant. 150 one-year-old plants at $40.00 per 100.

Mid-Season White Varieties.

No. 9. Pulcherrima. (Early mid-season.) Guards white, veined rose pink, center very full, creamy white; strong, erect grower; 20 to 24-inch stem; 5 to 5½-inch bloom; very fragrant, free bloomer; ships and keeps well; a first-class white for all purposes. 400 plants, 4 to 8 eyes, at $20.00 per 100.

No. 203. (Sometimes sold as Humea Alba.) (Early mid-season.) Guard delicate silvery pink, center creamy yellow fading to ivory white; vigorous grower; 30 to 36-inch stem; 6 to 6½-inch bloom; rich, delicate fragrance; very free bloomer; ships and keeps well; one of the best of its class. 100 one-year plants, 3 to 5 eyes, at $30.00 per 100.

No. 210. Festiva Alba. Called by Chicago growers, "Drop White." Large, full rose shaped bloom; color ivory white, with now and then a spot of crimson on the center petals; medium grower about two feet in height, bloom 5 to 6 inches in diameter. This is the variety which is usually substituted for the more valuable Festiva Maxima, and is grown about the Chicago market more largely than any other white peony. 150 fine one-year-old plants at $40.00 per 100.

Mid-Season Pink Varieties.

No. 1. Lohengrin. Guards deep rose, center light rose with a few crimson tipped petals; vigorous grower; 18 to 24-inch stem; 5 to 6-inch bloom; delicate, rich fragrance; free bloomer; good keeper and shipper. 100 plants, 4 to 6 eyes, at $15.00 per 100.

No. 206. Baron Rothschild. Guards deep rose with reddish tinge, center lighter rose shaded with rosy cream; vigorous grower; 26 to 30-inch stem; 5-inch bloom; exceptionally free bloomer. 100 strong plants, 6 to 8 eyes, at $6.00 per 100.

No. 3. Queen Emma. Guard petals light rose pink, center opens creamy white, fading to blush white, with a tuft of flesh pink petals in center; flower 5 inches in diameter; strong, 24-inch stem; good grower; free bloomer; keeps and ships well. 100 strong plants, 3 to 5 eyes, at $20.00 per 100.

Late Pink Variety.

No. 11. Humei. (Syns. Humei Rosea, Edulis and Thorbeckii.) Entire bloom pure, bright, deep rose; very vigorous grower; 24 to 28-inch stem; 6 to 7 inches deep; full, heavy bloom; strong, rich, cinnamon fragrance; one of the finest colored of the very late peonies. 500 strong plants, 4 to 8 eyes, at $8.00 per 100.

Late Red Variety.

No. 259. Grandiflora Rubra. Entire flower deep blood red, forming a huge globe 7 to 8 inches in diameter; strong, vigorous grower; stands handling; ships and keeps well; 30 to 34-inch stem; one of the latest as well as one of the largest. 200 strong roots, 4 to 5 eyes, at $20.00 per 100.

No. 283. Richardson's Rubra Superba. Large, very double, finely formed, fragrant bloom, color dark crimson red. One of the most robust plants that we have. Free bloomer, being the latest peony to bloom with us, fine blooms being cut this year on the 5th of July. This is considered the most valuable peony of its color on account of its extreme lateness and freedom of bloom. 300 strong one-year-old plants at $40.00 per 100.

To get the best results Peonies should be planted as early in September as possible.

Orders accepted strictly in rotation. 5 per cent. discount for cash with order.

BOSTON.

It takes a better looking man than myself to gather news from the situation here. Men do not gather grapes from thorns nor figs from thistles any easier in the twentieth century than they did in the first. The different wholesale and retail concerns of the city open every morning, go through all the forms of doing business with a reduced number of workers, close at 5 or 6 o'clock and go home or elsewhere. There is not much coming into the market in the way of flowers and most of the receipts are lacking in quality. Carnations, roses and sweet peas are not so plentiful, but small white flowers are much more so, as a lot of outdoor candytuft feverfew and so forth has arrived and sells very cheaply.

Jackson Dawson, the widely known and popular superintendent of the Arnold Arboretum, has our sympathy in the death of Mrs. Dawson. She had been an invalid for a number of years, but her demise came very unexpectedly.

J. S. MANTER.

TORONTO.

With the return of cooler weather, trade is picking up considerably and our retail men report business good for this time of the year. Carnations have been a glut during the last few weeks and quality not anything to brag about. We regret very much to note one of our up-to-date flower stores placarding the windows with "Roses 15 cents a dozen," "Carnations 10 cents a dozen." While this slaughtering business was left to the department stores the florists' trade of Toronto and the public in general did not pay much attention, for, as an eastern florist remarked, "the stock they handled and the way they handled it did not warrant better prices."

The Toronto Floral Co. is at present cutting some fine Brides and Maids from the stock that was cut back earlier in the season. They are also sending in some fine lilies.

The Georgetown Floral Co. is rushing work on the new greenhouses and expects to have them ready to plant by the middle of August.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The weather continues fine, but rain is needed badly and outdoor stock is suffering. Business still holds out very good for this time of the year. The majority of the stock goes to make up funeral work, so white flowers are most in demand. The moderate weather has helped the quality of stock greatly, especially is it noticeable in roses, which have good color and larger and more solid buds. All in all stock of all kinds is scarce. Of course there is not a great quantity of stock coming in, but taken all together it represents quite a little trade.

Some very good white carnations are still to be had and they are nearly always ordered in advance. Pink ones are not quite so fortunate, but they nearly always sell. There is quite a demand for American Beauties and not nearly enough to satisfy it. There are no other red roses to speak of.

Some very good gladioli are now coming in which sell well. Asters will soon be with us and it looks as if they will be fine this year. A few of the first are already being cut, but they are not very good. It is yet too soon for the aster bug to get in its work, but several growers have met with severe loss through thrips, which have used up large fields of them.

Sweet peas are now somewhat scarce and consequently there is a good demand for them. Smilax is a little scarce, but there is plenty of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengerii; also a fair supply of adiantum.

Notes.

The month of July is rapidly nearing a close and business has been very good so far. The entire past season has been one of extreme prosperity for the florist, and now the much needed rest and recreation is near at hand—the trip to the S. A. F. convention at Milwaukee. It looks as though there will be quite a party from this city. Everybody is talking about it and it's a sure thing that all those who can possibly get away will be there.

The Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., managed by Mr. Loeber, has discontinued business. Mr. Loeber states that it was an easy matter to get business, but the trouble lay with the mills from which he purchased his supplies. They seemed unable to turn out the goods.

"Thripscide" (REGISTERED) Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

1 lb. Tin Can.....$.25
5 lb. Tin Can.....1.00
25 lb. Sealed Box.....4.50
100 lb. Sealed Box.....16.50

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Some Outdoor Crops.

We see in several trade notes of last week's issue that "sweet peas are almost over and stems very short." Expert growers of this favorite flower consider they should now be at their best. You have them grown and staked and all the labor done, and it is a pity to give up all care and let them go to seed, for I have seen more than one season when we were very thankful for a good picking of sweet peas during September. It assuredly pays to keep at least a part of your crop growing. They should be mulched with two or three inches of stable manure between the rows. If a heavy rain does not occur, then give them a good soaking at least once a week, but the most important thing of all is to keep the flowers picked off, whether you use them or not. Flowering is not so exhausting to a plant, but bearing seed is the end of life with all annuals, so keep all the flowers and seed pods picked.

Asters will soon be in their glory. A deep, rich soil is of course the main thing in their cultivation, but even with all this, if a hot, dry spell of a few weeks should come, they will suffer greatly, and water is their salvation. It is needless to say here that when I say a good soaking I mean it. A daily sprinkling, just enough to wet the surface, is, I think, worse than nothing for any plant. Give them a soaking once a week and hoe before the ground is baked, if there is room left to hoe. If the growth so covers the ground that you cannot hoe them there is no need of it, because the sun does not reach the soil. The dahlia is another plant that needs watering and a mulching of a few inches of manure will help to make the watering doubly beneficial.

Large growers of gladioli water their fields. This I know to be a fact from Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., who has told me so, and he cultivates forty acres and perhaps more. To water such a vast area he must have great facilities for applying the water, as well as lots of it. But you can easily water a quarter of an acre. I have seen gladioli almost shrivel up and the flowers very poor things during the months of August and September, for the want of water. While speaking of gladioli, this very morning when cutting some spikes I ran across a few stumps that had been cut down to within a few inches of the ground, flowers, stems, leaves and everything else. Some unthinking young man did it, but it is barbarous. How can you expect a new corm to form and mature without any foliage? The spike is all you want to cut and you can do that without the loss of any, or very little, foliage. You may have the same ignorant or unthinking young man yourself. If so, don't swear at him. Once corrected, he will not do it again.

Watering vs. Cultivating.

In connection with outdoor watering, J. Y. Lambert in last week's issue, in a communication relative to watering field carnations, says among other things that he has always watered his carnations in the field as he does in the houses, "when water is needed," and I suppose he has been successful and never had stem-rot. So far, so good, and if Mr. Lambert has grown fine plants in the field there is not the slightest reason for him to change his methods, but it seems to me he is rather mistaken in his views of the result of frequent hoeing and the resulting moisture that rises to the roots of the plant. I quote the following from Mr. Lambert's article: "I suppose it will be conceded that cultivation will not produce moisture. At best, if the cultivation be shallow enough, a layer of fine soil will be secured at the surface which will prevent rapid evaporation and so aid in conserving the moisture in the soil. It also prevents the growth of fungus at or just below the surface."

I always thought it was universally believed that hoeing and keeping the surface loose and frequently disturbed, which I presume Mr. L. means when he says "cultivation," is just what does produce moisture at the roots. Then again, the layer of fine soil on the surface, such as is produced by hoeing, is what allows and assists evaporation, the very reverse of preventing it. In fact, as I understand the theory and practice of this important operation, the more free and rapid the evaporation from the surface, the freer and more constant is the rise of moisture from the earth beneath. In any ordinary soil, even in hard clays, not so, how could our little plants exist in the field for two months without a drop of rain? They may not grow much, yet they live and grow some. And it is from the moisture stored deep below the surface that they live, and we hoe the ground loose and friable to bring it up. In all this, mind, I am not saying aught against a thorough watering when needed, even for carnations, provided you can do it thoroughly and then hoe at the right time. But without water, deep and frequent hoeing is the thing to do.

Hollyhocks.

I regret to say that although we frequently syringed and before planting bathed our hollyhock plants in copper solution, they are still suffering from the dreadful fungus, which about ruins them, and yet you see these handsome stalks growing against the wall of some cottagers' gardens, healthy and vigorous. Yet we are not discouraged. We did not begin with the copper soon enough. This fall we will begin at birth, or directly after their seed leaves unfold. Now is a good time to sow the seed, whether you are going to winter them in a cold frame or in pots in a cool house. It is also a favorable time to sow many of the herbaceous plants. They will be large enough to winter in frame and plant out next spring.

Azaleas.

This is about the time when your azaleas plunged out of doors need watching. They are, or should be, still growing. You may have thought when you plunged them out two weeks ago that they had lots of room, but they soon fill up, if healthy. Don't let them crowd. Plunge them over, and while so doing put half an inch of half-rotted dairy manure with a third of its bulk of bone meal on the surface of the pots. In very hot weather one watering in twenty-four there is more or less moisture rising to the surface to replace evaporation. If after a rain or a watering the surface becomes baked over, there is very little evaporation going on and consequently capillary attraction, i. e., the rising of moisture from below the surface, ceases. The deeper you hoe and the deeper you plow, the faster does the moisture rise to the roots of the plants. If this were hours is not enough. Water in the evening and by noon the next day they will want more. Of course I allude to those in the broad sun, and that is the only place for them. And don't think or remember that any old woman gardener knew anything when he or she said it hurts or burns a plant to water it when the sun is shining. A plant in a pot is like yourself—it wants a drink when Crimson Ramblers.

There are those who grow their forcing Crimson Ramblers under glass in pots from spring until midsummer, and by that time they have made as much growth as is desirable. If this is the case and you have three or four good, long canes, they should be moved out of doors, where they ripen up the wood. Plunge them and keep them well watered for another six weeks. They want no sudden ripening. It is not until October that you want to shorten up on water. Then you can withhold moisture, except enough to keep them from shriveling, because if kept wet and a warm spell should come on they will break at the eyes of the wood made this summer, and that you don't want. WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE ROSES OF OREGON.

Noticing the request of your Portland correspondent, that I give my impressions of roses and their development in Oregon, I herewith send you a few notes.

In the first place, it seems to me that climatic conditions are all that could be desired for growing the hybrid tea and hybrid perpetual varieties to perfection, and these conditions are not materially different from those in the more favored parts of England and central Germany, where roses grow and luxuriate most satisfactorily.

Having seen at Benjamin Cant's, in England, some of as fine La France as could be desired, I was quite surprised to find this famous old variety growing and blooming in our own northwest, even better than at Mr. Cant's or at any other place that I had visited in Europe.

Mr. Sibson, an English gentleman resident in Portland, has a crescent-shaped hedge of La France encircling the upper side of his rose garden, which for health, vigor, luxuriant foliage and fine flowers, excels all attempts that I have ever seen made at growing this charming variety. In this gentleman's garden are to be seen all the finest of the dark hybrid perpetual varieties—in fact Mr. Sibson succeeds in growing to almost perfection, varieties that require the greatest skill and care to do even moderately well in other favored locations. Here I saw growing Prince Camille de Rohan, La Rosiere, A. K. Williams, Souv. de Pierre Notting, Xavier Olibo, Louis Van Houtte, Earl of Dufferin, Horace Vernet, and other varieties of like character, sorts that do not thrive under any but the most favored conditions.

One thing is quite in evidence, and that is the standing of the varieties sent out by Alex. Dickson & Son, of Ireland. This firm's introductions seem to thrive amazingly well in Oregon, and quite as well in the state of Washington. Lady Helen Stuart, Marguerite Dickson, Earl of Dufferin, Helen Keller, Marchioness of Londonderry and Mrs. Sharman Crawford were ideal and I fancy quite as large and as good as in their own Irish home.

Mildred Grant, one of Dickson's latest hybrid tea varieties, was the rose sensation of the city during my stay. It was asserted that Liberty grew perfectly in the open and I am quite prepared to believe it, for I saw it growing well at F. Malmo's Nursery in Seattle, in the open ground.

As to tea roses, many of the varieties of this section do well and luxuriate, but my observation does not warrant the belief that all of the teas would thrive there. I am inclined to think that the more tender-leaved varieties like Bride, Bridesmaid, Devonensis, Etoile de Lyon—varieties easily subject to mildew might not do so well, owing to the prevailing lower temperature at night. Varieties that do phenomenally well along the North Pacific coast are Pres. Carnot, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, White La France, Duchess of Albany, Vicomtesse Folkestone, Mme. Abel Chatenay, Prince of Bulgarie and Ulrich Brunner. This last variety cannot be equaled as grown at Portland, by even the most skillful culture under glass in the eastern part of the United States.

A word about porch and climbing roses in this same section. Mme. Alfred Carriere is unquestionably the first on the list. This rose is a marvel and quite fills the ideal of a climbing variety, such a wealth of bloom and every flower perfect. One of the sights that I shall never forget, was the fine bush adorning the house of Frederick Holman, at Portland. A cut of this beautiful rose, reproduced from a photograph, gives only an imperfect idea of its loveliness.

The Fortune's Double, white and yellow, literally cover porch and wall, as well as their own foliage, with their great wealth of bloom. I can readily imagine that Gruss an Teplitz will be one of their most valuable additions when it gets disseminated; it should prove a fine pillar or porch variety.

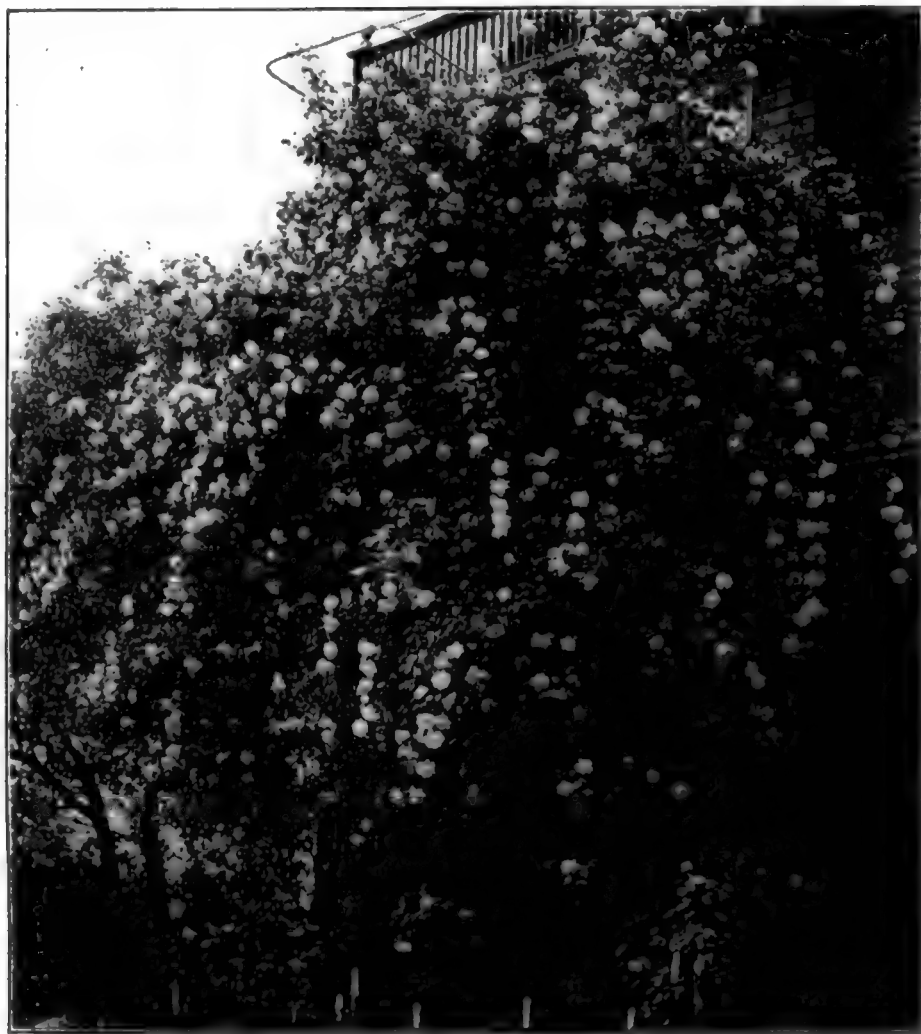

Mr. Holman, who is an amateur enthusiast, has one of the finest collections of roses in Portland and it is a great treat to have the pleasure of inspecting the large number of all the latest and best varieties. A great rose display is being planned in connection with the Lewis and Clark celebration in 1905; in fact, it is to be the main feature of the exposition.

It would be well if the florists could hold our national meeting in Portland at that time. It would give the profession a fine outing; they would see the finest rose blooms that America can produce; they could measure up the possibilities of our great and glorious country as in no other way. Let the itinerary be via the Northern Pacific, taking in the Yellowstone National Park, going; then journey up Puget Sound, taking in Tacoma, Seattle, Victoria and start home from Vancouver, B. C., over the Canadian Pacific railroad.

The views along the route baffle human speech to portray—nothing like it in all the world! A dozen Switzerlands could be rolled into the Canadian Rockies and the Selkirk range, and they would never be missed. The trip outlined would be historic in the lives of our membership, and it is not beyond realization financially—$55 for the round trip is the excursion rate this year, from Chicago and return.

I am sure we would find a hearty welcome, for there are no more hospitable members than those residing on the Pacific slope, from Los Angeles on the south to Vancouver on the north. The writer is debtor to a host of florist friends; many kindnesses and courtesies received were among the pleasantest incidents of the journey.

Seasonable Hints.

During this warm weather, and while we are likely to have it comparatively dry also, is the proper season for repairing roofs, etc. A systematic and thorough going over now will save a lot of trouble and worry when the cold fall rains and frosts begin. If the work is left till September or later it cannot be done in such an efficient manner, as the wood is liable to absorb too much moisture to allow the putty or mastic to take a hold.

Where the roofs are old and the putty rotten, it is sometimes most profitable to strip out the glass, clean and paint the sash bars and reset. This involves a little more time and outlay than patching does, but if the work is done carefully the roof will be tight and dry for a year or two longer, and the better quality of the cut and the satisfaction obtained will amply compensate for the increased outlay, as there are few conditions which prove so unsatisfactory to a rose grower as a leaky and draughty roof.

Another and less expensive way to make an old roof tight is to run either mastic or soft putty along the sides of the glass, taking care to fill every crevice. Soft English putty, with an addition of one-fifth white lead and linseed oil and made thin enough to run easily from the putty bulb, makes an excellent and lasting job.

Particular care should be taken to see that the roofs are tight at the junction of roof and gutter, as this is where the cold air is most liable to pour in and create the conditions most favorable to the germination of mildew spores.

This class of work is tedious and if the weather is hot, very tiresome and trying, and requires patience and care, and it should be entrusted to none but careful and painstaking help. Painting and a general renovating, if necessary, should also be attended to while the weather is good. Alterations and repairing of piping, cleaning out boilers and putting fire boxes in working order should also have our attention. Ventilators also should be examined and readjusted if necessary.

Having everything in good working order before the cold weather commences, will simplify the work and reduce it to the usual winter routine without friction.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Culture Under Glass.

As soon as your plants are established and all shade removed, your attention will be directed towards their culture under glass. Any attempt at the production of flowers should be put aside for some time if a variety is to be shown at its best during the period when most in demand. The object of early housing is to produce that condition in the plants whereby they will readily respond to demands made upon them during the winter months; consequently we must handle them in such a way that no waste of energy will occur, but rather that more be added.

In my notes of June 18 my ideas on size of plants were given. I will further state that a plant of this size in completing its growth in the bench gets so firmly established by blooming time, also gathers unto itself such a supply of energy, that it is far ahead of one of the same size housed a month or six weeks later. By the same size is meant one taken from the field equal to the size to which the earlier housed one has grown.

The check received in lifting has the effect of inducing buds to form before the shoots have attained a desirable length and to allow these buds to develop into blooms, which are practically worthless, is not consistent with the saving of energy. On the other hand the cutting back of shoots before the buds have attained a fair size will result in a check and a cluster of weak shoots. So then, to obtain the best results we must plan this operation to hit upon the happy medium.

Go over the beds twice a week, topping only those shoots on which the buds have reached a diameter of three-eighths of an inch, and do not top more than two shoots on a plant at one time. In about a month, once a week will answer until finally, as the blooming time draws near and the stems grow longer, the operation will cease.

Each variety must be studied as to its inclination in producing long shoots, also judgment must be used by each grower in meeting his particular needs. Following this system of topping is conducive to the continuous blooming quality so much desired, while the topping of every shoot on a plant at one time produces an opposite effect.

Supports of any kind are best left off for some time yet, as free access to the soil should be had in keeping it broken up. Care must be taken not to disturb the roots by cultivating too deeply. Any plants showing the least sign of stem-rot should be removed, together with a good amount of soil around them. We pot a quantity of each variety in 5 or 6-inch pots, for use in replanting any losses. This maintains an even stand of plants, which always looks better and pays better than to allow any vacant spots in the bench.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Syringing in the House.

The question of how much to syringe the newly planted carnations, and how long to keep it up, is of great importance. You should strive to keep your plants in good shape, with just as little syringing as possible and each time you syringe you should use just as little water as you can and do the work well. Mr. Osborn said correctly last week that you should not shoot the water straight at the plants. Throw it up as high as the roof will allow, in a fine spray, and let it come down in the shape of a mist. In that way the plants will get the benefit of it and the soil will gradually dry out enough so that it can be stirred after a few days, and it should be done just as soon as it is dry enough. Keeping the soil on the dry side promotes root action, and the plants should be watered rather sparingly for a few weeks, but you must not allow them to suffer.

I find that the third and fourth days are usually the most trying on the plants. After the second day the vitality stored up in the plant is usually pretty well used up and the roots, having not yet taken hold, are made to supply the plant with nourishment. So it is up to you to keep the plant fresh by syringing. Frequent light syringings are most effective then. If you get them through the first four days without much wilting you can usually count on good success. After that time you should gradually diminish your syringing as rapidly as the plants will stand it, always noting carefully that they do not suffer for want of it.

By the end of a week they will usually be able to get along with only one or two sprayings a day, and then is when you should begin to take off shade. Take off about a third at first and if the plants do not suffer in a couple of days take off another third, and at the end of a week you can remove it all. If a rain should happen along about the time you want to begin reducing the shade and it washes it all off, don't make the mistake of thinking that it saved you the job of taking the shade off. Many a fine lot of plants has been almost ruined in that way. The sun comes out after the rain as strong as ever and the plants are unable to bear it. You should at once put back a light shade and then take that off as the plants become accustomed to the light.

Watering in the Field.

I read with interest the article written by Mr. Lambert, which appeared in last week's issue. He does not agree with my repeated assertions that frequent cultivation is in most cases preferable to watering carnations in the field. He also says that frequent watering or excessive rains will not cause stem-rot but rather that the composition of the soil causes it, etc. Now, as far as the stem-rot is concerned, every carnation grower knows that he loses many times as many plants from stem-rot in a wet season as he does in a dry one, and this alone will prove that excessive rains or over-watering will bring it on. I do not claim that the water makes the fungus or rot, but we know that so long as the common form of stem-rot is kept dry it remains inactive, but when it becomes moist it becomes active, hence frequent moistening will be apt to start it into activity, while only an occasional wetting may not be enough to do so.

This stem-rot, however, is of far less importance than is the condition the growth of your plants will be in at lifting time. If you set out good plants early in May they will make fair-sized plants by planting time, unless the season is exceptionally dry, and in such case a few good soakings will do more good than frequent sprinklings. In a moderately dry season the plants will be well matured and will stand replanting without much suffering, whereas in case of frequent watering or rains the growth will be soft and transplanting will cause much suffering. Frequent cultivating allows the moisture to come up and the soil does not become so hot that it will burn the plants, as it will do when allowed to bake.

But if it is large plants that you want, or blooms in the field, then by all means supply them with plenty of water.

NOVELTIES FOR 1904.

F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., will distribute two white seedlings next year, Lady Bountiful and The Belle. The former is described as a high-grade commercial variety; large, pure white, fragrant, a good grower, stem long and wiry; said to be an exceptional keeper and shipper; early, free and easy to propagate. As to The Belle, the originators say it is the earliest white yet found among their seedlings, "phenomenally so, and not lacking in freedom. It is bound to supplant that popular variety, Flora Hill."

The Chicago Carnation Company is to distribute two Lawson seedlings this season. Crusader is a scarlet which is said to do a number of things other carnations cannot be induced to do, among which is blooming continuously ten months in the year. It is from Lawson and Crane, color of the latter, size of the former. It has good habits, including tolerance as to temperature, which will commend it for trial to those who cannot afford to grow a whole house of a new variety. Reliance is white, a seedling of Mrs. Higinbotham and a white sport of Lawson. It has the habit of Lawson, although the foliage is finer and the stem more wiry. It needs 52 to 55 degrees to do its best. Mr. Hartshorne says that if it were not that they expect to have their hands full in disseminnating Fiancee in 1904-5 they would not send these two out this season, believing that it would pay them better to grow them for cut blooms another year.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

George E. Buxton, Nashua, N. H., registers Marion Buxton, a seedling of 1900 and the result of a cross between Flora Hill and Wm. Scott; color a soft shade of pink similar to Mrs. James Dean; bloom three to three and one-half inches in diameter, borne on stiff stems averaging eighteen inches in length; very prolific and a good keeper.

Fred Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., registers The Belle; color pure white; size three to three and one-half inches; form rounding, petals well arranged and fine finish; stem twenty-four inches and over, stiff and straight; fragrance spicy and very strong; calyx perfect; a splendid keeper; strong, clean, healthy, upright growth; makes a quick growth and a well formed plant; blooming qualities of the best; the earliest of all white carnations, very free and continuous; one of the easiest to propagate.

HELP FOR TORNADO SUFFERER.

We note in the REVIEW in regard to the misfortunes of Mr. Schweitzer, of Mendota, Ill. We will ship him fifty field-grown carnation plants, white or pink, or fifty Golden Gate roses, 4-inch stock, or will send same value in greenhouse or bedding plants, such as geraniums, cannas, begonias, coleus, etc. Please ascertain as soon as you can which he wishes, so we can reserve the stock for him until he wishes it shipped.

WOOD LICE.

I am about to change the soil in my greenhouse for my new carnations. The benches need repairing and I thought you would advise me how to best fight a certain species of wood louse which persists in climbing into the beds. I have been using Paris green and flour but it does not seem to accomplish much. I thought you would possibly advise me as to some preparation I could use in strewing around the empty beds. I think I am right in calling these insects wood lice. They curl up into a perfect ball as soon as molested. Is tar useful in preserving benches?

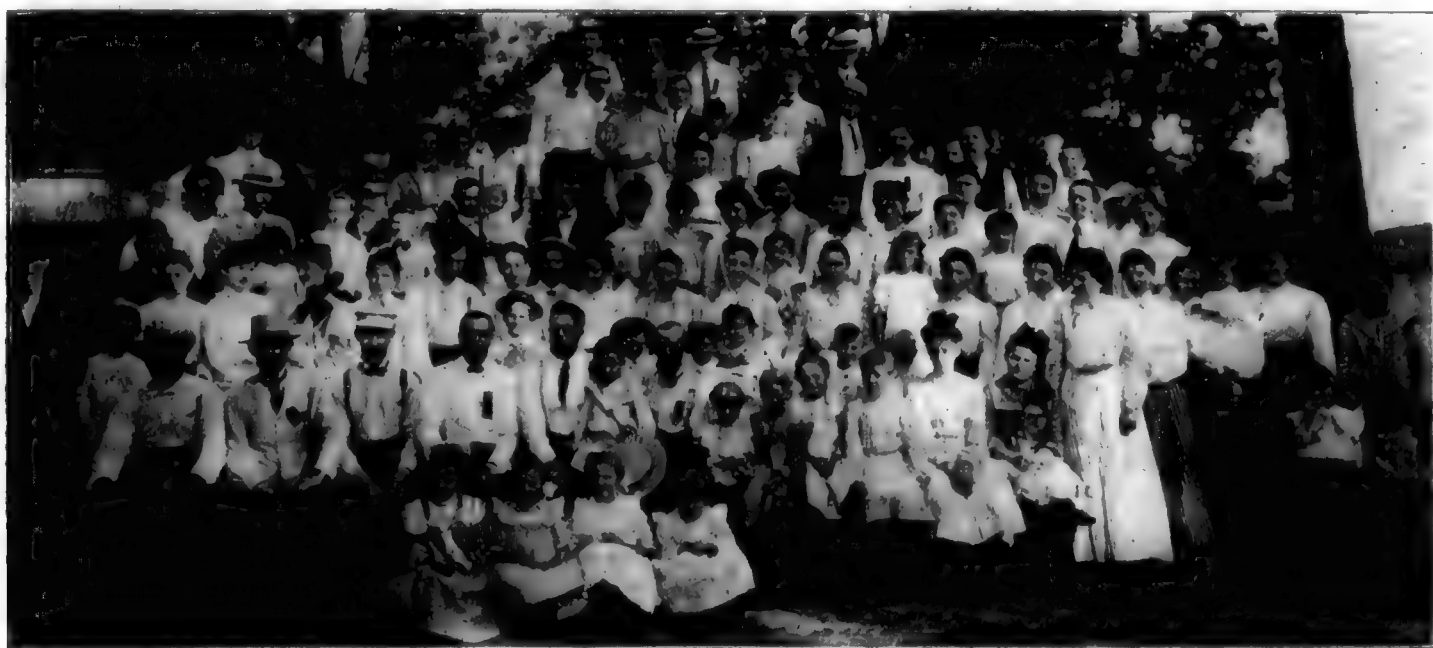

W. F. B.

The wood lice you complain of are one of the worst pests we have to get rid of and, although there are several ways to fight them, yet I know of no method by which you can rid your place of them at a single blow, as it were. The louse is a chewer and the most effective way is to poison him. We mix sugar and Paris green and lay it around on the edge boards and wherever he is most likely to find it, and invariably find a lot of dead ones the next morning. By repeated applications you may be able to rid your place of them, but it will take a long time to do it. Change off from sugar to corn meal occasionally. They are very fond of raw potatoes, and by cutting the potatoes in halves and slightly hollowing them and laying them around, the cut side down, the lice will congregate under them and you can catch and destroy a good many that way. A hot lime wash on the benches will destroy those that it comes in contact with, but that will not be many, and a fumigating with sulphur will only destroy those that are out and exposed.

We have had no experience with tar on greenhouse benches, and so I could not say whether it would be injurious to the plants or not, but I imagine that the odor which arises from it as soon as it gets warm would do the plants no good. The fact that it is not used has led me to think that there must be some such objection to it, as it is one of the best wood preservatives I know of. Carnations and violets especially would take up the odor and become unsalable. I have been told that lettuce grown on benches that were tarred will taste of it.

A. F. J. BAUR.

A LITTLE WHITE FLY.

S. W. writes, "Can you tell me of anything that will destroy a little white fly? They swarm in thousands on pelargoniums, fuchsias and cucumbers."

As the cucumbers are associated with the greenhouse plants, it is to be presumed they are all under glass. Tobacco smoke has doubtless been tried and found wanting. Then the hydrocyanic gas will most assuredly kill them. I noticed the other day that someone quoted the old formula in the use of this gas, which necessitates the opening of the sash in half an hour. As this has to be done from the outside, it is often most awkward, and then, again, the five ounces of cyanide to 1,000 cubic feet of air space is pretty strong and I have seen it burn several different plants.

A safe and easily applied formula is five ounces of cyanide of potassium, one quart of sulphuric acid and one quart of water. Mix the sulphuric acid and water in a gallon butter jar. If the jar is even larger, so much the better. In a few minutes drop in your little parcel of cyanide done up in two thicknesses of paper, so that the acid does not reach it too quickly. Use this quantity for 2,000 cubic feet of air space in your house and keep the house closed all night. I have used this repeatedly and hurt nothing but the fly. Don't linger over the jar after you have dropped in the cyanide; remove all favorite cats and canaries and let the rats and mice take care of themselves.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

"VIOLET CULTURE."

There is a sentiment connected with the violet which causes nearly every owner of a greenhouse to be not thoroughly contented until he has had his little experience at its culture. Hence "Commercial Violet Culture," by B. T. Galloway, is now in its second edition. In the preface Dr. Galloway says: "Since the first edition of this little work was written, four years ago, there have been some changes in the methods of growing violets for market. The writer has seen a number of formerly successful growers go out of the business and others without any previous experience succeed astonishingly. This leads us to repeat what was stated in our first preface, namely, that because so many people fail with this crop we believe it is one of the most promising for the intelligent and energetic man to take up. In this edition we have made certain changes which experience has taught us and offer it with thanks for the kind reception given the first work."

The book endeavors to give every necessary detail for handling the soil, erection of houses and frames, the management of the plants, and the marketing of the flowers. It is eminently practical and exact in all its advice and admonitions and in the closing chapters the author seeks to show what is wisest for the beginner, what it costs to grow a violet plant and what such a plant under fair conditions should yield. The publishers are the De La Mare Co., but the book will be sent postpaid by the REVIEW to those who send $1.50 with their order.

CONVENTION PROGRAM.

The nineteenth convention of the Society of American Florists will, according to the preliminary program just issued, be called to order at Milwaukee, Tuesday afternoon, August 18, at 3 o'clock. The session will be devoted to an address of welcome by Mayor Rose, President Burton's address and the reports of officers and standing committees. The president's reception will take place Tuesday evening.

Wednesday morning the judges will report on the trade exhibition and R. F. Tesson, of St. Louis, will open a discussion of systems of accounts for greenhouses and forms for determining cost of production. F. W. Taylor will speak on the interests of the trade in the St. Louis World's Fair. The next meeting place will be selected at this session and officers will be nominated.

On Wednesday afternoon the bowling tournament will take place at the Olympia alleys, on Second street, near Grand avenue. The ladies will be taken for a trolley ride. Wednesday evening will be devoted to a lecture by C. B. Whitnall, on planting home grounds, illustrated with the stereopticon.

Thursday morning Alex McConnell, of New York, will open a discussion on "Modern Methods in Floral Decoration" and several essays will be read, the essayists yet to be announced. The election of officers takes place at this session and there are two propositions for consideration to amend the constitution. The gunners' contest takes place in the afternoon and in the evening W. R. Beattie, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture will discuss "Substitutes for Coal and Their Comparative Efficiency." J. D. Carmody will speak on "The Humorous Side of the Florists' Business."

Friday, August 21, will be given over to entertainment at the hands of the Milwaukee Florists' Club.

During the week several of the kindred societies will meet. The American Carnation Society directors will convene Wednesday evening. The Florists' Hall Association meets Thursday at 3 p. m.

Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, has been appointed sergeant-at-arms.

CULTURE AND THE CATALOGUE.

A. Dessert, of Chenonceaux, France, sends out a catalogue of peonies in which he gives brief cultural hints of much value and adopts the somewhat unique practice of printing the matter in French and English in parallel columns. While his English is not always English as we are accustomed to hear her "spoke," yet it is good advertising and worth reading. As an assurance of safety to distant purchasers he says: "Peonies carefully packed up in boxes with moss can endure during there is not vegetation (from September to February) the longest journeys without any harm." And to gain early orders he remarks that "as soon as the young buds are fully developed, it is necessary to carry them by fast train;

we therefore engage our purchasers not to wait this time to send their orders."

As to culture it is stated that "no garden should be without peonies, as everyone can grow them, being perfectly hardy and of very easy culture; they succeed in any ordinary garden soil, where there is not too much humidity; the deep, cool and very pervious grounds are the best. To get the greatest development, we counsel, before planting, to dig the ground deeply (15 to 18 inches) and to add rich old manure before planting and every year on the autumn (the new dung are harmful).

"The months of September and October are the most favorable for the plantation of peonies. But they can be planted with success from September to February. Tree peonies must be planted as deeply as they were in nursery; as for herbaceous peonies, the buds must be covered with three or four inches of soil. It is also necessary to garnish the roots with very light soil and to water after the plantation, if the earth is dry.

"They succeed in all situations, but flowers keep better and longer their freshness when they are to a partly shaded place. When they are exposed to the sun, we can guarantee them in covering with ment. The plans for floriculture are elaborate and the detailed directions for storing fruits are such as could only have been prepared at much care and expense.

It is stated that a hall of large seating capacity is being built adjacent to the palace of horticulture which is to be at the service of all organizations which may accept invitations to meet there during the life of the exposition. There is also to be a hotel upon the exposition grounds for the accommodation of convention visitors and those in charge of exhibits.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market continues active for summer. The choice flowers are rather scarce and more could be used. Another Beauty grower, John Burton, has begun cutting flowers from his Queen street place, where his son, George Burton, has been earning an enviable reputation as a clever grower. Leo Niessen handles the cut of this place. Asters are finer and more plentiful, just in the nick of time, for carnations are abominably scarce. Sweet peas have taken on a new lease of life, as W. P. Peacock, of Atco, the great dahlia grower, is sending in quantities of these blooms to S. S. Pennock. How is it done? A little bird says it is late planting and irrigating.

The Hail Storm.

Last week's hail storm has become a matter of history. Twenty or more places lost some glass and had stock damaged, while one firm suffered very severely. The damage inflicted was chiefly in West Philadelphia and in Lansdowne, though a number of places in both districts escaped injury. Single thick glass was smashed far more readily than double thick. A few of the losers were insured, but unfortunately most of them were not.

One bright spot in this dark page was the splendid way in which the Chestnut Hill firms who escaped injury—John Burton, Myers & Samtman and Edwin Lonsdale—pitched in and helped their less fortunate friends in West Philadelphia to reglaze the shattered houses. Some men from each place were at it the very next day. Truly this is a city of brotherly love.

Riverton.

The Henry A. Dreer Company has recently finished an exceptionally heavy shipping season for all kinds of foliage plants and perennials, as well as for the general line of soft-wooded plants so popular in spring time. Since then the entire place has had its annual overhauling, every plant being cared for, and all rubbish removed from the houses, to say nothing of the work done outside. It is hardly possible to realize the enormous amount of work entailed by this thorough house-cleaning without a visit to Riverton. That this work is so well and quickly done reflects great credit on the system and push of those in charge. To me a visit to this place is an inspiration; the possibilities of our business appear broader, the difficulties to surmount smaller after an afternoon spent with Mr. Eisele and Mr. Clark in looking over what they have accomplished.

The new range of Dietsch houses, short span, open between, first occupied by azaleas, are now entirely filled with large imported kentias in from 6-inch to 14-inch pots. The larger sizes of this light cloths; the flowers protected thus acquire a freshness and delicacy of tint very remarkable and the flowering season is prolonged.

"Peonies do not want frequent waterings; it is sufficient to water them copiously when the ground is dry. It is chiefly during the great heat of the months of July and August, that it is necessary not to let them suffer of the dryness, for at this time buds form which must assure the flowering for the following year."

ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR.

Frederick W. Taylor, chief of the department of horticulture, has just issued a World's Fair circular of forty pages which should be in the hands of every one interested in any branch of the trade. It will be sent free of charge upon request. While written primarily to interest exhibitors, the pamphlet contains much of value in other ways, and shows the broad scope of the exposition and the liberal policy of the manage-palm are said to be scarce, both in this country and abroad. It was thought good policy to grow on an extra quantity of these plants for the fall decorative business. Fully three-quarters of the plants in this range are suitable for decorations where material of good size is necessary. All the plants appear in thrifty condition and are filling out nicely. It is expected that the range will be filled with azaleas again next winter.

Some idea can be formed of the amount of business necessary to carry out this plan when it is added that there are two and a half acres in kentias alone. There are about 7,000 azaleas planted in peat outside in frames. These plants are growing vigorously and should make even finer plants than those imported in the fall. It is interesting to note that while the peat in which they are now planted is found to give good results when used for the fall potting, it is necessary to have a fresh supply when preparing the frames for next spring's planting.

The rate at which the demand for hardy phlox has increased is remarkable. Some years ago a few, a thousand or so, I think, was quite enough to meet all requirements. This season no less than 125,000 of these hardy perennials are being planted out for stock, there being 53,000 in one bed alone. Two varieties of special merit were pointed out by Mr. Eisele. One of these, an intense cherry red, is Von Hochberg. This is new and will be sent out next spring. The other is not new, although little known, having been in cultivation for four or five years. Its name is F. C. Von Lassburg. In size and in purity it is a decided improvement on Pearl, the leading white variety. These fields of phlox were a show in themselves, even after the heavy rains.

Returning to the houses, bench after bench of kentias, arecas and latanias were passed, all clean and vigorous. One table of Cocos Weddeliana, in 3-inch pots, was "reserved" for growing into three-foot specimens. A pretty sight was a row of specimen plants of Cocos flexuosa, five or six feet high, considered more decorative than any other palm in commerce.

In 1889 the first plant of Pandanus Sanderi made its appearance. That plant died, but fortunately a single cutting survived from it. This cutting was the parent of the plants, somewhere in the neighborhood of a thousand, brought over from England by Mr. Eisele in the spring of 1901. So rapid has been the increase under Mr. Clark's skillful management that today there are 11,000 plants, all told, of this variety, filling seven houses. It will be distributed next October and already the advance orders are far in excess of expectations. While no one size is all engaged, it is more than probable that there will not be enough to satisfy everyone next fall. It is gratifying to find that the enterprise displayed in securing this great novelty is appreciated by our florists. An experiment made with a plant of Pandanus Sanderi in a dwelling, under unfavorable conditions, where it endured extremes of heat and cold, wet and drought, proved the plant to have remarkable endurance, the plant being not a whit the worse today for its trials.

There are two new varieties of asparagus of promise. One was shown by John Thatcher before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society two years ago. It is believed to be a hybrid of A. plumosus nanus, A. deflexus (?) and A. tenuissimus, the latter being the seed parent. Its peculiarity is that it never climbs, a plant in a 12-inch pan being as dwarf as small plants of the parent variety. This should be a great acquisition for table ferneries. The other variety can be found in limited quantities in England. It is very beautiful, described as an aristocratic Sprengeri. Nota Bene H. B.

Pennisetum macrophyllum is a red-leaved grass that it is believed has a great future as a bedding plant. It is of robust habit, a free grower and very graceful. It appears to grow from two and a half to three feet high. It would make a fine edging for a bed of tall, green-leaved cannas or an effective center for a bed of Coleus Verschaffeltii. In fact, its rich color would enhance a variety of effects in bed or border.

Pteris Childsii is said to be to the great family Pteris what Farleyense is to the family Adiantum; a choice variety that cannot be propagated from seed.

A very pretty bench was formed of strap-leaved fancy caladiums in small pots, each variety by itself. The colors were pretty and distinct. The leading varieties were Mrs. Oliver Ames, Countess of Warwick, L'Ami Schwartz and Undullatum. Time and space alone prevents the description of many other interesting features of this fine place.

Notes.

Edward Reid has been receiving nice Brides and Maids from Anderson, of Lansdowne. His cut last week was 4,800 of good quality.

A. B. Davis & Son, Purcellville, Va., have been sending some nice Ethel Crocker to the Flower Market.

C. A. Dunn and Charles Edgar spent two days up the state. Allentown, Bethlehem and Easton were among the towns visited. They were much pleased with their visits to the growers' places.

John Schoepfle, of Chicago, was a visitor lately. He visited the Flower Market and several of the plant growers' places. He also went to Atlantic City and had a fine time.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are preparing to make a great exhibit at the Milwaukee convention.

M. Rice has just returned from his vacation.

There is a new grower out at Hatboro. Eugene Weiss, tired of the summer calm of his city store, has taken command of his rose growing forces in person. The result, according to the Flower Market people who handle his stock, was surprising—a new lease of life taken on by the roses, so to speak.

Henry F. Michell is away on his vacation.

Eugene Bernheimer is handling lots of gladioli.

Correction.—Through an error last week I stated that it was understood that Myers & Samtman would not plant Edgely this summer. This is a mistake, as the Chestnut Hill firm have planted three large houses with Queen of Edgely.

Robert Craig & Son are rapidly clearing up the damage done to their place by the fierce hail storm.

Fred J. Michell is going to the convention.

H. Kleinhans, of Easton, has a fine house, 300x40 feet. A front bench planted with Mrs. Lawson was looking well.

W. E. McKissick has returned to his post with renewed energy.

Fred Berger has been enjoying a well earned vacation in Washington.

C. A. Dunn & Co. have their new ice box in position. It is 12 feet long, 8 feet high and 8 feet deep, with two compartments each for ice and flowers.

The latter are nicely fitted up with adjustable shelves. The box was made by the Thackara Refrigerator Co. and presents a very imposing appearance. With this improvement the firm have about completed their home preparations for the coming campaign.

C. & G. L. Pennock are beginning to cut from several varieties of roses on their large place at Lansdowne.

The Flower Market was able to secure some cattleyas, quite a rarity at this season, for a special order this week.

R. T. Evans, of Salt Lake City, Utah, was a visitor lately.

Wm. Munro is hard at work getting the young stock on his new place at Lansdowne into shape.

Chas. W. Cox is sending La France to S. S. Pennock. PHIL.

A CANNA EXHIBITION.

The Florists' Club of Philadelphia is to hold an exhibition of cannas in connection with its August meeting, and the committee in charge of the exhibits invite all who have new and meritorious cannas to forward them prepaid by express in care of David Rust, Horticultural Hall, Broad street, Philadelphia, Pa., to reach destination not later than Tuesday afternoon, August 4, when they will receive careful and proper attention. EDWIN LONSDALE, Sec'y.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business conditions remain unchanged. There is still a fair demand for good stock, which is hard to obtain in this market at present. There seems to be plenty of poor stock in roses and carnations. The best of the roses are Liberty and Kaiserin. Brides and Bridesmaids, as a rule, are very poor. A few fairly good Beauties from young stock are seen. Carnations are of poor quality, and unless fancy they meet with slow demand. Whites are an exception, as they are required for funeral work and any grade can be used for this when stock is scarce. Asters are improving in quality and quantity. The best call is for the large Semple white. Good purple and pink are also in some demand. Tuberose and gladiolus stalks are selling well for window decorations. Sweet peas are over. The greens market is in a healthy state, and plenty of everything that is needed.

Florists' Picnic.

The St. Louis florists had a most enjoyable time last Thursday at their picnic held in Priester's Park. The weather could not have been better and 150 florists, including their families, enjoyed a most pleasant day, all acclaiming this year's picnic the best the club has yet given. Our suburban members were well represented with their families, as were also the wholesalers.

The Jubilee singers, who have always furnished one of the attractions at our outings, again entertained the members with singing and made delightful music for the dancing, which was kept up until 10 o'clock. The arrangement committee, consisting of John Steidel, Charles Juengel and F. M. Ellis, assisted by Fred Ammann, F. C. Weber, J. W. Dunford and J. J. Beneke, had everything in readiness for the games at 2 o'clock. The first event was a 50-yard race for little girls, for which there were twelve entries. Alma Ammann was the winner and the prize a handsome pearl necklace. No. 2 was a 75-yard race for boys under 14 years. Five young florists entered for this race, the winner being Julius Beneke, Jr., and the prize a handsome pocket knife. No. 3 was a 50-yard race for young ladies. There were ten starters and Miss L. Meinhardt won the six linen handkerchiefs. Young Sabher won the 100-yard dash, the prize being a gold watch charm. The fifth event was a hopping race of 25 yards for married ladies, nine ladies taking part. Mrs. F. M. Ellis won by five yards, the prize being a fine table ornament. In the 25-yard jumping race for married men, ten taking part, Mr. Schadegger, of Kirkwood, proved the best jumper and won a silver-mounted cane. Little Jessie Sanders won a fine fan for being the fastest eater in the eating contest for little girls, six taking part. O. K. Sanders and C. Curndet won the three-legged race, each receiving a pair of suspenders. Six little fellows entered a walking match for boys under 10 years. A. Steidel was first, winning a hammock. Charlie Kuehn, Jr., was second and Wilfret Beneke third.

Next came the event of the day, the tug of war by two teams captained by Fred Ammann and Max Herzog, referees F. C. Weber and John Steidel. After a hard pull of some twenty minutes Captain Ammann's side won with the following florists: W. J. Pilcher, J. W. Dunford, A. Schadegger, J. J. Beneke, E. W. Guy, C. J. Juengel and H. Gross. The prize was a box of cigars, which the winning team generously divided with the losers. The ladies' bowling contest came next. This was won by Miss M. Meinhardt, making 50 in five frames. Mrs. Menke was second with 47 and Mrs. F. C. Weber third with 46. The prize was a fine silk umbrella. Twenty-four ladies took part in the bowling. In the gentlemen's bowling match, Dr. A. S. Halstedt was high man, making 102 in five frames; E. W. Guy, second, 97, and W. J. Pilcher, third, 81. The prize was a fine florist's knife. The winner of this match will be at Milwaukee, so look out for him. The bowling matches were in charge of Fred C. Weber. All the events passed off pleasantly and everybody was well pleased with the results. After supper each enjoyed himself at his favorite pastime—fishing, bowling, boating, shooting or dancing. At 10 o'clock nearly everybody left for home and all expressed themselves as having had a good time. Let us hope that we may all meet again next year.

Various Notes.

Pat Quinn and F. J. Fillmore had quite a talk on old times at the picnic. They were joined by your correspondent and F. C. Weber, all products of Jordan's in those good old days of 1873.

Fred C. Weber left Saturday for French Lick Springs, to be gone ten days for his health. Fred will return in time to go with the St. Louis delegation to Milwaukee.

Fred Ostertag was married in Belleville last week. Dr. A. S. Halstedt and sister Mary witnessed the ceremony. This is Fred's second venture and we wish him luck.

Fred Foster had a painful operation performed last week from which he is much improved and will be able to be about soon.

It has been decided by the transportation committee that the St. Louis delegation to Milwaukee will leave here on Sunday night, August 16, over the Wabash special and arrive in Chicago Monday morning. The round trip to Milwaukee will be $13.40, with stop-over at Chicago coming and going.

Mr. Juengel is very busy now rounding up new members for the S. A. F. and getting the names of those who are going to attend the convention. He now has thirty-one names on his list, but will not stop at that. Anyone who has not yet sent in his name and wants to take advantage of the low rate and the club's special car should send his name to Mr. Juengel before the next meeting of the club, August 13. This meeting will be held at Mr. Jablonsky's place at Wellston. At this meeting the election of officers will be held and the final arrangements for the Milwaukee trip will be made. Convention matters will be the topic of the meeting. Mr. Jablonsky is making big preparations to entertain the brothers and looks for the largest attendance on record. Quite a number of new applications will be filed as a result of the picnic.

Carl Beyer left this week for a ten days' trip down the Tennessee river. Carl will return in time to make the Milwaukee trip, as he is one of our crack bowlers and we need him on the team. The boys have about put the finishing work in order, so the chances are that both Carl and Robert will be with us.

Our suburban members who will attend the convention are Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Dunford, Mr. and Mrs. John Steidel, E. W. Guy, Fred Ammann, Dr. Halstedt, Adolph Fehr and Max Herzog, and a few others may be added to this list by next week.

Bowling.

The extremely hot night last Monday kept many of the bowlers away, Fred Weber and Carl Beyer being out of the city. Charlie Kuehn had to quit bowling after the first game, owing to a very sore finger on his bowling hand. The scores were as follows:

Player—	1st.	2d.	3d.	T'l.	Av.
J. J. Beneke.....	214	198	178	590	197
E. W. Guy.....	168	142	167	477	159
Theo. Miller.....	175	145	131	451	150
C. C. Halstedt.....	153	133	156	442	147
Fred Weber, Jr.....	120	202	...	322	161
A. S. Halstedt.....	93	112	...	205	102
C. H. Kuehn.....	164	164	164

The loaded ball question was discussed by some of the bowlers and it was decided not to use any loaded ball at Milwaukee and it is hoped that the National Florists' Bowling Association will not allow other clubs to use them. We would like to hear from other clubs on the loaded ball question, and especially from the different captains.

NEW YORK.

Convention Matters.

Convention talk is heard on all sides now that the great annual festivity is only three weeks away. It is a pleasure to realize that we shall see old friends again and combine business with the best kind of recreation. These yearly inspirations become more and more attractive as their number increases and with hardly an exception the memory of them is a delight. The desire for Pullman accommodation is sufficient to assure the use of a special and those who intend occupying a lower berth cannot send in their names too quickly to Walter Sheridan. For the "summer widowers," the old bachelors and the fellows who don't take their wives along, an upper berth is quite good enough and better than most of them deserve. The West Shore has sent out a very seductive circular letter to every florist within 100 miles of New York that ought to swell the attendance from this center to at least 100. The east should march into the Cream City 500 strong, and by the east I mean Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, Boston and New York, with the suburban cities that are near them. This would mean a total of 1,500, at least, at Milwaukee, and I know Vice-President Pollworth is anticipating a 2,000 record. With the Chicago invasion on Friday included, these figures are likely to be exceeded.

The scheme to add to the number of bowling prizes is commendable and the opportunity for all to immortalize themselves by sending special prize offers for the contest to C. C. Pollworth is now open. Those who desire to do so can write him immediately what they will offer and the announcement of these generous donations will be given in our later issues. The following prizes in addition to the regular premiums are needed in the individual games, open to all who do not take part in the team contests: Prizes for the first, second, third, fourth and fifth highest scores; special prize for most strikes; special prize for most spares; special prize to every man who bowls over 200; a prize to every man who bowls over 175. For the great team contests a special prize for highest score, prize for every man bowling over 200, prize for largest number of strikes, special prizes for the six members of the winning team. These added honors will greatly increase the general interest and reduce the tendency to "rattles" and cause such an interest as will make the bowling contest what it should be, the athletic event of the year among horticulturists.

As to the business end of this convention, it promises to eclipse all past achievements. Nearly every wholesale house of prominence from the east will make an exhibit, some of them extensive. One firm has already arranged to send a carload, which will indicate how greatly is appreciated the opportunity to demonstrate to the west the ability and willingness of their eastern brethren to assist them in supplying the growing markets of their wonderful territory.

Various Notes.

Mr. Ward, of Hagemann & Co., returned Sunday from Europe, having visited Germany, France, Belgium and Holland in the interests of his firm. His brother, C. Wayne Ward, and J. H. Thomas, of the office force, are spending "time and money" for a couple of weeks at Atlantic City.

Geo. M. Stumpp, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., returned Monday from Bermuda with many interesting stories of his experiences in the land of the lily, the potato and the onion. He had Mrs. Stumpp and Mr. and Mrs. Lee, of Henry & Lee, as companions and combined business and pleasure to his evident benefit.

W. H. Gunther and family are at Far Rockaway for the summer, and his brother, J. J., is at Rockaway Beach. One can "rock away" a good deal of violet profits at these charming resorts, but it pays to do so.

Mr. Trumpp, of J. H. Small & Sons, leaves for his three weeks' "carouse" with his family at the Pyramid Lake House in the Adirondacks. From the way he ran at the outing a few weeks ago this rest seems hardly necessary.

Miss Mabel Crowther, stenographer for C. F. Meyer, will leave shortly for a three weeks' rebuilding in the ozone of these delicious mountains.

Arthur Merritt, of Small's, has had two weeks' recuperation as usual with his family, and Mr. Hunter, of the same firm, takes his turn August 15.

Sam Kirkpatrick, bookkeeper for Walter Sheridan, is adding a thousand pleasant experiences to his life, at the Thousand Islands.

M. A. Bowe and family are at Holland for the season. Few have imagined that the rotund and happy personality of the popular Broadway retailer was a Dutchman. Mr. Bowe had an artistic 7-foot easel for the forty-second anniversary of Franks, leader of the Metropolitan Orchestra, last week that was worth "100 bones." It was made of Meteors, with wide red, white and blue ribbons, the donors' names embossed on the ribbons.

Frank Traendly and family are at their home in Connecticut for the summer.

George Saltford leaves next week for a long recuperation in the Adirondacks. He has been ill for several weeks from ptomaine poisoning, a temperature of 106.

THE tenor of dispatches from nearly every section of the country indicates that there is less than the customary mid-summer dullness, and collections are more promptly met than usual.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade.

STOCK market disturbances affect sentiment, but do not conceal improvement in the corn and cotton crops. There is a cheerful feeling in western and southwestern trade circles.—Bradstreet's trade review.

degrees for a time indicating the closeness of his call. But he is on deck again and will be ready for the violets in the fall.

The estate of John W. Scallen is paying 40 cents on the dollar in settlement of claims, and a goodly number of the wholesale florists are on the list, some of them quite extensively.

Miss Dowd, bookkeeper for Charles Millang, leaves for her annual trip to the mountains about the middle of August. Mr. Millang has prepared his entire conservatory for the reception and use of Arthur Cowee's gladioli. He handles 1,000 bunches of asters a day and is receiving some fine longiflorum lilies, for which he realized 12 cents on Monday.

On August 1 Miss Josie Reilly, bookkeeper for J. K. Allen, begins her annual outing at Old Orchard Beach, Me. Last week and this J. K. is imbibing fresh air and health, taking in the pleasure resorts around this city, and their name is legion, and will soon proceed with his family to the Mannetah Hotel at Glen Orroko, Pa., in the heart of the Alleghenies.

Reed & Keller have added the manufacture of basket work to their already diversified line of florists' supplies. The factory is located at 146 to 148 W. 25th street, office and salesroom as before at 122 W. 25th street. In basket work they will pay particular attention to special designs, the same as they have heretofore done with wire work, etc.

L. J. Kreshover and wife leave shortly for a three weeks' well earned pleasure at Liberty, N. Y., the Blue Mountain House at Shohola and Atlantic City.

The wholesalers have begun their annual painting and repairing. Mr. Ghormley is just completing a large and original ice box with visions of violets as its foundation and facilities to handle several millions of them if necessary.

The early closing movement does not materialize very rapidly amongst the retailers. Before they wake to its necessity it will be all over and the "demnition grind" of long hours will be upon us again. It pays to give the boys a chance these long, hot days and the good effects of liberal consideration will come back to employers with interest when the strenuous days begin again.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Business the past week has been all that could be expected; lots of funeral work and white flowers are becoming scarce, owing to the dry spell we are having. All things considered the month of July was a good one for the florist. Roses are coming in very small. Asters are making their appearance. All that is just now needed is a good rain, which would help outdoor stuff considerably.

Some of the florists here have housed their Lawson carnations.

Jacob Schulz has moved into his new store at 641 Fourth avenue and it makes a beautiful appearance. He is adding to the rear of his store a 100-foot greenhouse.

Jos. Coenen & Co. have one bench of Lawson carnations and one of Murphy's White growing under glass, which are looking very promising.

E. G. Reimers is rebuilding four houses at his place on Baxter avenue.

Henry Fuchs is putting up a greenhouse, 32x100, for chrysanthemums.

Sam. Pontrich, of Twenty-eighth and Greenwood avenue, is adding three more houses to his place.

Mrs. T. B. Rudy and daughter, Violet, are spending the summer at Carrollton, Ky.

Mrs. John Bohrman is spending the summer with relatives in Illinois.

William Walker and his bride are spending their honeymoon in Scotland.

William Mann leaves in a few days to spend the rest of the summer at Atlantic City.

The next meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists will be held at Riverside Park and a full attendance is expected.

HY. LICHTFELD.

TACOMA, WASH.

The retail flower and seed store, 916 Second avenue, for the past ten years operated by Malmo & Co., has been sold to the Pacific Seed & Floral Co., under the management of A. L. Aabling and J. Anthon, who have had long and extensive business experience in the same line. C. Malmo, under the firm name of Malmo & Co., retains the extensive wholesale business and mailing trade, together with the warehouses, nurseries and greenhouses on the corner of East Pike and Broadway, to which place the main office, as well as the mailing department, is now moved.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Trade is good, but the same can hardly be said of stock. There is some fair material coming in, but not enough so that it is an easy matter to fill orders. Beauties are in good demand, but very scarce. Brides and Maids are poor, except some small stock from new plants. Liberty is seldom seen, but Meteor is fairly plentiful. Kaiserin is the best rose and Golden Gate probably the most plentiful.

Carnations are plentiful one day and scarce the next. On Monday the best whites brought as high as $2; Tuesday they could not all be sold at any price and on Wednesday the hold-overs went to the Greeks, while good stock was again in demand. And so it goes. Good asters are not plentiful and poor ones sell cheap. Auratums continue the showy flower for funeral work and window decorations. Sweet peas are still plentiful and gladioli are in all the wholesale houses. Greens are abundant, especially asparagus, but Sprenger is popular.

Various Notes.

J. A. Budlong is building a stack which is thought to set a new mark for greenhouse chimneys. It is to be 125 feet high, with a seven-foot flue. It will require 100,000 bricks, weighing two tons to the thousand and stands on a concrete foundation 12x14x3. Completed it will cost over $1,000, and is to take care of boilers aggregating 800 horse-power, which is what will be needed when the property is all covered with glass, which will probably be next year.

C. M. Dickinson returned yesterday from his Wisconsin fishing trip.

Louis Gresenz, of Bassett & Washburn's, will start on his vacation Saturday, visiting relatives in Wisconsin, accompanied by Mrs. Gresenz.

A. Simmons, the retailer at Sixty-third and Wentworth, is at Danville this week, quelling race riots with the Seventh regiment.

Wietor Bros. are fortunate in having a good crop of Beauties of good length and good quality just when the market is short; they sell at first-class prices.

George M. Garland says that he has had a good season in the gutter business in spite of some unfavorable conditions, such as labor troubles and high prices for iron. He notes that there is less rebuilding than usual this year, but is pleased that the fall in pig iron gives him a chance to quote favorable prices for late buyers.

L. Coatsworth has returned from a visit to the Benthey & Co. establishment at New Castle and reports the roses looking fine. The stock is practically all two and some of it three years old, and the oldest Beauty plants are the best lookers. They will begin cutting next week. Liberty also promises well. The asters, however, have suffered because the clay soil holds the water.

A. Lange and family are at Mt. Clemens for a three-weeks' outing.

Miss Linna Hutchinson and Edson Haas, of Austin, will marry August 5 and go east for a honeymoon of two or three weeks.

There was a large amount of funeral work at the obsequies of Inspector Shea on Sunday, but the mistake was made of delivering most of it too early, and it was a sorry looking lot by the time for the services, for the weather was warm and all stock soft. A. Lange had some pieces which were delivered only a couple of hours before the services and looked well.

The committee on S. A. F. entertainments has concluded to do its "turn" Friday evening, August 21.

It does one good to listen to John Mangel; there's none of the pessimist about him. He says business is good, plenty of funeral work, and the looks of the place bears him out. He is an exception to the general rule in that he keeps his windows filled with the best stock on the market.

Andrew Miller calls on his friends in the trade occasionally. He is now conductor on a Santa Fe Pullman running to California.

There is beginning to be some apprehension as to results with the aster crop, for everybody has them by the acre and there is a possibility that they may not realize as much money as the growers hoped when they put in the seed, as was the case with the full tide of the sweet pea crop. However, some of the fields show all the ills the aster is heir to, and the supply of good flowers may still prove too small.

Nic Kruchten is sending some of the best carnations coming to town, mostly Flora Hill.

Fresh paint is now in order, before the S. A. F. visitors get here. Winterson's and Poehlmann's have had their signs out.

The Flower Growers' Company is investing over $400 in an icebox adequate to any possible needs.

F. Beu is rebuilding a 125-foot house. It has been a good season with him.

Mrs. C. Schaffer is cutting some very good Kaiserins.

Visitors:—F. D. Rennison, Waterloo, Ia.; J. B. Baker, Fort Worth, Tex.; Miss Rentz, daughter of J. W. Rentz, Peru, Ind.; F. A. Baller, Bloomington, Ill.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business last week was somewhat better than for some time, and some good stock is still to be had. Beauties are fine for this time and so are Kaiserins. Asters are more plentiful and supply a long-felt want. Carnations are scarce, especially white; the outdoor carnations are not blooming and this causes the shortage. A heavy demand for funeral work all last week kept the florists busy trying to secure sufficient good stock to take care of their orders.

Death of Frederick Dillemath.

Thursday evening, July 23, Frederick Dillemath, construction foreman and a director of the Pittsburgh Rose and Carnation Co., at Bakerstown, and a brother-in-law of Fred Burki, was drowned in a reservoir on the farm. Mr. Dillemath went to the pumping house for the purpose of pumping water into the tank. Something appeared to be wrong with the intake pipes leading from the pond, and in making an investigation as to the cause of the stoppage of water, it appears that he fell into the pond and was drowned. Mr. Dillemath was a very successful man in all his undertakings. He was in the best of health and full of vigor. His sudden demise will be much felt by his partners and employees, who respected him highly.

Mr. Dillemath leaves a wife, one daughter and three sons, one of whom is Harry Dillemath, with Jno. H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ontario. We extend our sympathy to the family and to Mr. Burki.

Notes.

Patrick Maier is cutting quantities of well-grown summer roses; his Kaiserins are exceptionally fine.

W. L. Campbell, one of our largest gladioli growers in this vicinity, is right in it this season with early blooms, which brought him good returns.

Miss E. B. Maxwell has returned from her vacation.

Arthur Langhans, Wheeling, is on his annual eastern trip buying fall novelties.

John Baldinger has returned from Buffalo.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club is to be held August 4, when final arrangements will be made for the trip to Milwaukee. The transportation committee report that a large attendance will be present from this city.

Hoo-Hoo.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The Market.

The weather has been warm, with cool nights, often so cool as to mildew the roses. Business has kept up very satisfactorily. While the cut of carnations is growing continually less, still, as the growers have thrown out but very few plants, it is still of good size and at times not equal to the demand. Roses have been scarce and unobtainable right along; prices are about the same as last reported.

Notes.

Most of the florists are behind with planting; too much to see to, too much building, too much repairing and rebuilding.

Cross has all his violet houses planted. Schols has planted nothing but violets this year.

Crabb & Hunter have three of their new range of houses glazed and planted, two to roses and one to violets. They have had considerable trouble with getting a water supply. After sinking a well and finding no supply, they tapped the lake, 1,750 feet off; after numerous adventures they at last got a first-class crib sunk in seven and one-half feet of clear water, when along came a boat and put that crib through the propeller wheel, chewed it all up, the greedy thing; but the boat was seized with a fit of indigestion and laid up for repairs.

Mulick Bros., so report has it, want to sell out and locate in Greenville, this state.

Cunningham is hurrying his new houses along as fast as he can. His dwelling house is ready for occupancy. When he vacates his present quarters, near John Ball park, the owners, Schmidt Bros., are going to run it themselves. They will grow geraniums, lettuce and cucumbers.

Floral Co. has not yet planted, but is rebuilding the two narrow houses into one large house, as they consider it better than a small one for violets.

Bruinslot & Sons have five 100-foot houses built on their new place and have them almost glazed.

Henry Smith is rebuilding the houses destroyed by fire. He is discarding three small boilers and replacing them with larger ones.

Freyling & Mendals are rebuilding

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

THE American Park and Outdoor Art Association now has a membership of 705.

E. Albertson, of Albertson & Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind., is on a ten days' western business trip.

THE West Michigan Nursery Co, Eau Claire, Mich., is preparing to harvest a crop of 5,000 bushels of peaches.

W. F. Heikes, of the Huntsville Wholesale Nursery, Huntsville, Ala., is at Bay View, Mich., on a vacation.

B. E. Gage, of the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, is visiting the gardeners and planters at the summer resorts in Michigan and Wisconsin.

The annual meeting of the Southern Nurserymen's Association will be held at Winchester, Tenn., August 19. There will be a free side trip to the nurseries at Huntsville, Ala.

THE Boston board of park commissioners has adopted a rule, under the act to regulate bill boards, that no such advertisements may be displayed within 500 feet of any park or parkway.

THE twenty-seventh annual meeting of the Georgia State Horticultural Society will be held at Athens, August 3 and 4. There will be a large exhibition. The Southern Express Company each year extends the courtesy of free transportation of exhibits.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is holding out very well; in fact, much better than we have ever had at this time of the year. There is some big funeral work and as stock is cheap there is good money in it for the retailer.

Roses, if anything, are scarcer than last week; but the quality is improving; still the greater portion of all roses are seconds and thirds. There are still no red roses. There is a very good demand for Beauties but it is impossible to raise the price, owing to the poor quality. There are, however, some good Kaisersins.

Carnations are almost out of the market. There are so few coming in that it is impossible to take an order with any certainty of filling it. There is a heavy call for white and the price on any that could be called fair has been forced up until they almost reach winter quotations. Field grown ones will be coming pretty soon and they will help matters. The supply of asters is still limited and the quality poor. Miscellaneous stock sells well for funeral work. The demand for ferns has been so great that the wholesale houses have their troubles keeping a supply on hand.

Club Picnic.

July 23 was the florists' annual outing and the committee could not have picked out a better day. Coney Island has plenty of shade and the recent rains had freshened up everything. There were between 250 and 300 in the party. The ride of twenty miles on the big river steamers is worth the price of tickets alone. Besides the many attractions on the island there were several contests, the winners of which were as follows: Quoit pitching for men, Rob Murphy and Ed Murphy, first prize; Ben George and Geo. Hemming second. The ladies' quoit pitching contest was very exciting and on the last game of 10 points the score stood 9 to 9, but Mrs. Konzelman won the next point and Mrs. Gus Adrian was second.

In the base ball game the teams were well matched, the score being 17 to 18. After the dust had settled it was found that Allan's team had made the winning run in the last half of the last inning. Frank Deller's team, though defeated, was not disgraced.

Mr. Dudley, of Parkersburg, W. Va., was a visitor. C. J. OHMER.

NEW ORLEANS.

Horticultural Society Doings.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its annual meeting and election of officers July 16. Joseph Steckler was chosen president, succeeding C. R. Panter. Richard Eichling was made vice-president, succeeding D. A. Chopin. Dan Newsham was elected secretary and John Eblen treasurer, succeeding themselves, the latter having held his office for nineteen years. Communications were read, business of importance transacted and an enjoyable supper served to the many members present. J. D. Preussner, of Galveston, was a visitor.

During the session many matters of importance came up, including the extension of the list of honorary members. H. M. Derr and Harry Elwell were elected to active membership. The treasurer reported $84.51 on hand with total resources of $684.51. J. A. Newsham and E. Valdejo were appointed to represent the society at the meeting of the Central Commission of Parks and Avenues.

During the meeting Secretary Newsham distributed circulars announcing the society's plans regarding the flower show, which will begin during the Carnival of 1904. The following committee has the work in charge: P. Abele, chairman; C. R. Panter, ex-officio; E. Valdejo, H. Papworth, J. Steckler, P. A. Chopin, J. A. Newsham, M. M. Lapouyade, J. St. Mard, C. Eble, D. Newsham. There is a liberal and well arranged premium list.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 27th annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

FLAXSEED is firm at Chicago; September 93 cents; cash No. 1 Northwestern 96 cents.

RECENT advices from some of the Wisconsin pea fields are not as encouraging as former reports.

JNO. C. LEONARD, of Chicago, visiting San Jose and Santa Clara, reports good prospects for a full delivery on most of the California crops.

MANY of the Chicago onion set fields in the vicinity of Dunning and Cragin were hurt by the hailstones in the storm of July 21.

ON the Chicago Board of Trade timothy seed is quiet and steady; September $3.20 bid; October $3.10 bid. Clover for July delivery nominally $12.50.

N. L. WILLET, of Augusta, will read a paper, "The Georgia Seed Growing Industry—a Side Line for Horticulturists," before the State Horticultural Society, at Athens, August 3.

CORTLAND, N. Y.—The Forrest Seed Company has leased larger quarters in the new warehouse at Pendleton and East Court streets. They are also putting in a new bag filling machine.

EDITH SHEPHERD KELSEY, daughter of Theodosia B. Shepherd, and associated with the seed house bearing her mother's name, died at Ventura, Cal., July 12. She was but 27 years of age and had a wide circle of warm friends, whose regard she cemented more firmly by her patience in suffering during a prolonged last illness.

BURNET LANDRETH has sent out a letter to those in the wholesale seed trade apprising them that the present financial difficulties of the firm of David Landreth & Sons, Philadelphia, are expected to be only temporary and that arrangements are in progress which will permit the business to go on as before. This is the oldest seed house in America, having been established in 1784.

THE ONION SET CROP.

Harvesting has sufficiently advanced to give a fairly definite idea as to what the crop will pan out. At Indianapolis the quality of the sets harvested confirms earlier advices as to excellence, but the quantity falls below expectations. The crop there is about harvested and the weather for harvesting was all that could be desired. At Louisville harvesting is somewhat later than usual, but the end of the week will about see the finish; expectations all along have been for about half a crop and the harvest shows it to be even less, with the quality coarser than usual. At Chillicothe about an average crop is being harvested; quality fair. At Chicago harvesting is under way in the southern section and just beginning in the northern section. The territory covered by set growing at this point is distributed all over the gardening localities of the city, and the soil varies so much that nothing but a complete harvest will show the net result. In loose, sandy loam good yields have been expected and are being realized. In clay soil the harvest shows a great falling off and in mixed sand and clay the yield is only fair. The color and quality of the Chicago set has always made it a superior article and in these respects the crop this year will be fully up to the average. The shortened acreage, caused by bad weather at planting time, and the poor stand in many of the fields, caused by dry weather at the wrong time, will make this year's Chicago crop considerably less than an average one.

On the whole, taking into account the total loss of sets in the flooded districts of the southwest and a less than average crop at the other points, it looks as though onion sets must bring good prices.

AMERICAN BULBS AT MILWAUKEE.

Arrangements have been made whereby growers of any forcing bulbs, plants or seeds hitherto supplied mainly from foreign sources, or dealers controlling stocks of such goods, may exhibit samples of their product in the trade exhibition, free of charge, the bulbs so exhibited to become the property of the Society of American Florists for testing purposes as to their forcing qualities, and the results of said testing and awards for quality to be published the following season. Entries in this department should be made with the secretary.

WM. J. STEWART.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business, outside of funeral work, has entirely disappeared and we may look for a long holiday before we get our autumn rush. Roses are scarce, but in better shape, and we may expect, if this cool weather continues, to have a fair crop in the next few weeks. Carnations are not very plentiful, but the quality is fairly good. Valley and Lilium longiflorum are seen in fair quantity and as to outside stock, there is an abundance. Sweet peas are not so plentiful, however, and wholesale at about 75 cents per dozen bunches. We shall have plenty of asters in a couple of weeks. I passed through the aster and chrysanthemum belt a few days ago and noticed that the stock was fairly well advanced and in most places looking very thrifty. Gladioli and dahlias, coreopsis and gailardias are being used by most of our florists to fill up the windows. Most of the florists consider their troubles over when the chrysanthemums begin to come in quantity, for they are so easily arranged, fill up so quickly, either in a bunch or floral design, and keep so long after being cut, that we are always sorry when their season is over.

Various Notes.

H. L. Haelke, well known as the head gardener at the Masonic Home, at Decoto, Cal., buried his nineteen-year-old son, Theodore, on Friday of last week, at Oakland. The young man had been on a camping trip in Placer County and was drowned near Towle Station.

Fire started around the oil burner at Domoto Bros.' Japanese nursery, at Fitchburg, on Wednesday afternoon. Some of the oil leaked out and caught fire. The Japs thought the boiler would blow up and so began to shovel soil into the furnace. The foreman had his hands badly burned in extinguishing the flames.

Almon Wheeler, of the Ruehl-Wheeler Nursery Company, of San Jose, has been in town for a few days. He reports everything prospering in his neighborhood.

I have not, in a long time, seen such a display of floral tributes as those sent to the obsequies of Major Hooper, of the Occidental Hotel. They represented several hundred dollars and were greatly admired. George B. Jones, Frank Pelicano, Podesta & Baldocchi, Sievers & Boland, Frank Shibley and Thomas Stevenson had the bulk of the orders.

A very enthusiastic meeting was held at the Board of Trade rooms in Oakland on Wednesday evening last, by the Alameda County branch of the California State Horticultural Alliance. Joseph Furtado, head gardener for the Realty Syndicate, gave practical illustrations of rose budding.

A visit to the grounds of D. O. Mills at Milbrae shows everything in tip-top shape. The greenhouses are overflowing with ferns, palms and gloxinias and some of the specimen plants are considered the finest in California. Mr. Beattie is the head gardener.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Trade is fair for this season of the year and there is just about enough good stock on the market to meet the requirements. Carnations are shortening up in supply but asters are making their appearance to take the place. There are not as many sweet peas as in former years. Some good lilies, both longiflorum and auratum, are in and an occasional spurt in funeral work keeps them cleaned up.

Pollworths are cutting some fine roses, Maid, Gate, Perle and Meteor, from plants carried over from last season and have just finished planting up seven houses in Liberty, Ivory, Maid, Bride and Meteor and have now two large houses under way for some of the newer varieties of carnations. Nic Zweifel is sending a fine lot of Genevieve Lord carnations which sell on sight. C. Johansen is building one additional house and will grow carnations exclusively for next season. C. Burmeister is also adding one house for carnations. Heitman & Baerman are erecting three houses on the Dietsch plan for carnations.

The sale of green goods is somewhat light but there has been quite a demand for small palms, asparagus and ferns for growing on.

Convention Matters.

There was quite a large attendance at our last club meeting. The fair sex were also present at this meeting and took a lively interest. The work is pretty well divided among the various committees and final arrangements are being made for the coming visitors. Entries for the trade display are exceptionally large. Aside from business, the entertainment provided for the members of the S. A. F. is an elaborate one. The bowlers are also becoming active and Wm. Edlefsen is daily practicing to bring up his average to get on the team. His latest score of 234 shows that he is getting into his New York convention form. W. A. Kennedy, with his speedy ball, bunches up a great many strikes in a game. Holton is claiming a great deal of hard luck but expects to reverse matters during the tournament. Herman Hunkel

A slight increase is noticeable in the quantity of stock coming to the market and the tendency of prices is still downward. Asters are coming in profusely and command poor values. The best word to express the condition of things is stagnation.

KANSAS CITY, KAN.—Trade here is very dull at present, only funeral work, and the crape pullers have been very busy.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The Indiana Floral and Chrysanthemum Association was incorporated July 18 by a number of prominent business men. Irwin Bertermann is secretary and John Bertermann manager of the exhibition to be given in November.

The first part of last week supplies were in excess of requirements; later the demand increased. Roses and carnations grow scarcer, but outdoor stock is more abundant and of better quality. The Elks' reunion did little for the trade. The weather is warm, but magnificent.

CAMDEN, N. J.—The William Graham Company has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $50,000, by Leon Belmont, C. W. Coulson and D. T. Stackhouse, of Camden.

PITTSBURG, PA.—The Pierson-Sefton Co., Jersey City, N. J., has the contract for a very handsome conservatory 54x100, to be erected here for Alexander R. Peacock and to cost $10,500.

MARINETTE, WIS.—George Vatter will be at the convention and says most of the florists in this vicinity will be on hand.

DEXTER, ME.—C. H. Hayden is recuperating at Ocean Park and sends word home that he has already gained ten pounds in weight.

DES MOINES, IA.—William Trillow, formerly of St. Louis and Chicago, is now in charge of the greenhouse department of the Iowa Seed Company, succeeding F. D. Rennison, who went to Waterloo.

WATERLOO, IA.—Williams & Crittenden have bought material, of Moninger, Chicago, for four houses which will just about double their capacity. The construction is to be the most modern, high gutter style, for roses and carnations, grafted roses being largely planted this year. F. D. Rennison, formerly of Des Moines, is in charge of the growing. Mr. and Mrs. Williams are away on an outing in Montana.

UNIONTOWN, PA.—Barton Bros. are building two new greenhouses in connection with their range near town. The business is increasing rapidly.

SAVANNAH, GA.—The Savannah edition of the American Journal of Commerce contains an excellent half-tone of the greenhouse of John Wolf and an account of that gentleman's successful career in floriculture. Concluding, it says that "he is a popular member of Society of American Florists, the Young Men's Christian Association and the Knights of Pythias."

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—L. J. Stuppy has recently concluded the purchase of six acres of adjoining property at a cost of $1,000 an acre. He is in need of larger supplies of stock and will probably put up a good sized addition to his range.

GENEVA, ILL.—The Harvey greenhouses, until recently operated by the late J. T. Anthony, have passed into the hands of Davis Bros., of Morrison, Ill., and will be operated by them in connection with their home plant, which is also being enlarged this year. This will give them splendid facilities, the Geneva place being in charge of W. B. Davis, who, until recently has been with George A. Kuhl, at Pekin.

BOSTON.The Market.

Nothing doing! Never more quiet; no particular harm being done because only a few goods are coming in now; the tired plants are gone on strike. Money is off on a vacation, too, with only a stray dollar around now and then. A curious condition is on at the wholesale market, which I notice every year, but never quite so early in the season. If a man really offers to pay for his small purchase, he shows up a big bill. On first sight you think all hands are flush, but no; it is one he has saved up from last winter for just this purpose. But there is some one all the time running around trying to break a big bill.

Expectations are discounted a few years by a financial explosion down on Hawley street. Creditors of Geo. A. Sutherland have their $7,500 of hopes blown up but now hope to save $4,000. These affairs are occurring so regularly growers ought to be getting used to it and not minding, but on the contrary they criticize and question savagely. It seems to be the custom to allow men in all kinds of business to keep along on a claim of money due them from customers "soon to come in." You can do nothing. This situation hits the flower business especially because of the perishable nature of the goods and the generosity of the plants at times. And if those growers now in the business refuse credits, new growers spring up like mushrooms in a night and extend unlimited terms. The Sutherland creditors have placed their affairs in the hands of a committee consisting of Messrs. Elliott, Sheldon, Buttermworth, McFarlane and Stewart.

Accounts vary, but all agree that "Bill" Anderson went to Norumbega Park. Some say that while there he bit a poor innocent bear. Others say a bear bit him, and at last accounts the poor bear was alive and not expected to survive. The most probable account to those who best know Bill's disposition is that he accommodately held his finger between the bars of the den and let the bear chew upon it. His finger looks that way, too.

The baseball microbe infests the business, but not seriously. Elliott's Brighton team gave the Waban Roses a run of 15 to 11 and his New Hampshire boys gave a Dover team instruction to the tune of 9 to 8. He is soon to match his two teams together, and watch the sparks fly.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Demise of Henry Burt.

Henry Burt, one of the leading florists of the city died on the evening of July 19. Mr. Burt had been in poor health for a few weeks past, but death came unexpectedly. He was able to be up and about the house all day and was apparently in better spirits than usual. He had eaten a hearty supper and had just retired when he was seized by an attack of heart failure from which he never rallied. His daughter and a physician were immediately sent for, but before they could arrive death had resulted.

Mr. Burt, was 78 years of age, was born in Sanderhurst, England, and came to this country about fifty-two years ago. For about fifteen years he conducted a vegetable farm in the vicinity of this city and his person and market carts were well known all over town at that time. A little more than thirty years ago he established the business as florist which he continued to conduct up to the time of his death. In this business he became even better known than before and won a wide reputation, both as a successful business man and grower.

Mr. Burt is survived by his wife, who was formerly Miss Harriet Barnes, also of England, to whom he was married fifty-two years ago. There are also two sons, Alfred Burt of this city and Albert Burt of Buffalo, and a daughter, Mrs. L. Light of this city.

PLAN FOR PIPING.

Where I am building, the temperature falls to 20 to 30 below zero every winter and cold winds are strong from the northwest. I want to heat the houses by hot water, so that it will not be necessary for someone to stay up all night. I enclose sketch of the houses and would like to know how to pipe and the cost of a boiler which will do the work.

W. H. LEARING.

I would place the boiler cellar at the west of the potting shed and from here run a separate set of 2-inch flow and return mains to the palm house, connecting them to eleven lines of 2-inch pipes in coils of six (three flow and three returns) under each of the two side benches. A 6-inch flow main should start from the boiler and extend overhead northward through the palm house till

Surplus List of PEONIES for 1903

These varieties have all bloomed on our place and are true to name, and are not at all mixed. We make no charge for packing. The sizes given are as follows:

Small—Being plants of one or two stalks of this year's growth. Medium—Being plants of three to five stalks of this year's growth. Large—Being plants of six or more stalks and represents one, two or three-year-old plants.

Orders subject to stock being unsold and will be booked in rotation as received. These prices will not hold good after we begin digging and shipping September 1. To customers wishing a few plants we refer to our descriptive catalogue of last year and can generally give plants of same size as those there listed at prices given. Mailed on request.

in line with the ridge of the eastern plant house, then run south to the carnation house, taking off a 2½-inch connection for the plant house, a 3-inch flow to the rose house, a 3-inch flow for the smilax and plant house and continue 3½-inch to the carnation house. The 6-inch main can be reduced proportionately as the several laterals are taken off.

In the plant house twelve lines of 2-inch pipes, in addition to the overhead main, will be needed in the rose house, seventeen lines of 2-inch pipes, in the smilax house fourteen lines, in the plant section of the smilax house twelve lines, in the carnation house fourteen lines. All pipes in these houses will be returns, and will grade downward toward the west end where they will connect to a return main running across the ends of the houses below the floor line in a northerly direction to the boiler in the cellar. This main return will be 5-inch at its connection to the boiler and will reduce proportionately in its run south as the several laterals are connected. The boiler cellar should be at least six and one-half feet deep below the floor line of the carnation house at its western end.

A suitable hot water boiler would cost approximately $400 in Chicago. I cannot estimate cost of pipes as I do not know the prices ruling at the nearest distributing center. For a range such as W. H. L. describes I should be inclined to use steam in preference to water heat; especially in view of the extremely low temperatures experienced.

HENRY W. GIBBONS

PIPING.

We have a house 16x50, north and south, new and tight, no side lights but glass in end. How many runs of 2-inch pipe, how distributed, will be required from a six horse-power horizontal boiler?

R. C.

Eleven lines of 2-inch hot water pipes should be placed in the sixteen feet wide house, four lines being placed under each of the outside benches and three lines under the center bench. The flow main should be taken from the top of the boiler and the return main enter the boiler at or near the bottom. The top of the boiler should be below the floor level of the greenhouse.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

TACOMA, WASH.—F. J. Schmidt has invested $600 in a lot 127x155 on Sixth avenue, on which he will build a greenhouse.

DENVER, COLO.

Heavy Loss by Hail.

Denver was visited by a very heavy hail storm July 24, which did a great deal of damage, just about a month later than the storm which struck us last year. The stones did not fall very thickly but in size they were record breakers. The following is a list of the losses of greenhouse glass: The Colfax Avenue Floral Co., 10,000 to 12,000 lights; Park Floral Co., 5,000 lights; Daniels & Fisher, half their glass; Mrs. R. Mauff, 5,000 lights at the retail stand, not much loss at the wholesale place, while W. C. Walters, not two blocks away, lost 9,000 lights, about one-third of his total. Emil Glauber lost 70 per cent of his glass, there being only fifteen whole panes left in his large Beauty house. Joe Esslinger lost every light, Newlander & Rollin about sixty per cent and Walters & Richmond 1,750 lights. Fred Hall got off with the loss of 200 panes, Gallup Floral Co., 150 lights, and the public parks about 250 panes. The losses of others were small. Outdoor stock was not seriously damaged, although canna beds were cut up quite a little.

Trade is very light just now, practically nothing doing but cut flower work. Roses retail for $1 a dozen, carnations 35 cents to 50 cents.

THORN.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Two more of our younger members of the craft have joined the ranks of the benedicts. On July 7 Thos. B. Pritchard, designer and decorator at Wiegand's, was married to Miss Mary L. Meyers. After a trip through the east they have returned and are now at home to their friends at 1515 N. Illinois street. The other is Clarence R. Green, who was married to Miss E. C. Stevens. Clarence has for several years had charge of the retail department of his brother-in-law's business, E. A. Nelson. They have gone to housekeeping at 3507 N. Senate avenue and will be at home to their friends after September 1. Both of these young men are very popular with the craft and all wish them a long and happy married life.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The wholesale trade has experienced a good demand for choice blooms and has, at times, been unable to fill orders. At the same time poor stuff goes begging. Prices have not changed. Gladioli are coming in more plentifully and will soon be in full crop. Also many varieties and colors of the earlier asters are seen. A great deal of funeral work has been turned out the past week, and it seemed to be scattered all over the city, giving almost all of the florists a share.

Various Notes.

There are rumors of a new retail store on Euclid avenue.

Isaac Kennedy was in the city last week, and is looking well and hearty, showing no trace of his late sickness. He says that everything is going nicely at his place. The roses are showing a fine growth and he will soon be able to cut.

L. F. Darnell, manager of the J. M. Gasser Company, has returned from a two weeks' vacation trip to his old home.

S. N. Pentecost is also one of the lucky ones who have had their vacation. Sam took two weeks away from his work and had a splendid time.

F. L. Evans is missing this week from the store of the F. R. Williams Co., a sort of preliminary vacation.

P. J. Probeck has nearly completed his range of houses on Doan street, having everything in such shape that he could leave for a visit to the old country.

Cleveland expects to be well represented at the Milwaukee convention.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Hart left a few days ago for an extended trip through Europe.

WASHINGTON, PA.

The Washington Floral Company has nearly completed seven short-roofed greenhouses 14x150. Roses are already set in three houses, and three will be planted to carnations in the early part of August. The remaining house will be used for a general assortment of plants.

Warrick Brothers are building five short-roofed houses for growing vegetables.

A. D. Forrest has nearly completed four large houses for roses.

DES MOINES, IA.

Trade is at its midsummer dullness. The hustle is over with the store man and at its meridian with the growers. The latter is getting in soil for his carnations and topping them in the field and, in fact, between his 'mums, carnations and soil and his desire to go to Milwaukee he finds himself busy despite the pouring rays of Old Sol, and the store man's call over the 'phone "to take a day off and go fishing with him." Then there are the usual repairs that the experienced man attends to, which the less experienced and thoughtless one lets go until about time to start the fires for winter.

There is some building this year. Chas. Brandtman is building two houses 18x100 on East Twenty-fifth and Walnut streets. Julius Liedig is removing his houses from the flooded district to West Seventeenth and Grand avenue. I cannot say as to whether he expects to enlarge or not. W. L. Morris will content himself with his present range and build early next year.

J. F. Marshall, who began to drop his pennies into a paint keg after the Asheville convention, so that he might go to Milwaukee, says the keg got mislaid and as an "American beauty" came to their home a short time back and, as they have five boys and this is a girl, he claims all this a good and sufficient excuse for remaining away from the Cream City. So in all, I fear our representation at the convention will be small.

Our parks are looking well, especially Union Park, where the floral display is the finest in the state and Mr. Fulmer has many compliments passed on it daily. The aquatic garden is also good, the nelumbiums and nymphaeas being especially fine. The shrubbery that was planted this spring at Union Park promises well and the park commissioners are to be commended for their work in this direction. J. T. D. F.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The past week there has been quite a lot of funeral work but not much other trade. Sweet peas are more plentiful this week than last. Carnations are scarce and poor. Roses are coming better; Kaiserin is the leader.

The New Bedford Horticultural Club met July 25. Between fifteen and twenty members were present. William Keith presided and said the purpose of the meeting was to arrange for the fall flower show. Dennis Shea submitted a schedule. It was voted to add fruit to the list. It is planned to hold the show in City Hall, September 17 and 18. When the matter of judges came up, the members suggested that the services of James Parker, of Boston, be secured, while others favored selecting judges from their own members. It was finally voted to give the executive committee full power to select judges. The matter of admission fee was also left to the committee.

Chas. Bly has left the employ of W. L. G. Brown. C.

"Thripscide"

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for: Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

PIPING.

I have a greenhouse 18x25, with a sash in each side wall and the east gable glass. There is a bench three feet wide on each side and a center bench 8x12, with a solid bed 8x9 in the west end. The house is fairly well sheltered on the northwest by a dwelling. Using 2-inch pipe and hot water 55 degrees is required when the outdoor temperature is 15 to 20 degrees below zero.

F. E. C.

Fourteen lines of 2-inch pipes will be required for the effective heating of the greenhouse described, using hot water. These should be arranged as follows: Five pipes under each side bench, two being flows and three returns, and four pipes under the center bench, two flows and two returns. When the solid bed takes the place of the center bench the pipes can be hung on the side of the bed, in the walk.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

NUMBER OF PIPES.

Will you please give us suggestions as to the number of pipes to be used in a carnation house 18x60; north wall five feet high without glass; south wall six and one-half feet, protected by greenhouse about three-fourths of the way. Also an asparagus, smilax and fern house 11x25, lean-to, adjoining another greenhouse. Also a rose house 11x38, lean-to, south gutter six feet from ground, with two feet of glass in wall. The thermometer has registered 25 degrees below zero, but 14 to 18 degrees is about the lowest in an average winter.

JAKE.

Using hot water as the heating medium, he will require thirteen lines of 2-inch pipes in the carnation house, nine lines in the rose house and seven lines in the fern house.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

DES MOINES, IA.—Jas. Mineater, a Greek, was recently arrested and fined for selling flowers from a street stand. He caused the arrest of W. L. Morris for the same offense, but Mr. Morris was acquitted, as the city ordinance gives the privilege to those who grow their own flowers, while denying the right to those who have no greenhouses.

The Lord & Burnham Company's Hot Bed Sash and Frames

for growing Vegetables, Violets, etc., are the best, therefore the cheapest on the market. They are constructed of selected Red Gulf Cypress, strictly free from sap, in a thorough manner and combine strength with durability. All joints are white leaded and are held with steel dowel pins. An iron rod is run through the centre of all the sash bars, tying the sash and giving support to the bars. All sash are glazed with good quality double thick glass, and receive two coats of paint.

We keep in stock 3 x 6 ft. and make all sizes of sash to order and also carry in stock Cypress Hot Bed Frames to hold any number of sash. These frames are portable and can be taken apart for storage when not in use.

We are able to make prompt shipments and our liberal freight allowance covers most points in Eastern and Middle States.

The Commercial Florist

NEEDS a manufacturing plant that will produce the largest number of perfect blooms for the least money. In common with all manufacturers, his advantage lies in economy of operation. The regulation of heat and ventilating in large ranges must be accomplished with the least possible labor; every pound of coal must be utilized to the limit in the boilers; the construction must be of such quality and style as to reduce the maintenance account to a minimum, etc. Acres upon acres cultivated under our glass by commercial florists attest the superiority of our structures for economical production. Our buildings on private estates are designed and erected with the same requirements of economical operation always in view. There is perhaps more expense in their ornamental effect, but they are just as practical.

Catalogue of Iron Greenhouse Construction will be mailed from our New York office on receipt of five cents for postage.

If you want the best paying crop that you can plant for summer plant....

The Pierson Fern

There is nothing that you can plant that will increase in value so rapidly as this fern. The demand has been so great, and our advance sales so large, that we have not offered it recently, having only just completed filling advance orders. We have a nice lot of young stock coming on, and can fill all orders received from this date promptly on receipt. Even at the present high price it has been impossible to keep up with the demand, and there is sure to be a tremendous demand for it another season when it can be offered at lower prices. Now is the time to invest in it and get the benefit of the tremendous demand and good prices which are sure to prevail another season. The Boston Fern, although it has been cultivated many years, is still scarce. As Nephrolepis Piersoni will sell better and be in greater demand even than the Boston Fern, we predict a scarcity of Nephrolepis Piersoni for several years to come and at big prices. Owing to the great and continued demand, we do not expect to be more than able to meet the demand this spring, so that customers can rest assured that there will be no change in price this season.

We offer strong young plants, 2½-in. pots, at $9.00 per doz.; 50 plants at 60c each; 100 plants at 50c each; 500 plants at 45c each; 1000 plants at 40c each.

Extra large plants, 6-in. pots, $27.00 per doz.; 50 plants at $1.80 each; 100 plants at $1.50 each. These large plants will make fine stock for growing on into large specimens for fall trade, and they are also very nice for immediate sales.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

EARLY VARIETIES.

If you are growing any of the very early varieties with the idea of cutting flowers from October 1 onward, it is high time to be selecting the buds, if any are yet showing on the plants. To get flowers early one must, of course, use the crown buds on these early varieties, or otherwise they will be early chiefly in name.

Such sorts as Lady Fitzwygram, Bergmann, Marquis de Montmort and October Sunshine may all have the buds taken with safety from August 1 onward, and as it takes a bud from forty to sixty days to develop, according to variety, you will be able to commence cutting by the last week in September, providing you need them so soon. Last year the early flowers sold very poorly, owing to the fact that there was such an abundance of outdoor flowers so late in the season. This year it may be the same, or, again, it may happen that a freeze may cut things down outside the first week in October, and in such a case the early 'mums are profitable.

Glory of the Pacific and its sports, Polly Rose, Cremo, Estelle, etc., should not have their buds taken before August 20. In my experience I have found that buds taken at an earlier date on Pacific either did not come good or blasted and did not come at all. Pacific comes quickly after the bud is taken, being generally ready to cut the first week in October.

Two varieties that I spoke highly of last year, being ready to cut by October 10, were Lady Harriet and Alice Byron. The buds on these two varieties were taken August 10 to 12 and they finished splendidly. Following closely on the two last named was Mrs. Coombes, which, from buds taken August 18, produced very fine flowers by October 12 to 15. Coombes is one of the best keeping pink 'mums that I know of and is planted extensively this year.

Following Coombes the varieties come in thick and fast and the market fills up rapidly. It is much too early yet to be taking the buds on the general run of the varieties and the ones I have mentioned are possibly not much grown except by those growers who want to get the crop cut out early. The last week in August is early enough for selecting the buds on such varieties as Mrs. Robinson, Eaton, Morel, etc., and for some varieties even later than that.

Red Spider.

Red spider often gets under the foliage at this time of year and is liable to become numerous in a very short time if not kept track of. If syringing is done constantly and properly, spider should not be troublesome, yet the fact remains that one seldom sees a house of chrysanthemums entirely free from it in August. When syringing one should endeavor all the time to wash the under side of the foliage and not worry about the top. It is a good idea to get a spraying attachment fixed on the hose once in a while and with it spray every plant thoroughly. Caterpillars and other insects whose presence had previously not been suspected will be brought to light by this means. I have had flowers ruined by red spider before I noticed it, and if the plants are not clean before the bud shows color trouble may be looked for when spraying has to be discontinued. BRIAN BORU.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

After you have your plants well established and before you put on any supports you will need to give them a thorough cleaning of all dead foliage, etc. This is an operation that I have always hesitated in advocating on account of the danger to the plants that attends it. It will try your patience to the utmost and only your most careful and painstaking employees should be put at it. Not more than one man in a dozen is really capable of doing this work properly from morning till night. Our American people generally have too many nerves. They want to see some progress and in order to make a show their work is often slighted to the detriment of the object that is supposed to be benefited.

Remember that the roots are just taking hold of the soil and they are young and tender, and if you pull the plant around you are liable to break off many of them and thus check the plants' progress toward recovery. So handle them carefully. Don't gather as many leaves as you can, to be pulled off together, but place for disease to enter the tissues of the plant.

The best time to do this is when the plants are dry, as the leaves will break easier then. Any leaves that are spotted or diseased in any way should be removed. While you are doing this you can also straighten up any plants that lean to one side after you first watered them after planting, as often happens.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Care for Foliage.

The foliage of a plant may be said to be what our lungs are to us. Through this medium much necessary matter is absorbed; therefore it is most important that our attention be directed towards encouraging its perfect health lest some lurking disease obtain a foothold. Not only must we govern the supply of food and water, but surround our plants with those two life-giving agencies, light and pure air.

The question of light should have received your attention at time of house construction, but pure air may be lacking in the lightest of houses, either owing to insufficient or improper arrangement of ventilation, or on account of decaying vegetable matter being allowed to collect under the benches or elsewhere.

I am a firm believer in side ventilation and, if your houses are not so provided, would advise that some plan be devised to secure such, at least temporarily; then with doors at one or both ends and ample ventilation at the ridge one can, by observation, keep the air constantly changing without subjecting the plants to sudden changes or unnecessary blasts of wind.

Air rising from decaying matter, such as dead leaves, plants, weeds and rotten wood, can result in nothing but a pollupull off each leaf separately and instead of pulling straight away from the stem, give a side-ways pull, which will tear the leaf crossways right at the stem. The danger in the other way is that you will often pull a thread along with it and thus injure the bark on the stem. You can readily see that if this happens several times on a stem it will seriously cripple the plant, besides being a good tion of the air, to say nothing of the breeding ground furnished for wood lice, snails, etc. Fungous diseases are often developed in a house where affected leaves and plants have been carelessly thrown about and left to await an opportunity to start afresh. See to it that your plants have congenial surroundings of every possible nature. After a thorough cleaning, give the space under the benches a generous dusting of air-slaked lime.

Last season some of the new varieties were, with me, more or less affected with rust, but this year they are coming in practically free from it. I have never considered rust to be a dangerous affection; in fact, almost every variety of merit lately introduced has shown susceptibility to it.

The most that can be done for affected plants at this time is to remove all affected leaves. This, followed immediately by an application of grape dust over the plants, will mean the destruction of any rust mites that may have been shaken or left about the plants. Weekly applications for a month and then at longer intervals during the season will greatly assist in preserving the health of the plants.

Opinion differs as to the advisability of removing dead leaves from plants after digging and before benching. Our practice has been to remove the greater part at once after digging, also the few leaves which constituted the foliage of the plant when set in the field and which have grown to such a size as to impede that free circulation of air so necessary to the thorough drying out of the foliage when syringed or sprinkled. This removal of leaves can be done so much more handily and quickly before planting than after, that the mere trifle of delay occasioned is of little account when compared to the time that will be of time, space and labor. Being a constitutional disease, there is no remedy but the destruction of affected plants, and extreme care in the selection of cuttings will eliminate the trouble.

WORMS IN SOIL.

What can we do to eradicate worms, of which we enclose a specimen and which are now infesting the soil in our new benches, as well as old carnation benches, and eat into the buds. The soil used was taken from an old asparagus bed, heavily manured for the past thirty years, spaded but never plowed up. Is there any solution that can be used to spray the buds without injury to same or to soak the ground without injury to roots? There is no injury done to the roots by these worms, and seemingly, they only appear at night, eating into the hearts of the buds.

L. E. C.

The bud you sent with your inquiry showed plainly the damage that was done by the worm, but the worm was gone. You can destroy many of them by spraying your carnations with Paris green. Put a tablespoonful of Paris green into three gallons of water and keep well stirred while you spray it on the plants. Apply it in the evening and repeat it every other day if you syringe your plants every day, which you likely do now. Sprinkle some fine tobacco dust on the soil and water it and see if that will not drive them out. Put about a 3-inch potful in a row across a 5 or 6-foot bench. This should only be done if the plants are pretty well established. I would not apply it more than half that heavy if the plants have only been planted a couple of weeks.

NOVELTIES FOR 1904.

Indianapolis, the result of a cross of Armazindy and Mrs. Joost, is to be distributed by Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis, who have grown it three years and have a stock of 10,000 plants. The color is a bright, clear pink and does not fade as the blooms age. The parentage is an indication of free blooming qualities, but the owners say that its floriferousness is remarkable when the size of the bloom is taken into consideration. The flower is well built up in the center, the calyx does not burst and the stem is long and strong. The habit of the plant is all that could be asked.

SOIL CARRYING MACHINE.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs which show the new soil conveying machine, for emptying and refilling rose and carnation houses, used this season by the Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y. The apparatus was built especially for us by the Engineering & Power Co., of Jamestown, who are also the designers.

The machine is a grand invention and a success for the purposes it was intended for and does the work in a remarkable manner. As the pictures show, the soil is carried in on an endless belt twelve inches wide, the machine being operated by an electric motor, although gasoline or steam power will answer the purpose just as well. The machine is portable throughout and is built in sections of ten feet, so that two men can handle and carry them easily. It is adapted to fit any length or width of house, having side conveyers for wide houses, and will drop the soil just where it is wanted.

One of the illustrations shows the "tripper," which is movable and runs on a railroad of 1-inch square iron. As will be seen, one man operates and moves along rapidly as the desired amount of soil is deposited in the beds.

consumed in removing the leaves later.

A few weekly applications of Bordeaux mixture will reduce the chances of an attack of leaf spot to a minimum. While intensive cultivation is the best means to be employed in assisting the plants to outgrow bacteriosis. As this and other ailments are materially assisted by aphides, regular fumigation must be practiced.

Plants affected with dry rot should be pulled up and fresh plants put in their place. It is of no use to cut away the affected branches, leaving the seemingly healthy ones, as it is almost invariably but a question of a short time before the whole plant will succumb.

Assuming that a few are saved, there is danger of a mistake in taking cuttings from these at propagating time resulting in the appearance of the same trouble the following season. This is particularly undesirable, as dry rot has a faculty of not showing itself until after housing, thereby entailing a loss

Emptying Benches with Soil Carrying Machine.

Crusher and Elevator on Soil Carrying Machine.

Notice the belt full of soil as it goes up to the tripper, to be emptied on the bench, through the chute.

Another picture shows the men emptying a house and shoveling the soil into the hopper, depositing it on the belt on which it is carried very rapidly out and into the wagons. The hopper also runs on the railroad and is moved along as desired. It is twelve feet long and five men are used on each side, taking the entire house as they go. Houses 300 feet long and thirty-three feet wide, with five beds each five feet wide, can be emptied with this force in three and one-half hours, and to fill it takes only four and one-half hours, where it usually took a day and a half for each operation, with a much larger force of men. Besides, the machine empties directly into the wagons, as is shown in another picture. This is a decided advantage, having to handle the soil only once to take it where it is to go.

One of the many good points of this machine is its hopper, fitted with grinder and mixer as used when filling the houses. This is a roller four feet long, cast solid, with heavy, dull teeth. Ordinary stones do not affect it; they are broken and ground up, while if a big stone gets in, the sides of the hopper are fitted with springs that readily release it. The soil can be had in any desired way, fine or coarse, by setting the springs on each side of the hopper. It is then carried into the buckets, up the elevator and dumped down the chute on the belt, which carries it on to the tripper.

Another good point is the reversible elevator which both fills and empties the houses and can be reversed in ten minutes. Pictures show this in both positions and it is quite important, for, after the machine is set up in a house, it is never changed until the house is finished, and the quickness in changing the elevator from emptying to refilling keeps our teams busy all the time, for as soon as the last load of soil is out of the house, they commence bringing the new soil back, so that not a minute is lost.

The machine is a decided advantage over wheelbarrows or any other contrivance in the florists' world today, both in economy and as a time saver, besides the advantages gained in early planting. It is a twentieth century idea and for large plants something besides the old-fashioned way must be adopted. Large concerns cannot get along without a machine of this kind; besides the machine will save its cost in one year.

The Lake View Rose Gardens has no interest in this machine other than giving its views and as a help to some of its suffering brethren. We claim for the machine a success and it will do all that is claimed for it. C. H. RONEY.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

By reason of the press of work during carnation benching, roses will be liable to be somewhat neglected, and as this is the time when they really demand constant care and attention in such matters as tying, disbudding and cultivating, it is well to be on our guard, and to remember that neglect at this season means fewer buds and very likely of an inferior quality for first cut, and the plants are likely to lose a part of the best growing season.

In order to get carnations benched as quickly as possible all hands are usually called on for aid, but where the rose crop is of equal importance with carnations, it is wise to leave a few of the most experienced hands to at least keep things straight in the rose section during this period, for if all are called off, watering and syringing will have to be done in a hurried manner, tying will be entirely neglected and disbudding, which just now is one of the most important duties, will be postponed, allowing every eye, however unsuited, to break, forming a thicket of weak, straggling wood which never can produce anything approaching a high-grade bloom.

I am urged to write thus strongly on this subject because year after year we see the same neglected conditions in rose houses on places where we would expect something better, and whole houses of roses where the plants were otherwise strong and healthy simply spoiled as far as a first crop is concerned. The same old excuses offered to each visiting grower. The injury done to rose plants by this neglect is incalculable and even the wisest course of treatment fails to place them on their former footing until the season is so far advanced that there is often a loss instead of a good profit, as the season of best demand and good prices is past before they attain their best.

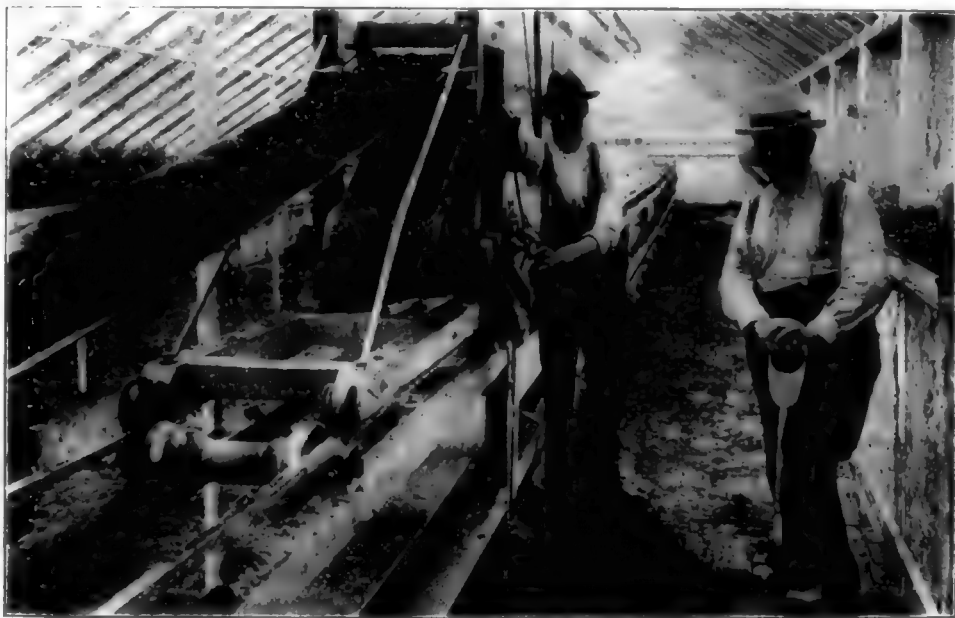

Brides and Bridesmaids suffer more if neglected than most other roses, and care should be taken to have these varieties neatly tied up at all times and the disbudding attended to at least twice a week, till it is determined to develop a crop. The extra care and attention bestowed on them will bring its reward before many weeks are over.

Grafted stock should be looked over carefully and all the suckers from the stock removed with care. This should be done by cutting them neatly off with a sharp knife and not by the slovenly method so often put in practice by the inexperienced, of pulling them off by sheer force. RIBES.

THE LEAF ROLLER.

We send you some branches from our rose plants, infested with a worm which has done much damage in our rose houses the past three weeks. As we do not know the worm we do not know how to get rid of it. We have been picking them off every morning, but they are getting so numerous we must find some other remedy. C. S.

These caterpillars are the larvae of a moth of the Tortricidae family, commonly known as leaf rollers, and are very destructive to roses and many other plants grown under glass. Fortunately there are many simple and effective means of destroying them. One of the best and quickest remedies is pyrethrum powder. This should be in as fresh a condition as possible, as if it is the least stale it is of no effect and this accounts for the many complaints as to its inefficacy. For use as a dry powder, in which state I consider it most effective, it may be diluted with flour in the proportion of one of the powder to four of flour. Close the ventilators and apply with the powder blower. Twice a week is sufficient.

Helebores administered as a dry powder is also very effective, as this kills by contact and also by being eaten. Paris green is the most common remedy used in rose houses, and is applied in the dry state. It should be diluted with some fine powder and well mixed. Air slaked lime as a diluent answers the purpose admirably; the proportion should be lime forty, poison one. Apply with powder blower and refrain from syringing for twenty-four hours. Two applications per week will soon clean them out. RIBES.

MIGNONETTE CULTURE.

English growers of this annual, by a system of culture peculiarly their own, convert the plant into a semi-shrub and perpetuate its life for a period of from six to eight years. In my last article on mignonette I described the method of selecting, harvesting, storing and sowing the seed, and its culture and care up to its blooming stage.

These methods in this case are pertinent up to the stage where training begins by removing the two topmost leaves. Where it is designed to train the plant into its tree form, the training must be deferred till the plant has reached the length desired for height of stem. The stem must be supported and kept in an upright position and all the leaves along the plant in this form, as any approach towards pinching as resorted to in chrysanthemum culture is simply ruin.

When the plant has formed a head measuring eight or ten inches across, the leaves and branches along the stem should be gradually removed, taking off two or three of these at intervals of four or five days, beginning from the bottom. Training should be continued till November, when the flower buds can be allowed to develop.

A compost of four parts loam to one of well decomposed cow manure, with one-sixteenth of the entire bulk of sand and the same quantity of old lime mortar added suits admirably. The last shift should be given before the middle of September, giving ample drainage and leaving room for a light mulch when required.

These plants thrive best in a deep frame or pit, with the back to the south, and should have a lath shading during bright weather. Before the nights get cold they should be brought into a house having a night temperature not exceeding 54 degrees.

I have frequently seen plants with three-foot or four-foot stems and with perfectly symmetrical heads measuring three feet across and literally covered with blooms. And many of these specimens were grown by amateurs who did not possess a foot of glass other than a sash frame and their window accommodation, and yet they kept them in good flowering condition for as long as six and eight years. gasoline. After wetting the ground I made a hole with a stick, about six inches deep, filled it with gasoline and then trod the earth down solid. It killed most of them. I repeated the dose when any made their appearance and am now entirely free from the pest. The gasoline did not hurt cannas or strawberries. I. A. W.

ADAPTING IDEAS.

A florist who was short of flowers when making up a pillow remembered having seen a Japanese curtain with one corner cut off and finally solved his pillow difficulty by omitting flowers from one corner of his design. He was much praised for the "artistic inspiration."

The plan for the rose garden at the Chicago World's Fair was taken from the ornamental casting on top of a radiator in the office of the officials. An imprint of the radiator was taken by covering it with shoe blacking and then smoothly pressing a sheet of paper against it.

The plan for an odd and especially attractive ribbon bed was taken from the ornamentation of a seam in a pair of rubbers purchased by an observing park superintendent.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

One can gather all sorts of reports as to the state of the market, but on the whole it may be said that seldom, if ever, has there been so little stock in the market or rose values so high at this season, quality of stock, of course, being considered. But even at that there have several times lately been too many carnations. Roses continue scarce, but more growers are beginning to cut from young stock and supplies are sure to increase steadily from this on. Just the same Beauties are still hard to get. Kaiserin is scarce and Meteor is of about the best average quality.

Some good white carnations, mostly Flora Hill, are coming in and have brought fine prices one day and nothing to brag of the next, according to supply and demand. It is impossible to carry them over night and retain their freshness. Outdoor carnations are coming in more plentifully and asters are beginning to pile up. F. W. Timme says this should be a great year for asters because of the fine growing weather, but qualities are not very high and prices are decidedly low. As a matter of fact, all outdoor flowers are clogging the market. Aurums are very abundant and of widely varying quality. Ferns received from the east are very fine now.

Various Notes.

E. F. Kurowski, of the Moninger Co., was at Mendota the other day and says that Henry Schweitzer was put completely out of business by the recent storm. But Mr. Kurowski's firm is helping him to rebuild and friends in the trade will largely restock the place.

Encourage the plant to make a clean stem of from three to four feet before taking out the tips, and after that keep picking out the tips of each shoot after it has made four or five leaves. This part of the training is of the utmost importance in the successful culture of

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market is decidedly summery now; there is an air of repose about the business center, broken only by an occasional ripple. Asters are more plentiful, of better quality and sell fairly, with prices a trifle lower. Good roses are wanted occasionally and can generally be had. Gladiolus are still plentiful, but are not in demand. Eugene Bernheimer received his first shipment of outdoor carnations, chiefly Ethel Crocker. The stores in the center of the city are evidently doing a little business. Their show windows are arranged with unusual taste and care for mid-summer, showing that the proprietors realize that business may be created.

A Change in Name Only.

The firm of Henry F. Michell has become the Henry F. Michell Company, Incorporated. Henry F. Michell is president and secretary, Fred J. Michell is vice-president and treasurer. This is a change in name only.

This seed firm, started about a dozen years ago at 101 South Market street, is today one of the largest and most successful in the country. Their business this season increased fifty per cent over that of the year before—a phenomenal improvement when the size of their previous business is considered. They employ forty-five persons in their various departments. A visitor is always impressed with the fact that these employes all have their duties to perform and they do them.

Quite a number of extensive improvements are about to be carried out. One-half of the entire second story is to be fitted up for a flower seed department in the most approved modern style, similar in many respects to the vegetable seed department put on the third floor a year ago, found to be a great aid in facilitating the filling of orders. The offices are to be moved from the first to the second floor to give more room for the display of merchandise. Also a first-class freight elevator is to be put in the rear portion of the building.

The success of the brothers is deserved. They have worked hard, used good judgment and have dealt fairly by their customers.

Notes.

Edward Reid has returned from the south much pleased with his trip. He found the southern florists in a prosperous condition. At Savannah, Georgia, he had the pleasure of seeing a box of his own flowers unpacked in perfect condition. Mr. Reid mentioned that the REVIEW is considered to be the paper in the south, because it gives cultural notes and news of interest.

James Heacock has for some months been foreman in charge of his father's big place at Wyncote. The palms are in beautiful condition, doing credit to father and son. The roses are all planted and growing nicely. The Beauties are the picture of health. A house of Liberty was in excellent condition.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., is arranging for the firm's handsome exhibit at Milwaukee.

The failure of the Doylestown bank is a very serious matter for many of the florists in that neighborhood. The cashier of the bank believes that the depositors will be paid in full. It is earnestly hoped that this may be true.

John C. Gracey, of the Woodford Floral Exchange, 2028 Columbia avenue, has purchased a property at 2024 Columbia avenue. The lot is thirty feet front, with a building on it which he intends to convert into a modern, first-class florist shop, with room for greenhouse in the rear. Mr. Gracey is also proprietor of the Plender Nurseries, 1230 North Twenty-sixth street.

Edward Reid is improving his facilities by adding a room for roses to his basement. The idea is to have a naturally moist atmosphere with plenty of air. Ice can be used when necessary. The room is neatly fitted up with adjustable shelves and should prove a great addition. Electric lights will also be added.

Herman Schoenfeld has finally moved into his new and commodious store on the east side of Seventeenth, below Chestnut street.

It was canna night at the Florists' Club meeting on Tuesday. Antoine Wintzer read a paper on new and meritorious varieties. Convention matters were discussed. A good delegation from this city is promised, leaving Monday, August 17, at 8:40 a. m., over the Pennsylvania railroad.

Wm. Graham is preparing to open a store at 108 South Thirteenth street.

PHIL.

BUFFALO.

The Picnic Spoiled.

This is the "day of our discontent." We were to have a picnic this afternoon and Emile Brucker, the amiable and yet cute and industrious right bower of W. F. Kasting's wholesale emporium, and who is the chairman of the committee, says that 150 tickets were sold. If so, and it is so, what a time we would have had, but it is raining, not cats and dogs, but large drops of liquid that annoy the belated harvester of hay and wheat, make the ground admirable for lifting carnations, spoil the track for harness trotters, do great benefit to the corn crop and beat down the ripening oats. All vegetation luxuriates and yet it is inclement for church and other picnics. Our picnic was not classed as a church picnic, and yet I dare to say that there would have been more sanctity and good morals displayed in its fulfillment than at most so called church picnics, where the principal object in view for priest or pastor is revenue for the institution, medieval faddist and crankology.

Business is now at its lowest ebb and it's no use kicking. We have no ocean vessel trade, or only an occasional order, and then it must be wired to New York with the full confidence that our correspondents will try to fill the order, but with some trepidation lest there will be a missing link somewhere. There are more than ten steamers sailing out of Buffalo every day, besides schooners, barges and numerous other craft, and they carry lots of people, but no flowers are sent them as they leave the muddy waters of Buffalo Creek. Their friends know, of course, that although they cannot get the equal in quality (?), they can get common flowers in Erie, Cleveland, Detroit, Sault Ste. Marie, Milwaukee or Chicago if they go to any of those places, and if they go to the far western end of the big lake, then Duluth can supply the simple roses that will be wanted!

To the Convention.

I had one lone friend ask the water route he could take in the ride to Milwaukee. Some people have the bump of geography but poorly developed. If they only have enough to eat and drink around them, they are not interested in the points of the compass or the relative positions of big rivers, lakes, states or cities. They trust to other people's looking out for those things, and they are below, or above, their consideration. Milwaukee is on the west side of Lake Michigan, eighty miles north of Chicago, which is almost at the foot of the lake. The big, fine steamers sailing from Buffalo go to Cleveland, Detroit and Duluth. To get down to Milwaukee from the big steamers Northland and North-west, you would have to change or rather take another steamer at the Straits of Mackinac and then sail 200 miles or more south on Lake Michigan along the shores of Wisconsin before you reached the familiar smell of hops. This would be lovely with a young bride, likewise an old one, but it is good only for those who have nothing else to do, or nothing but their time to spend. And again, I take the liberty to say that a really pleasant way from the east to Milwaukee is to take the Detroit boat at Buffalo on Sunday evening at 5:30, arriving at Detroit at about 8 or 9 o'clock Monday a. m., join the Detroit boys in their journey across their beautiful state to the shores of Lake Michigan, and then another lake ride into Milwaukee, arriving there early on Tuesday. And possibly the same steamer calls at Chicago, but if it does not, you will only have escaped some temptations "too awful to speak of."

KANSAS CITY.

No Show This Year.

Kansas City will not have a flower show this fall. The executive committee of Convention Hall has been considering the question, but when a number of citizens, who had supported the show liberally in the past, were asked to subscribe again, the success met with was insignificant compared with that of 1901 and 1902, as they had all been heavy losers in the flood. The abandonment of the flower show for this year, according to Fred S. Doggett, president of the Convention Hall directory, does not mean that no flower shows will be held in the future, as the expectation is that next year a bigger show than those of 1901 and 1902 will be held. The flower show will be continued as a permanent affair and, barring another flood or some other calamity, it will be held each year in the big hall, and we will be glad to see all the growers come and win our prizes.

Various Notes.

The stock of roses and carnations is very poor. Sweet peas are about gone and gladioli have been of great assistance to us. Some good asters are now being shown in some of the stores, but there is nothing doing except funeral work.

Miss Alma Beeler has returned from a trip through the eastern states.

W. L. Rock and family have returned from a four weeks trip. L. M. S.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The gladiolus time has come and this flower is "king for a day" and probably for several weeks, with asters and dahlias laying claim to sovereignty and the quantity of shipments growing constantly until the flooding of the market is inevitable. At the reasonable price of 50 cents per 100, which is about top for ordinary stock, there is no excuse for an undecorated window. The shipments from Cowee and Childs are enormous. A general condition of cheerfulness and hope prevails in both wholesale and retail trades. Of good flowers of all kinds there is not an oversupply and the outlook is encouraging.

Newport's season to date is a brilliant one, and is yet in its infancy. Daily shipments to this great center of fashion and fads, and artistic competition among the "400" or "600" are large and increasing. The best is none too good for the lavish display made there, and Siebrecht & Son, Wadley & Smythe and J. Hodgson, are reaping a bounteous harvest. All report the best season to date of their experience.

Various Notes.

The suggestions made as to bowling prizes in our last issue meet with general approbation and I have no doubt Mr. Pollworth has had many interesting donations from leading firms for the purpose, which he will announce.

Anything that can be suggested looking to a division of the crowd that will journey from New York to the convention, via the West Shore Railroad seems singularly inopportune at this late date, when it is realized that the real charm of the trip is in its associations, and in the fact that a sufficient number insures special accommodations clear through to Milwaukee without change of cars. It is true the fare and a third can be secured from other roads, but thereby changes of cars become necessary, and after the New York Club has officially selected a road, and after this road has provided specially for its patrons, even to the sending of an official chaperon, it would seem best that all should harmoniously unite in making the social feature of the trip an assured consummation, which with a divided delegation will be an impossibility. The call for berths made to Mr. Sheridan has been very encouraging already, however, and the attendance, as is always the case in our yearly journeyings, will be larger than anticipated. We left here forty-nine strong for Asheville last year. We should certainly double that when the noses are counted on Sunday, August 16, at 1 p. m., at which hour our special leaves for the "City of Inspiration."

The Milwaukee Club's souvenir has arrived and is a beautiful production, creditable to the club and to the artistic publisher, Mr. Pollworth, a brother of the society's vice-president. The sending of this work by mail so long in advance is most unusual and commendable, and its influence should add largely to the attendance at the convention; while its value as an advertising medium is greatly enhanced and it cannot fail to be of service to its patrons. Milwaukee, judging by its buildings and pleasure resorts and parks, must be an ideal convention city and the society will have no cause to regret the enthusiastic majority that decided in its favor.

Mr. James, of Bermuda, the Harrisii lily grower, left on Saturday for his island home.

The bulb houses here are rejoicing in the break of the foreign hyacinth market and the establishing at last of a basis for prices that makes intelligent quotations and sales a possibility. Talking of "breaks," the smash in the stock market affected seriously some of the best patrons of the horticulturists, losses aggregating millions having fallen upon some of them, men whose country homes and estates are marvels of landscape effects and plantings. It is much to the credit of the florists themselves that no wings have been scorched and no investments made by any of the speculative among them that have been on the wrong side of the market. Real estate seems to be the florists' specialty anyway, and several of the leaders have acquired independence thereby, so that their florist interests have become simply a pastime.

There will be a fall flower show this year that promises great things and the facilities for its accomplishment have never been equalled. The new Herald Square Exhibition Hall, where the show is to be held, is on the top floor of the new Macy building at Thirty-fourth street and Broadway, a hall with double the square feet of space for exhibits that the immense Madison Square building afforded. A dozen passenger elevators running directly to the hall, an acre of glass and a magnificent dome, with every convenience known to modern architecture, a superb and continuous lighting system and a perfect location all combine in making it the ideal exhibition hall of the country. Mr. Herrington is to be congratulated on the work he has accomplished and the splendid accommodations provided for the society of which he has the honor to be president. Seventy thousand square feet of space will give ample room for the greatest palm and plant exhibit ever made in America.

The great subway in New York approaches completion. The demoralization of the streets and the destruction of trees and shrubbery has been complete. Such hopeless desolation can only be imagined. But before another year all the former beauty, from a horticultural standpoint, is to be restored. The park department will have charge of the restoration, and we will then hope to restore to the metropolis its old time name of "the Paris of the New World."

In my last I mentioned the fact that one of the eastern exhibitors at the convention would send a car load of his wares. I should have said several of them. It is surprising how many will be there "with the goods" and what quantities are already on the way. Siebrecht & Son and Reed & Keller each have a car load in transit. Everybody is sending early, much earlier than usual. It is a good idea. Now Tuesday morning in Milwaukee will see everything in apple pie order and an attentive business opening is thereby assured.

Henry Siebrecht, Jr., is in Kentucky on his way via Detroit to Milwaukee, where he will superintend the exhibit of the firm. Nearly everybody is, has been, or will be away for his, or her, annual rest and recreation. Few will be left in this generous system of the leading wholesale and retail houses of the trade. With coats of tan on the proprietors and their assistants and new coats of paint on the stores generally, as is the annual custom, the first of September should see everybody ready for what in this strenuous age will surely be the best flower season of the century.

The New York Cut Flower Co. is adding to its room and conveniences, and the "Beauty King" says it will be "the greatest fall and winter in the flower business we have ever seen."

All the supply houses here are very busy and many of them are already in receipt of their importations. Nearly all of them will make fine displays at Milwaukee. Sigmund Geller has a space of 200 feet secured there and will exhibit many novelties of his European purchases, among them some unique designs in vases and ornaments of the latest styles. On his trip he visited Italy, France, Switzerland, Austria and Germany, reaching home on July 9. He has a variety of waterproof paper that will surely be popular. As a reward for duty well done and safe return, Mrs. Geller presented him last Tuesday with a fine boy, the first visit of the stork to his home, and now business is sure to boom.

The Ozone Park nurseries have at Ozone Park, N. Y., a manager well known to the trade, Mr. C. B. Knickman, and they commence business with the good wishes of his many friends. They are devoting forty acres to the growing of fancy nursery stock, making roses their specialty. The firm has nearly 100,000 roses already planted, and have contracted for extensive work in the laying out of private estates. The other members of the firm are Charles Ifinger and Edwin Weber. Long Island is developing an abundance of nurseries, but the field is wide and there is room for all. The fine nursery already established at Queens by C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, L. I., is meeting with exceptional encouragement and the demand for his high-class stock and specimens is already far in excess of the supply. Mr. Ward is recuperating at present in New Hampshire, with his family, and hopes to be at the convention.

Fred J. Blecher, of the Thomas J. Young, Jr.'s, forces, has been entertaining his mother and sister, of Cleveland, during his three weeks' outing. W. Donaghue, Jr., of the same house, has departed for Saratoga, Cleveland and Chicago and will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Preble while in Cleveland. Mr. Smith, of Smith & Feters, of that city, is now in New York, after a visit to his old home in Bridgeport, Conn.

Robert Rennison, of Wadley & Smythe, had a very unique contract on Monday in Greenwood, the lining of a grave with pink and white roses and the complete covering of the plot with the same flowers, with a groundwork of Clematis paniculata.

George Nash, head gardener at the New York Botanical Gardens, left Saturday for Hayti for a five weeks' botanical investigation, and Commissioner of Patents W. R. Wilcox sailed for the old country to study the park systems of London and Scotland.

RADIATION.

I am building a house 19x70 for roses. If I start with a 4-inch flow and upon entering the house branch to two 3-inch flows running to the farther end of the house, returning each with eight 1½-inch pipes, sixteen in all, will I have radiation enough to maintain a temperature of 65 degrees when the thermometer outdoors registers 10 degrees below zero? The house is three-quarter-span, long span to the south; no glass in side walls.

L. R. A.

He will have ample surface in the rose house with the pipe arrangement he describes, provided he gets a perfect circulation.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

LOWELLVILLE, O.—Frank Whetstone, in West Lowellville, is building a greenhouse. D. E. Hamilton has the contract.

TORONTO, OHIO.—David Aten's business has increased so that he is not able to handle it alone and he has taken his son-in-law, S. B. Wilson, into partnership, the firm name now being Aten & Wilson. They were cleaned out of all stock this spring. Trade is now quiet, but they are busy painting and repairing.

FORT DODGE, IA.—P. L. Larson is the only florist here since the Fort Dodge Greenhouse Company went out of business. He had a good season and is ready for another, building two houses 20x75, using 16x18 D. S. A. glass. He has his roses and carnations all benched and two houses of carnations, 22x125. Mr. Larson will be at the convention.

WASHINGTON, PA.—The Washington Floral Company has completed its incorporation. The company was organized early in the year, purchased the McBurney place and has erected the most extensive greenhouses in the county. The stockholders named are, W. J. Warrick, Edward Culbertson, J. W. Warrick, John M. Wilson, George H. Warrick, A. J. Culbertson, William Christman, P. G. Kennedy, Todd Culbertson, John Salmons and J. M. Dickson.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The good rains of last week had a beneficent effect on all outdoor stock and livened things up wonderfully. There was also a welcome change in the temperature, the last few nights being very cool. The summer trade is about as usual. The past week it was fairly good on account of funeral work, which seemed to be pretty well distributed among the retailers. The market here has its ups and downs; one day there is plenty of everything in the market and the next day everything seems scarce. White flowers have the greatest call and very often all colored stock is left over for want of demand.

The roses that came in last week showed the effects of the hot weather that we have been having, and the bulk of them are very poor indeed. Of these, Bride and Kaiserin sell the best, with Golden Gate and Bridesmaid next in order. There is not much call for red roses just now. The price is not over $5 per 100 when good. A few fairly good American Beauties from young stock are in the market and sell well. Asters are becoming more plentiful each week and will soon rival the sweet peas of a few weeks ago. The bulk of them are very small and do not sell so well as the larger ones. Good ones go at $1.50 per 100. Tuberose stalks are coming in better and are very much in demand at present. Armstrong's Everblooming are the best sellers. There are plenty of gladioli at the wholesale houses, but the demand is somewhat slow and a great many of them are going to waste. A. Berdan's valley is very fine and the demand good. Hydrangeas are in at $4 per 100 for the large heads and $2 and $3 for the smaller ones. Good smilax has been in good demand right along, with the supply only fair. This sells at the regular price.

Various Notes.

During the past week everybody was talking of the good time he had at the club's recent picnic and complimented the committee on the way it handled the affair. Those who did not go were sorry after reading the account and hearing the compliments passed.

Only two weeks more and we will be among friends whom we are all glad to meet. No doubt Brother Pollworth and his colleagues have everything in readiness to give us a good time. State Vice President Juengel says St. Louis is going thirty-five strong. Everybody who can possibly go should send his or her name to Mr. Juengel. As St. Louis is out for the next meeting, during our great World's Fair, we should have a large delegation at Milwaukee.

Don't forget the club meeting next Thursday, August 13, at Brother Jablonsky's place at Wellston. Take the suburban cars to Suburban Park. This meeting is the most important of the year. Election of officers will be held and all arrangements for the Milwaukee trip will be made. Henry Lunnons will read his essay on "How to Keep Down Greenfly." As Henry never has any greenfly about his place, it will be worth your while to hear how he keeps them down. With all these important features on the program, President Dunford expects that every member will be present and enjoy one of those pleasant outdoor meetings. Mr. Jablonsky invites all florists on this occasion and assures them a good time.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers is reported as being dangerously sick at her home on Linden boulevard. Will Adels and Charles Schonele have charge of her place in her absence and report trade as fairly good for this time of the year.

Mrs. William Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., is spending the summer months up north, accompanied by her daughter Alice. Mr. Ellison is running the store during their absence, with fairly good business in funeral work.

Robert F. Tesson returned last week from St. Joseph, where he spent a week in encampment with Battery L, of which he is a member. Robert is taking things easy out in Clayton these hot days and very seldom comes to town. He will be at the convention, as he is down for a paper on "A System of Accounts for Greenhouses."

The Kalish boys on Delmar boulevard are making some good improvements on their place for next fall's trade. Both of the boys will take in the Milwaukee convention.

Mr. Gorley, on Fifteenth street and Cass avenue, is making some improvements on his store. The new show house in the rear of his store looks fine. Mr. Gorley says business has been good with him the past season.

Henry Berning is making preparations to move about August 15 into his new place at 1402 Pine street, which is much larger than the old and has a better light. This will make the third time that this store has been occupied as a wholesale house, first by William Ellison and later by F. M. Ellis.

Mrs. Theo. Miller and daughter will return this week from their six weeks' stay in Europe, and Theodore is happy, as he says this bachelor life is not what it is cracked up to be. Mr. Miller is putting in a large new ice box, which will put him in good shape for the coming season.

C. C. Sanders has just finished building a new residence for the help at his place on the Henly road. Mr. Sanders has some of the finest young nursery stock about here, which will make good this fall when the big orders come in.

R. J. Mohr has left the employ of the landscape department at the World's Fair grounds. Mr. Mohr is out with a new enterprise. He will take care of any of the exhibits in plants, trees or seeds that come to the fair. He can be addressed in my care.

H. M. Earl, who represents the seed house of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor last week, as was young Mr. Siebrecht, of Siebrecht & Son, of New York. Both of these firms expect to make big displays at the World's Fair next year and were here selecting space for same.

Bowling.

The bowlers had a hot night of it last Monday and some very fair scores were made. The boys are confident that they will come out on top at Milwaukee. Carl Beyer, C. A. Kuehn and J. J. Beneke need new hats and will again take on that Chicago big three if they so desire. The following scores were made Monday night:

Player—	1st.	2d.	3d.	T'l.
J. J. Beneke	219	178	185	592
C. A. Kuehn	169	159	172	500
Theo. Miller	149	148	156	453
Emil Schray	136	138	161	435
F. M. Ellis	150	151	150	451
Fred Weber, Jr.	124	121	...	345
Will Adels	163	163

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Good flowers are really scarce. I have not seen any first-class roses or carnations for the last week. Everything appears to be off crop and there is a very fair demand for indoor stock. Prices are about the same as they have been for the last two months and anything good is very easy to dispose of. First-class American Beauty roses are not to be had, and Maid and Testout are all weak and wobbly. Some fairly good Kaiserins are seen and they bring 50 to 75 cents per dozen, which is a very fair price for summer. I spoke to-day to one of our most successful carnation growers and he told me he had not cut ten dozen good Lawsons in the last ten weeks. Sievers & Boland have a very nice showing of fancy carnations; about the best in town, I think. Shibley is exhibiting some very fine Estelle and Flora Hill. We will have plenty of long-stemmed asters in a few days, however, and they will fill a long-felt want.

Various Notes.

Chas. E. Navlet, of the C. E. Navlet Company, of San Jose, has been sued by his wife, in the Superior Court here, to recover property valued at more than $25,000. Judge Murasky issued an injunction restraining Mr. Navlet from doing anything further with the property pending the trial.

A visit to the nurseries of E. Gill, at West Berkeley, at this time of the year is an interesting sight. They are in the middle of their budding season and one block of roses covering about thirty-five acres and containing about a quarter of a million stocks to be budded is in splendid shape. About eight budders are at work and it will be about the middle of August before the ground is covered completely. The demand for budded roses for forcing purposes is greater than ever and already a large part of next season's stock is sold, to be delivered during the coming autumn. This firm also has about thirty acres devoted to ornamental and deciduous trees and several acres to greenhouse and smaller shrubbery.

R. P. Jennings, the well-known horticulturist, has received the following letter from J. H. Bingham, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture: "Appreciating most highly the itinerary arranged by you for the German agriculturists, the Department of Agriculture extends to you its most cordial thanks for the efficient, successful and hospitable manner in which as many of the resources of California in agriculture, horticulture and forestry as the time would allow were brought to the attention of this party. We congratulate you on impressing them with the magnitude, liberality and hospitality of your state." G.

KINDLY take our adv. out of the REVIEW as we are getting more orders than we can fill. Yours is the best paper to advertise in.—BENTZEN FLORAL Co., St. Louis, Mo.

The Proceedings of the First Annual Meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America has reached us, a well-printed pamphlet of 76 pages, the greater part of which is given to the papers read at the Art Institute, Chicago, November 12 and 13, 1902. The frontispiece is a portrait of President Arthur Herrington.

WASHINGTON.

Death in a Fire.

Fire broke out in the home of David Bissett, the largest violet grower in this neighborhood, at noon August 2. In the course of an hour this place and the adjoining residence was totally destroyed, Mr. Bissett's two-year-old daughter Florence perishing in the burning house. Mr. Bissett's sister-in-law was preparing dinner, and was lighting the oil stove, when an explosion occurred, setting the kitchen on fire in an instant. Mrs. Bissett was lying ill up stairs. As soon as she heard the screams of her sister she arose with her infant child in her arms and made for the lower floor. The other two children were with her in her room, but owing to her weak condition, she was unable to take them with her. A niece of Mr. Bissett ran to the bed room, which by that time was filled with smoke, but could only find the three-year-old daughter. Choked with smoke she made for the door, when she heard the heart-rending appeal: "Lassie, take me with you!" It was too late. Overcome by the smoke, she had barely time to escape with the older child. Mr. Bissett and neighbors made several attempts to save the other little one, but were driven back by smoke. The money loss will amount up to $10,000, and Mr. Bissett was insured only to the amount of $2,500. Mrs. Bissett is in a serious condition. She was moved to a neighbor's house and attended to by Dr. Lewis, of Kensington. Mr. Bissett has the heartfelt sympathy of the craft and the community. F. H. KRAMER.

OMAHA.

The past week saw, among other things, the third annual florists' picnic, held under the auspices of the Nebraska Florists' Society, at Courtland Beach, East Omaha. The attendance was large and the affair successful from every point of view. Supper was served at 7 p. m., after which a match game of ten pins was rolled. The ladies of the party rolled also, but the pins here did not fall very rapidly, quite in contrast to the teams of Henderson and Floth. A special vaudeville show was given later in the evening, and by 11:15 the various parties were home bound.

Trade is very quiet. Carnations, owing to extreme hot weather, are almost out of business, but the rose supply keeps up very well. Outdoor flowers are conspicuous only by their absence, a condition very unusual in Omaha. Prices all around are a trifle better than a year ago.

A very severe hail storm passed over the northern portion of the city July 28. Hess & Swoboda's plant seemed to receive the bulk of it. Their loss is about 3,000 feet of glass. The range of A. Donaghue, about 1,000 feet south of the former, lost about 1,500 feet.

Paul B. Floth is pushing the erection of his six new houses.

J. W. Arnold is confined to his bed through a stroke of paralysis.

Miss Reba McNamara, of J. W. & E. E. Arnold, is away on her vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Stewart have hied themselves to the lakes for fresh air and fish. J. H. B.

We are well pleased with the REVIEW and are glad to enclose another dollar.—SCHLURAFF FLORAL Co., Erie, Pa.

MILWAUKEE.

It is almost time to get your railroad tickets for Milwaukee. Two more weeks and the great convention will be in full blast. There is an inner feeling that the crowd will be a record-breaker. Milwaukee, famous for its many products, is one of the most talked of towns on the continent. Milwaukee, meaning "gathering by the river," was a favorite spot for the Indians in the early part of the last century, but is now a flourishing and metropolitan city of over 300,000 inhabitants. August 18 to 21 it will be the gathering place for the florists to hold their council and exchange greetings. The local tribe will open the wigwams and extend a hearty greeting to the craft. The spacious convention hall will be the center of attraction and exhibits are already arriving for the great display. The exhibits in all classes are numerous, and the great advertising signs encircling the balcony will always confront you. Fred Holton, to whom the task was allotted of caring for the trade display, is now busy arranging space for the exhibitors.

Mayor David S. Rose will welcome the florists on behalf of the city. The evening of the president's reception will afford an excellent opportunity of renewing acquaintance. An exceptional musical program is also arranged for that evening. Wednesday is bowlers' day and the Olympia alleys are now being put in the best possible condition for this special event. They are perfect and a lively time is anticipated during the tournament. The writer would suggest, to keep up the friendly spirit that has always existed at previous conventions, and to avoid any possible friction, leave out the loaded ball. It is the glory of winning a prize and not its value, so let all be on an equal footing.

The prizes offered to date are as follows: Milwaukee Florists' Club prize, six gold medals, one for each man on winning team. C. C. Pollworth Co., six scarf pins, one for each man on second high team. John Evans, of Richmond, Ind., fine gold medal for highest man in individual class. J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, ten-dollar umbrella for individual class. F. Pollworth & Bro., prize for highest single game during entire tournament. There will also be prizes from the Citizens' Business League, E. F. Winter-son Co., Brunswick, Balke Co., Henry Weber, and many others expected before the tournament.

Wednesday will also be ladies' day and Chairman Frank Dilger has arranged an outing that will please them. Wednesday evening, lecture and stereopticon views at convention hall by C. B. Whitnall.

Thursday the shooting tournament will take place. Suitable prizes will be hung up. Florists interested in this event will please communicate with Fred Schmeling, 454 Milwaukee street, and send in entry.

Thursday evening J. D. Carmody is to tell us all about the humorous side of the florists' business. There will also be many important essays come up during the course of the convention. The question box is also an interesting feature, so if you have any problems to solve, prepare them for the box.

C. C. Pollworth will offer a gold medal to the florist coming the greatest distance to the convention.

Friday, the final day, leave it to us, it's too good to tell. Enough said.

The Milwaukee souvenir is now being mailed to all members of the S. A. F. C. C. P.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Weather and trade during the past week have been of the average summer variety. Carnations, we note, are running off, while some good roses from young stock are coming, and asters, sweet peas and other outdoor flowers are plentiful. Trade, most of the time, has been such as to clean up the good stuff, yet we anticipate an oversupply of asters during the coming week. Some really fine ones are coming from R. Jennings, of Brampton. Sweet peas from Frank Browne, of Barrie; Lawson and Flora Hill carnations from E. Crowhurst, of Mimico; longiflorum lilies from W. J. Lawrence, of Eglinton; Brides and Maids from the Toronto Floral Company, and Kaiserin roses from W. Bowers, are all good.

Notes.

H. G. Dilleuth, of Dunlop's, has returned to duty. The florists' trade of Toronto extends sympathy to him in the sudden death of his father.

The florists of the city were to have taken a little outing by paying a flying visit to Hamilton last week, but it was called off without any explanation.

J. S. Simmons has sold out the Queen Floral Co., on Queen street, to R. Collins, who has been for the past few years gardener for Frederick Nicholls of this city. We wish him every success in the business. D. J.

BOSTON.

Probably no heavier demand, but a slack in supply, made business fairly good during the last week of July, especially its first half. The latter part of the week was financially marred for the grower by the beginning of the annual reunion of the aster (not Astor) family. This branch of the noted family is more noted for wealth of color than of stocks and bonds. There are no John Jacobs in this line.

Everything looks serene on the surface and I see no signs of any undercurrent, unless it may be in regard to preparations for rose traffic for the coming season, which looks as though it were to be expanded to the limit by the activity of Budlong, of Providence, and the entrance into the field of the Worcester Floral Co., with eight houses, each 300 feet in length. But it is reported that Budlong may decide to send his crop to New York.

The vacation disease seems contagious and is rapidly spreading. Lawrence Flynn and Bernard McGinty are taking a few days off, which leaves Welch Bros.' team just big enough to handle the summer business. Flynn will prepare for a great rush of fall trade by bringing back a wife when he returns. By Messrs. Flynn and McGinty I mean our old young friends, Larry and Barney.

Improvements in several city stores are under way, Wax Bros.' and Galvin's Back Bay place particularly.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Never had we such a shortage of flowers in this market as the early part of last week. The demand was heavy and all stock was eagerly picked up. The long drought in the spring and an almost continuous stretch of rainy and cold weather of late has had a bad effect on outdoor stock; very little of anything good was cut, and outdoor blooming stock for the market so far this season is a failure. At this writing quantities of good asters and gladioli are arriving which can be bought at one's own figures.

Notes.

William Brown Potter is visiting his mother in Washington county.

C. S. Ford, of Philadelphia, was a visitor.

Mr. and Mrs. David Geddes are spending their vacation at Templeton, Pa.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

THE Eleventh National Irrigation Congress will be held at Ogden, Utah, September 15 to 18. H. B. Maxon, Reno, Nev., is secretary.

JOHN BRISBEN WALKER, editor of the Cosmopolitan, Irvington, N. Y., has bought Berkeley lake and 100 acres surrounding it, in Colorado, and will improve the property.

L. BARBIER, nurseryman, of Orleans, France, has called on leading American firms, sailing from New York July 23. He says he found an optimistic sentiment everywhere in this country.

W. H. SMITH & SON, nurserymen, Springfield, O., have filed a petition in bankruptcy, scheduling liabilities of $20,067, and no assets. The three members of the firm also filed petitions.

E. F. STEPHENS, of Crete, discussed "The Orchard Interests of the Platte Valley" at the summer meeting of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society at Fremont, July 28. Peter Youngers, of Geneva, is treasurer of the society.

THE bureau of forestry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, has planted 850 pounds of evergreen seeds at the station near Halsey, Neb. They find the seed of Pinus ponderosa gathered near Crawford, Neb., the most satisfactory in growth.

GENEVA, N. Y.—William Smith, of the W. & T. Smith Co., will, it is announced, found and endow a college for women to be known as the William Smith College for Women. This institution will be on a site of thirty acres in the outskirts of the city. The plans call for one building to cost $150,000. Mr. Smith has made large donations to public institutions and also maintains Smith Observatory.

A PARTY of Texas nurserymen, including Fred W. Mally, of Garrison; T. V. Munson, of Denison; J. S. Kerr, of Sherman; E. W. Kirkpatrick, of McKinney; F. T. Ramsey, of Austin; C. Falkner, of Waco; E. J. Kyle, of College Station; A. K. Clingman, of Keithville, La., and Sam. H. Dixon, of Houston, secretary of the State Horticultural Society, is visiting the horticultural sections of southern California as the guests of the Southern Pacific railroad.

DANVILLE, N. Y.—Samuel Allen has perfected a machine which makes tree labels at the rate of 1,000 in three minutes. A strip of soft pine is placed in the machine and as it progresses the variety is printed on both sides, a hole is punched in the end, a wire attached, and the label is cut off at the proper length. There is also an attachment to the machine which will make a label to be stuck in flower pots, printing the name on both sides, sharpening it to a point and cutting the label off at the right length. Mr. Allen is fitting up the Gilman foundry on Franklin street for use in manufacturing these machines and making labels.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Plant Registration.

The Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., submits for registration Rose Leo XIII. Plant very vigorous; flowers pure white, large, quite double. First blooms open about May 20 and continues in bloom all summer and fall. This variety is as hardy as the single Rugosa.

The Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., submit for registration Rose Northern Light. Climbing; very vigorous; perfectly hardy; foliage large and leathery, deep glossy green. Flowers produced in large clusters of from fifty to seventy-five; single flowers measuring about two inches; very double; fragrant; color variable, pink, some on the same cluster half pink, others white.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

MALONE, N. Y.—Mrs. W. C. Stevens has sold out her florist business to Mrs. J. C. Barry.

LANSING, MICH.—C. S. Fitzsimmons has leased his greenhouse to Guerdon B. Smith, who took possession August 3.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 22d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

VISITED CHICAGO.—Chas. Crossman, of Crossman Bros., Rochester, N. Y.

ADVANCE orders for cucumber seed continue to come in at very good prices.

VISITED ST. LOUIS:—Howard M. Earl, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia.

THE Manitowoc Seed Co., Manitowoc, Wis., is building a new brick block for offices and warehouse and will put up another warehouse in the fall.

GOOD growing weather is reported at most of the bean-growing stations. A good, sturdy growth at this time will be of value should adverse climatic conditions come later.

CONSIDERABLE anxiety prevails as to the outcome of the sweet corn crop. Definite information about Evergreen and other late sorts seems to be especially asked for.

GEMS, and some other of the early wrinkled peas, do not seem to be as short as at first reported. The pea crops generally are likely to be better than was anticipated a week or two back.

CLOVER seed crop has secured a very good start. It looks better than a year ago, when later it did not fill properly. Crop is later than usual. Prospects are very good in Indiana, good in Ohio, Illinois and Missouri, and not quite so good in Michigan.

LATE advices from Ollicoules, France, indicate great unrest among the growers and large importers expect a break in the market for Romans unless the growers and the jobbers reach an early agreement, which now seems not unlikely. Only a few small shipments have as yet been made.

The beneficent results of the government free seed distribution are very apparent to the florists of a western town. The congressman for the district sends the bulk of his quota of seeds to a local politician for distribution "where they will do the most good." This thrifty individual holds out the cabbage and tomato seed and grows large quantities of cabbage and tomato plants, which are put on sale at all the grocery stores at prices that "defy competition" by the local florists, all of whom formerly grew vegetable plants for sale, but have been obliged to abandon that department of their business on account of this sort of competition.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The outlook of some of the seed crops grown in New Jersey is very discouraging, to say the least. In Cumberland and Gloucester counties quite a large acreage is devoted to egg plant, tomato, cucumber, pepper, watermelon and muskmelon seed. Egg plants show blight to an extent of twenty-five per cent, with every indication of its extending still further. Many fields of watermelons and muskmelons will not produce twenty-five pounds of seed to the acre, while in one locality a field of twenty-eight acres of cucumbers is an absolute failure on account of the blight. Peppers show a very weak growth and some fields are so backward on account of the cold nights and not too warm days, that it is doubtful whether the seed will mature before frost. Early tomatoes are setting very poorly. It is somewhat too early to give definite information on the late sorts, still the outlook is not encouraging.

ONION SETS AT CHICAGO.

Onion set harvesting continues at Chicago. The weather is not as favorable as it might be, but good progress is being made. The crop this year shows much variation. There is not the usual uniformity of the tops drying down and consequently much less uniformity of bushels from a given acreage. It is likely to be a long drawn out harvest and many fields where a full quantity is expected will disappoint the growers. Fields that promise to the casual observer an immense crop show by close inspection a serious defect occasioned by the bulbs not forming. Many patches in some of the larger fields are wretchedly thin and in these the yield of sets will be but a small proportion of the crop. In other fields the direct opposite is the case, the stand seemingly having been too thick to permit more than half the proper quantity of bulbs to make. It is of course understood that what have not now made will be clean waste. The harvest thus far gives no promise of the crop being more than two-thirds of what is usually harvested at Chicago and it is more likely to be less than two-thirds of a normal crop.

BALTIMORE.

There is stillness in the air and the dullness of trade is nigh absolute. Save for an occasional funeral order, practically there is no trade. The early closing hours of the Charles street florists are apparently better observed than ever before. In the past week there have been further heavy rains, with some hail, but the weather between is absolutely perfect.

There is considerable building going on, besides the customary alterations and improvements. Julius Tischinger is building four houses near Govanstown, and his old establishment is being advertised for rent.

The boiler men have been in evidence lately, and have booked numerous orders, the Lord & Burnham Co. being very fortunate in this regard.

E. Holden, whose skill is eminent as a grower of forced vegetables, has completed his dwelling and a mushroom house on his new place near Paradise.

John Cook, the rose grower and originator, continues his labor of love, and has many candidates under observation. He has a house planted with some 500 of his newer varieties, a bright crimson rose, with fine, long stems and profuse flowering, a cross between Liberty and one of his own pink seedlings.

The contract for hyacinth and tulip bulbs for the public parks was awarded to Frederick G. Berger, who had no competition.

There seems to be little interest so far in the Milwaukee convention. So far as known, Charles L. Seybold, superintendent of Patterson Park, is the only one who has absolutely decided to attend.

Isaac H. Moss and Fred C. Bauer are "almost persuaded," and there may be one or two precincts to hear from, but the bulk of the army seems waiting to attack St. Louis next year. The railroad men are active, however, and may drum up a larger contingent.

Nicholas Kress, an example of our old-fashioned gardeners, who were early in the field of activity and usefulness, has nearly completed sixty years of life in America. Coming to Baltimore from Frankfort-on-the-Main, where he learned his trade, he was for about sixteen years gardener on the private place of Mr. Rodewald. He then established a florist's business of his own, carried it on with much success for many years, and handed it down to his son, Edward, also a prudent and successful business man, and now respected and contented, lives at his ease, after a busy and well-spent life of more than 80 years, among his family and friends, whose pleasure it is to see him cheerful in temper and bright in mind in the rays of the setting sun.

B.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—The board of equalization has added to the assessed value of some of the greenhouse property here because of improvements made this year.

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.—The heirs of the Dwight Twichell estate have transferred to C. W. Blatchley the Plantsville greenhouse property on Main street. Mr. Blatchley has had charge of the houses for some time and under his management many improvements have been made. Now that he has become the owner, he proposes to keep them thoroughly up-to-date.

The Market.

The prices of cut flowers remain the same as last quoted, with a slight increase in quantity, and with the quality improving on account of the cool weather of the past week. Some of the growers are sending in roses from the young plants, and they are a welcome relief, being much larger and better than those cut from the old plants, even if the stems are shorter. Carnations are things of the past, asters taking their place, and some very good white, pink and lavender are seen. Sweet peas are getting short of stem, but come in very handy for funeral work. Auratum lilies have been in good demand, and are used in almost every design sent out.

There is a great deal of talk about going to the convention, and if they all stick to what they say, we will be well represented. Among those who will surely be found there are Mr. and Mrs. L. Warnke, Mr. and Mrs. A. Schmitt, George Smith, of Smith & Son; Isaac Kennedy, A. Graham, John Merkel and Carl Hagenburger.

C. M. Wagner has returned from a two weeks' vacation, looking fine and well tanned.

The Misses Schmitt, daughters of Aug. Schmitt, are spending a month visiting relatives and friends in Illinois.

E.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—G. Fleischer, of Pueblo, and A. M. Lewis, of the Gallup Floral Co., Denver, are to judge the flower show here August 19 to 21.

VICTORIA, B. C.—The Invertavish Nurseries, doing a general florists' business, have been taken over by P. T. James, until recently gardener at the Douglas estate.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Journal's free sweet pea show is on this week. They issued a handsome poster in colors and also devoted the colored supplement in last Sunday's issue to the show.

FREMONT, NEB.—At the meeting of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society held here July 28 and 29, Chas. H. Green, of this city, read a paper, "Floriculture," and C. S. Harrison, of York, talked on perennials.

Business maintains the "even tenor of its way" and continues normal for the season of the year. Gradually but surely the improvement in conditions will be noted until, almost before we realize it, the fall season will be here and the quiet summertime forgotten. The bon-ton out-of-town trade appropriates every good flower that is not used locally. Cattleyas have been in demand at good prices. Extra fine Lawson carnations have brought 3 cents for Newport requirements and Beauties advanced to 25 cents. We look for a steady market hereafter and an early opening of the metropolitan season.

THE NEWER ROSES.

In the recent "rose number" of the Gardeners' Magazine the following interesting paragraphs are found:

Taking the newer hybrid teas alphabetically, we first have Duchess of Portland, which has flowers of a distinct shade of sulphur-yellow; they are also of full size, fine form, and freely produced. Conrad Strassheim, flesh white, suffused with rose at the margin, appears to be well deserving of a trial. Frau Peter Lambert is said to be a pink Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, and should that prove to be the case it will be a most desirable variety. Franz Deegen, pale yellow; Friedrich Hanns, lemon-yellow; and Helene Guillot, white and salmon suffused with carmine, are a trio well worthy of a trial. Mildred Grant is a variety raised by Messrs. A. Dickson & Sons, of Newtownards, and has exceptional merits. The flowers are very large and globular, with deep center, full, and with handsome petals; the color is a rich cream, suffused with pale rose. It has received the gold medal of the N. R. S., and has on several occasions been selected for the award of a silver medal as the best rose in the show. Perle Von Godesberg should be a valuable addition, for it is said to be a golden-yellow sport from Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. It is of German origin, and should be looked for among new roses.

Foremost among the teas of recent introduction is the exquisitely-colored Lady Roberts. The flowers are of full size, finely formed, and the color is a combination of salmon-buff and copper and orange. It is highly effective in the exhibition box, and of immense value for indoor decorations. As evidence of the merit of the variety, it may be mentioned that Lady Roberts has had two gold medals conferred upon it. Mrs. Oliver Ames is described as a blush-white sport from Mrs. Pierpont Morgan, and as it has had several medals awarded it in America, the country of its origin, the variety is deserving attention. Souvenir de Pierre Notting is an immense gain to the exhibition teas, and will probably be well represented in trade collections at the various exhibitions. The blooms are large and of superb form, and the color is a rich golden-yellow, suffused with apricot. Last year the National Rose Society awarded a gold medal in favor of this variety, a distinction which has been conferred upon it at several French exhibitions. Boadicea is a lovely variety, the flowers large and full, with high center; the color peach, shaded with pink and rose.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

During the past month trade has been quiet, with the exception of funeral work, which has been fairly plentiful. Roses have been of good quality and have held up wonderfully, even during the warm spell, but are rather scarce. This, however, will not be the case in a week or two, when the young stock begins to give a crop. The young stock is looking particularly well, Beauties being especially fine.

Carnations in the field are healthy and stocky and are in fine condition for benching. Planting is being pushed along vigorously and if the weather continues favorable the work will be finished much earlier than in former years.

The Van Bochove Bros. have finished their new block and are planting it to carnations. This brings them close to the 100,000 feet mark.

The Dunkley Floral Co. has just about finished planting carnations. They contemplate rebuilding and remodeling their propagating house this fall.

According to present reports there will be quite a contingent from here to attend the convention.

PIPING.

We are erecting a short-roofed carnation house 23x78, also a palm house 14x14, with an ell 5½x20. These houses have walls 6½ feet high and are 10½ feet to ridge. We shall use a Kroeschell hot-water boiler and 2½-inch flow and 2-inch return pipes. How many flows and how many returns should we use in each house? The temperature sometimes goes as low as 20 degrees below zero. We also have a rose house 18x44, and would like to know how many 2-inch hot-water pipes should be painted with sulphur to keep down mildew? D. H. H.

It will be necessary to have more particulars as to the glass surface in the several houses in order that an intelligent reply may be given. A sketch should be made showing arrangement of roofs and sides, showing what is glass and what is solid wall; also a rough ground plan showing the relation of the houses to each other and boiler cellar and arrangement of benches and paths. For checking mildew in rose houses one 2-inch pipe under each bench may be painted, at first with the sulphur, and if not found sufficient more can be painted later. The prompt effectiveness of the sulphur paint on hot-water pipes depends upon the temperature of the pipes; therefore, if strong firing is being done a less number of painted pipes will be necessary than if very slow firing is being done.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

PIPING SMALL HOUSE.

I have a greenhouse 20x40 feet, having glass in one end and on side walls. The heater has four flows and four returns, 2-inch. How shall I pipe the house? A. R.

For heating the greenhouse described to a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, seventeen lines of 2-inch pipes will be required. The distribution of this surface would be five pipes under each side bench, two flows and three returns under each, and one coil of seven pipes under the center bench, three flows running under the east side of the center bed near the edge, and four returns under the west side. A 2-inch flow and return main from the boiler to each of the three coils will be ample.

"Thripscide"
(REGISTERED)
Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Firing in Summer.

A seasonable hint, but slightly infringing on the territory so ably covered by "Ribes," who, I know, will forgive me, is the question of firing during the summer months, particularly for roses. To be reminiscent a moment, and let my memory go back fifty years, more or less, in the salubrious climate of the south coast of England, between the South Downs and the English Channel, where the summer days are seldom so warm as what we know as "a hot day," but where the nights in June, July and August seldom go below 60 degrees, firing is never dropped in the houses that contain palms, tropical ferns, orchids, or in the pineapple house or forcing graperies. True, perhaps they get more cloudy days, but what have we had this year for the past two months? Rain at least every other day or night, a hot day very occasionally and within twenty-four hours a temperature at 10 p. m. of 12 degrees above freezing. It may be lower in the still grey hours before the dawn, but we don't know that, for we always retire at 10 p. m. promptly (!).

About the first of June, or during a spell of a few warm days and nights, out go the fires in the rose houses and so they remain until the middle of September. Mildew is the result and it remains with you until you put on steam again. Perhaps with good, vigorous young stock planted in June this is not such a serious matter, and I have even heard a most excellent rose grower say that he rather liked to see a crop of mildew in September. Although good grower that he is, I scarcely think he is right. But what about those you have carried over for a summer crop, Beauties and Brides and Bridesmaids? Millions of buds are spoiled by the mildew. Not only is the bud a poor apology for a rose, but the foliage on which so much of the beauty rests, the setting for the flower, is a grey, wrinkled, unsightly excuse. There may have been summers, and I hope many more will be, when June, July and August will be steady, warm weather, but for the past two seasons it would have richly paid any rose grower to keep the fires alight all summer at midnight, or on dull, cool days to have turned on one pipe of steam. And for obvious reasons, the larger the place the better it would pay.

A little steam heat and the ventilators open is not raising the temperature but very little. It is only causing a circulation of air and preventing a stagnant dampness settling on the foliage. Next summer, in my small way, the fire will never go out. The slight cost of fuel and the fireman's wages will be paid back fourfold by the clean, pretty flowers that will result. This may not apply to all our northern states so much as it does to northern New York, Pennsylvania and the lake region. I think I have quoted before today the remark of our esteemed friend, J. A. Valentine, of Denver, who said: "We never let our fires out the year around." That is simply because the nights in Denver are cool. They can't raise corn (maize) there, and from recent observations I notice that even young people are married two years before they rejoice in the blessings of a boy or girl, mostly girl.

Rooting Coleus.

In another column I recommended to an inquirer to throw away his coleus if infested with mealy bug, but now is the time that you can select a few dozen cuttings of the varieties you want from out of doors, that are, or should be, perfectly clean. They will root in a few days in a box of sand and before real cold weather can be bushy little plants in 4-inch pots. A few dozen of this size will give you far more cuttings than as many hundred cuttings put in just before the frost kills the bedding plants. Generally speaking, in these truly soft-wooded plants, the larger the plant the lower the temperature it will endure.

Cyclamen.

I have lately seen more than one very poor lot of cyclamen, and some not far from home. It was the old story—permanent shade and a long way from the ventilation. If you have made that mistake up to date, don't do it for the next two months. Good cyclamen should be now in 6-inch pots, or perhaps you are about to shift. Use two-fourths good cheeks and live continually in a cellar as to expect health in these cyclamen without light. WILLIAM SCOTT.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

To properly prepare young stock to successfully bear the first crop will now require some time and care. The stock must be healthy, vigorous and of a reasonable size before we allow a crop to develop, otherwise the deprivation of so much of the foliage necessary in cutting long stems will weaken their vitality and cause a growth of blind wood.

Proper care in removing the lateral shoots is also necessary. When removing the laterals from young stock preparatory for a first cut it is best not to remove those near the base of the stem, as these will eventually make good flower stems. This, however, is frequently practiced to the detriment of the plant in order to secure a few inches more of stem and so secure the highest price going, but the experienced grower knows that this is poor policy.

As the plants at that time are far from having attained their full growth, each flower stem should be cut not with the object of getting it as long as possible, but with the definite purpose of improving the size and form of the bush, and with the view of enhancing its future productiveness, when the demand will be brisker and prices rule higher.

When taking the first cut, to balance the plants in form those stems which are longest and strongest should be cut so that three or four eyes with full developed leaves are left, each one of these being capable of developing a good flower stem. On the weaker growth two eyes will be quite sufficient, they being only able to maintain and perfect that loam, one-fourth rotted dairy manure and one-fourth leaf mold, and if you have it, add a little old crushed mortar. Plunge them into tobacco stems on some bench where they get the fullest light in a small house running east and west that has plenty of ventilation. If not that, then a frame with the sash raised back and front, and spray finely every bright morning. But the greatest thing of all is to shade with cheese cloth or lath during the hot, bright hours and no shade whatever on dull days, or up to 10 a. m. and after 4 p. m. on the brightest days. You may as well expect to have rosy number with strength enough to form a good flower stem. All abortive and malformed flowers should be cut with the same regard as perfect flowers, leaving the desired number of eyes on the stem.

Golden Gate and Ivory, having an inclination to produce a thicket of small, weak wood at this season, will benefit greatly by having it judiciously thinned out, thus allowing a freer circulation of air among the foliage and giving more sunlight to the yet unbroken eyes.

Picking out the buds of Beauties, the stems of which are not quite long enough for market, will result in another bud developing just at the base of the bud

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Firing in Summer.

A seasonable hint, but slightly infringing on the territory so ably covered by "Libes," who, I know, will forgive me, the question of firing during the summer months, particularly for roses. To be reminiscent a moment, and let my memory go back fifty years, more or less, in the salubrious climate of the south coast of England, between the South Downs and the English Channel, where the summer days are seldom so warm as what we know as "a hot day," where the nights in June, July and August seldom go below 60 degrees, firing is never dropped in the houses that contain palms, tropical ferns, orchids, in the pineapple house or forcing chambers. True, perhaps they get more sunny days, but what have we had this year for the past two months? Rain at least every other day or night, a hot day very occasionally and within twenty-four hours a temperature at 10 p. m. of 12 degrees above freezing. It may be lower in the still grey hours before the dawn, but we don't know that, for we always retire at 10 p. m. promptly (?).

About the first of June, or during a spell of a few warm days and nights, we go the fires in the rose houses and so they remain until the middle of September. Mildew is the result and it remains with you until you put on steam again. Perhaps with good, vigorous young stock planted in June this is not such a serious matter, and I have even heard a most excellent rose grower say that he rather liked to see a crop of mildew in September. Although good grower that he is, I scarcely think he is right. But what about those you have carried over for a summer crop, Beauties and Brides and Bridesmaids? Millions of buds are spotted by the mildew. Not only is the bud a poor apology for a rose, but the foliage on which so much of the beauty rests, the setting for the flower, is a grey, wrinkled, unsightly excuse. There may have been summers, and I hope many more will be, when June, July and August will be steady, warm weather, but for the past two seasons it would be richly paid any rose grower to keep the fires alight all summer at midnight, on dull, cool days to have turned on the pipe of steam. And for obvious reasons, the larger the place the better it will pay.

Little steam heat and the ventilators thus not raising the temperature but circulating the air and preventing a stagnant mass settling on the foliage. Next morning, in my small way, the fire will be going out. The slight cost of fuel and the fireman's wages will be paid a fourfold by the clean, pretty flower that will result. This may not apply of our northern states so much as it does to northern New York, Pennsylvania and the lake region. I think I quoted before today the remark of an esteemed friend, J. A. Valentine, of New York, who said: "We never let our roses suffer the year around." That is simply because the nights in Denver are cool. They can't raise corn (maize) there, and from recent observations I notice that even young people are married two years before they rejoice in the blessings of a boy or girl, mostly girl.

Rooting Coleus.

In another column I recommended to an inquirer to throw away his coleus if infested with mealy bug, but now is the time that you can select a few dozen cuttings of the varieties you want from out of doors, that are, or should be, perfectly clean. They will root in a few days in a box of sand and before real cold weather can be bushy little plants in 4-inch pots. A few dozen of this size will give you far more cuttings than as many hundred cuttings put in just before the frost kills the bedding plants. Generally speaking, in these truly soft-wooded plants, the larger the plant the lower the temperature it will endure.

Cyclamen.

I have lately seen more than one very poor lot of cyclamen, and some not far from home. It was the old story—permanent shade and a long way from the ventilation. If you have made that mistake up to date, don't do it for the next two months. Good cyclamen should be now in 6-inch pots, or perhaps you are about to shift. Use two-fourths good cheeks and live continually in a cellar as to expect health in these cyclamen without light. WILLIAM SCOTT.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

To properly prepare young stock to successfully bear the first crop will now require some time and care. The stock must be healthy, vigorous and of a reasonable size before we allow a crop to develop, otherwise the deprivation of so much of the foliage necessary in cutting long stems will weaken their vitality and cause a growth of blind wood.

Proper care in removing the lateral shoots is also necessary. When removing the laterals from young stock preparatory for a first cut it is best not to remove those near the base of the stem, as these will eventually make good flower stems. This, however, is frequently practiced to the detriment of the plant in order to secure a few inches more of stem and so secure the highest price going, but the experienced grower knows that this is poor policy.

As the plants at that time are far from having attained their full growth, each flower stem should be cut not with the object of getting it as long as possible, but with the definite purpose of improving the size and form of the bush, and with the view of enhancing its future productiveness, when the demand will be brisker and prices rule higher.

When taking the first cut, to balance the plants in form those stems which are longest and strongest should be cut so that three or four eyes with full developed leaves are left, each one of these being capable of developing a good flower stem. On the weaker growth two eyes will be quite sufficient, they being only able to maintain and perfect that number with strength enough to form a good flower stem. All abortive and malformed flowers should be cut with the same regard as perfect flowers, leaving the desired number of eyes on the stem.

loam, one-fourth rotted dairy manure and one-fourth leaf mold, and if you have it, add a little old crushed mortar. Plunge them into tobacco stems on some bench where they get the fullest light in a small house running east and west that has plenty of ventilation. If not that, then a frame with the sash raised back and front, and spray finely every bright morning. But the greatest thing of all is to shade with cheese cloth or lath during the hot, bright hours and no shade whatever on dull days, or up to 10 a. m. and after 4 p. m. on the brightest days. You may as well expect to have rosy

Golden Gate and Ivory, having an inclination to produce a thicket of small, weak wood at this season, will benefit greatly by having it judiciously thinned out, thus allowing a freer circulation of air among the foliage and giving more sunlight to the yet unbroken eyes.

Picking out the buds of Beauties, the stems of which are not quite long enough for market, will result in another bud developing just at the base of the bud stem and which in a week or two will reach out and increase the length of the stem by eight or ten inches.

This method can be carried on for some weeks, if necessary, as sometimes the price offered for blooms will not repay the injury done to the plants by hard cutting. RIBES.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Stem Rot.

It may be truly said that carnation growers in this section have labored under peculiar conditions this summer. With an extremely dry period at the start and just the reverse for the greater part of the real growing period, it is not surprising to hear of the sad havoc wrought by stem-rot.

In comparing reports it seems that certain varieties have suffered badly with some growers while with others the same varieties are lifting in good health, very few plants being missing. It is obvious then that it is not the tendency of the variety to stem-rot, but that the cause comes from improper handling or the existence in the field of soil conditions or matter unsuitable to the health of the plants.

Having made numerous inquiries as to the methods pursued by different growers in handling the young stock previous to planting out and finding some who followed one and others another course, all claiming a good stand of plants when transferred to the field, I have been led to make still further inquiries as to methods of field preparation. As stated in previous notes, from the results of observation, I cannot believe stem-rot to be a constitutional disease; neither can any variety, in the full sense of the term, be said to be inclined that way but rather that some varieties are more susceptible to it than others.

I cannot credit the romantic theory that stem-rot has its birthplace in the cutting bench, clinging to the plant during its life in a pot or flat inside, still lingering about until it is nearly or quite full grown, then striking a death blow. Stem-rot may develop in the propagating sand, but its effect will soon be shown or healthy conditions repel its advance.

The use of fungus laden soil, or that too rich in animal manure, for potting young stock has been known to bring on the trouble, but I venture to say few growers there are now who are not alive to the importance of proper soil and quarters for their young stock.

In the field is where the evil effect of the cause is shown and I believe cause and effect are not very far apart in the culture of carnations. The same weather conditions which produce growth of plants also promote the growth of fungous diseases; that is heat and moisture, but excessive moisture gives to fungi an advantage, while to plants it acts as a check. Thus the door is open for disease to enter.

As fungi are ever present in soil containing decaying vegetable or animal matter, is it not reasonable to suppose that stable manure, often obtained from an unknown source, may contain dangerous fungi? I have frequently noticed stem-rot to be more prevalent on heavily or recently manured land than on land that has produced a hoed crop the year previous.

My experience this year has proved to my satisfaction that the field should if possible be prepared two years in advance. Manure and plow in the spring of the first year, planting to a hoed crop, such as potatoes, and cultivate thoroughly. Plow again in late fall, leaving as rough as possible. Another plowing in spring followed by the harrowing or raking in of a liberal coat of wood ashes gives the soil ample fertility and reduces liability of objectionable fungi.

This is the method I have followed and which was advised in my notes of March 26, with the result of a loss of less than five per cent by stem-rot. The results of indoor culture by the compromise method explained in previous notes will receive attention next week.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

MAKING A BEGINNING.

My carnations were planted in the benches May 1, in new, unglazed houses, using about six parts of good blue grass sod and some subsoil to one part of well rotted cow manure, with a good sprinkling of lime worked in. The varieties are Lawson, America, White Cloud, Joost and Kohinoor. The stock has been well cultivated and watered as it needed water. When shall I glaze the houses and when would a mulch or feed be desirable? What is a good formula of bone meal to use and at what intervals? STARTER.

I would not be in a hurry to glaze those new houses if the plants are making satisfactory growth. The greatest trouble with planting carnations on raised benches outside is that they dry out too rapidly and the plants suffer for want of water, but if yours have not suffered in that way they will likely be growing rapidly now and from now on they will be making a strong, sturdy growth which cannot be improved upon by glazing the houses. The fact that we advocate early housing so the plants will make their fall growth inside does not apply in this case. It is not that we want them to be making the growth under glass, but we want them to make it on the soil on which they are to remain all winter and become so much better established. Therein lies the advantage of early planting. You should have the houses glazed before any real frosts happen along, and whatever date you usually have your first frosts in your locality you know better than I. Here it is usually the latter part of September. You can estimate about how long it will take you to do the job, and you can get everything ready, so you can rush it through when you start.

You can give them a light dressing of bone at this time with good results. About a 2½-inch pot full to a row five to six feet across the bench will be about right, and work it into the soil, after which water well. I would follow that at once with about a half inch of half rotten cow manure, to help keep the soil from drying out too rapidly. The mulch might have been applied six weeks ago with good results. This will be all the feed they will need for some time. A. F. J. BAUR.

WATERING FIELD CARNATIONS.

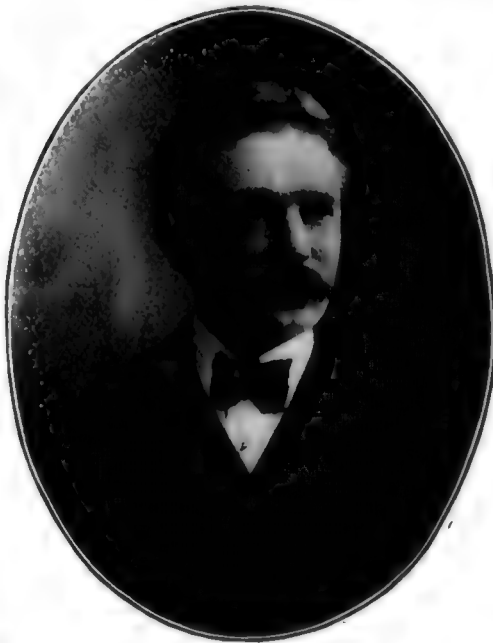

Mr. Scott, in a recent REVIEW, gives a "Seasonable Hint" on "watering vs. cultivating" carnations in the field, taking for his text an article of mine in which I stated that I water my carnations in the field "when water is needed." Unfortunately my article did not advocate watering as against cultivating, for water will not take the place of cultivation. But cultivating will not take the place of watering, either, "when water is needed," for cultivation will not produce moisture, as the immense dams and irrigating ditches of the west abundantly prove. So when water is needed, as is the case at times on my soil, I water my carnations and they grow and do not rot. I hope no one will think I am trying to establish a cast iron rule for carnation growers, regardless of differences of climate, soil, etc.

Mr. Scott seems to ignore the fact that soil dries out by the water in it sinking from its own gravity downwards, as well as by evaporation, and if water were not applied the soil would dry out down to bedrock. This is why I say that cultivation will not produce moisture. If it did the "great American desert" we used to read of could be made to blossom like Eden. It may be true that cultivation, and especially deep cultivation, owes much of its effectiveness to the fact that the hose or plow brings moist soil from below and mixes it with the dry surface soil. If this be so will it not explain why cultivation with a horse implement seems to be more effective than hand hoeing?

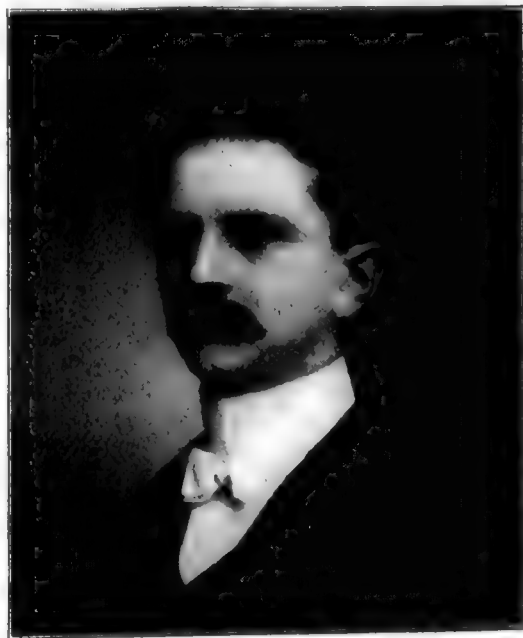

Mr. Baur also pays his respects to my modest article, but from the stem-rot side of the question. He thinks I do not agree with his repeated assertions that frequent cultivation is in most cases preferable to watering carnations in the field. I do most emphatically agree with him on that point, but it was not of "most" cases I was speaking, but of my own case. My soil does not bake. Being high and light, it dries out rapidly. During a dry spell I water my carnations and, as I have said, they grow and do not rot. I have looked in vain in my article to find what Mr. Baur asserts I said, that "frequent watering or excessive rains will not cause stem-rot." I have an idea that too much water will rot any plant not an aquatic. I also have an idea that with healthy plants, proper fertilizers in quantities not in excess of what is needed to produce healthy growth, good drainage and proper cultivation, a scarcity of rainfall can be met by judicious watering without danger of stem-rot.

J. Y. LAMBERT.

BEGONIA SEMPERFLORENS.

Please tell me the time to sow the Begonia semperflorens to have nice plants for early spring sales. M. G.

Sow it at once, or at the latest in the early part of September. We are often too late in sowing this variety, and also in sowing Vernon and several of its type, which are some of our most pleasant flower garden plants. Sow them early and keep them in a night temperature of 50 degrees, with the fullest light during winter, and they make better plants than when sown later and forced along rapidly. All begonias except the Rex species want more daylight than is usually given them.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

ASTER TROUBLES.

I have about a thousand aster plants, Semple's Branching, planted on a piece of ground which was first broken last season. At least three-fourths of them seem to be turning yellow, as if with disease. The ground seems to be soft enough and has been kept stirred. I can discover no parasites on either roots or leaves, even with a glass. Can you suggest what may ail them? Had a few of the same sort last season, so changed them to a new place and procured new seed.

P. W. J.

As. P. W. J. can discover no "parasites," it is hard to say what the trouble can be. Wire worm, or the larva of the May bug, is often most troublesome in soil that has been lately broken up from sod, but their work on the roots would be quickly discovered. The aster beetle, so troublesome this year, would merely destroy the shoots and flowers. Now, in addition to the beetle trouble, we have lost quite a percentage of plants of a batch of Truffaut's peony flowered aster. We pulled up several plants and found a good bunch of healthy roots, but on cutting open the stem it was black in the center for two or three inches above the ground. The plants just wilt and die. The trouble was a mystery until at last we discovered a small worm that had eaten his way into the very bottom of the stem beneath the ground. The worm is about half an inch long and as thick as a pin or a little stouter. That, of course, is the trouble, as the worm had destroyed the tissue of the stem and all above it soon decayed and the plant quickly died. I don't believe that any remedy can be applied this year. The ground is rich and has grown asters two previous years. Next spring, after plowing, we will harrow in a good dressing of air-slaked lime, and that is all I can recommend P. W. J. to do.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

A REMEDY FOR ANTS.

Will your correspondent who recommends sugar and arsenic on bread as a destroyer of ants please state the proportions he uses in this mixture?

A. S.

We did not make a careful measurement of the mixture, but took about what arsenic could be picked up on the point of a pen-knife and, after mixing with a teaspoon of granulated sugar, spread on a slice of bread.

S. A. P.

POINSETTIAS.

Please tell me about the rooting of poinsettias; all mine rot. The morning temperature is about 72 degrees, noon 94, night 80. There is lath on the glass and one-third the roof is open as well as the sides and ends. The cuttings are started in 8-inch pans in washed plastering sand; no bottom heat. I can root them in spring with bottom heat.

FLORIDA.

The temperature quoted is most assuredly higher than we have been experiencing of late, but that, we think, should make no difference in rooting this tropical plant. It is true that they root easily and surely in the spring when we have some bottom heat and a lower day and night temperature. There is little doubt that the trouble with our friend in Florida is simply that he doesn't keep the sand wet enough. Some fifteen years ago we made the same mistake ourselves. Keep the bed saturated. If a bright day, water twice a day and keep well shaded and you will have no trouble in rooting them. The open sides and ends of the house I think liable to give them too much draught and that wilts them. When rooted and potted be sure to keep them shaded and not exposed to a draught for the first week.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CHICAGO TO MILWAUKEE.

Arrangements have been completed with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway for a special train of solid vestibule cars, including buffet car, to leave Chicago from Union Passenger Station, Canal and Adams streets, at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, August 18. The equipment throughout will be the finest that the road can furnish. Special will arrive at Milwaukee at 11:50 a. m., three hours before the time set for the opening of the convention. Special rate of one fare and a third for the round trip on certificate plan has been granted all those attending the convention. The entertainment committee has arranged for return movement, Milwaukee to Chicago, by steamer for those wishing to make the lake trip. When purchasing your ticket to Milwaukee, be sure that it reads via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, also ask ticket agent to furnish you with a certificate receipt, as this insures you a return ticket at one-third fare.

Important Notice.

Those from a distance traveling via Chicago must bear in mind that, by whatever way they may travel from Milwaukee to Chicago after the convention, it will be necessary to buy return tickets at Milwaukee to get the one-third fare for the return journey. Tickets home cannot be purchased in Chicago except at full fare. Those who come to Chicago without having provided themselves with tickets to their homes will be compelled to return to Milwaukee to avail themselves of the one-third fare.

SHREVEPORT, LA.—Ike R. Myer has opened a flower store here.

A MODERN PLANT.

It is unfortunate that the S. A. F. convention comes at a time when greenhouse establishments in its vicinity are at the low tide of the year, but, while this is true, there is much to excite the interest of practical men in such a place as Peter Reinberg's, where there will be many visitors, passing through Chicago, next week. Building and rebuilding have delayed replanting operations, but the place is now all planted, although a good deal of the dried off rose stock has not yet been started up. It is worth noting that there are 230,000 rose plants on the place, as follows: 60,000 Beauty, 30,000 Maid, 25,000 Bride, 12,000 Perle, 20,000 Golden Gate, 30,000 Liberty, 30,000 Chateaux, 12,000 Sunrise, 5,000 Kaiserin, 5,000 Ivory, 1,000 La France. There are 175,000 carnation plants, a good many of them benched long enough to have got a good start in the new soil. Mr. Reinberg says he never had better plants at this season.

The whole north end of the place, the houses in which Golden Gate was grown the first year they had it, when it was such a winner, is given to Mrs. Lawson. It ought to be a sight about Thanksgiving time. Then comes the range, which was rebuilt this year. Nine old houses were pulled down and replaced by eight 27½x136. By building with the latest pattern of Garland's iron gutter, with iron posts, it was possible to economize two feet of space in each house, making a gain in bench room of eighteen feet, or a bench 18x136. With the gutter cast in eight-foot lengths there is also a saving of one-third the posts as compared with the use of the five-foot gutters. The white carnations are in this range, and beyond them is a splendid lot of Mrs. Nelson.

The new range put up this season is on the other side of Robey street, and it is a model of the new style construction, nine houses 27½x304, eight and one-half feet to gutters, fifteen feet to ridge. There are five four and one-half foot benches in the outside houses, and four five-foot benches in the other seven. There are fifty-six ventilators, 3x4 feet, in each house, twenty-eight on each side of each ridge. The Evans lifter is used throughout the place. The new style iron gutter in eight-foot lengths is used in these houses. It is only four inches wide at the bottom, by three deep. The picture of the interior of the houses shows the gutter perfectly, the posts being so high that the camera caught nearly a full view of the under side of the gutter. It is notable that the purlins are about as much obstruction to the light as are the gutters. Mr. Reinberg says that recent heavy rains show that ample waterway is provided by outlets every sixty feet, through the posts and into the sewer. Belgian glass was used in part this year, but the saving in price is fully offset by the greater breakage.

Mr. Reinberg built his first house seventeen years ago, four small structures glazed with 10x12 glass. The first two years he grew lettuce, then tried a bench or two of carnations, and after two years more built four more houses 137 feet long. Since then he has added to the place pretty nearly every year, but he has always put in a wall plate, not a gutter, on the last house, being fully convinced he would never build again, but the wall plate has generally had to come out the next spring. However, it went in as usual this year.

CYCLAMEN.

Please tell me through the REVIEW if cyclamen should be set with buds this early in the season, and if they continue to throw up leaves after the buds begin to form.

SUBSCRIBER.

This will depend on when they were sown. If the seed was sown last October, or even November, and they have been grown with good care, they should now be in 6-inch pots and would most certainly show the flowers nestling on the corm. As they would be expected to flower by November, this would not be too soon to see the flower showing. It takes two or three months from the time you first see the flower signs until they are fully expanded. If a few stray flowers are showing up, then it is a bad sign, indicating that the plants have had a check in some way. The cyclamen makes a few leaves at the same time that its flower stems show above the foliage.

I can't resist adding that a continuous shade or too bright sunshine are both bad for the cyclamen. Shade when the sun shines and remove it when it does not shine, and keep tobacco beneath them and syringe every bright morning. There is more in growing cyclamen than orchids.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THAT LITTLE WHITE FLY.

Again comes a communication from S. C. C., asking for some death dealing blow to that small white fly or moth that deposits its eggs on the under side of a leaf, which they soon eat up. This time it is fuchsias that it is preying on, but it is often seen in houses where cucumbers, melons or tomatoes are forced. Tobacco has no effect on it. Fortunately it is many years since we have seen any of them, but I feel sure that they would succumb to the hydrocyanic acid gas, the formula for which has been very recently published in the pages of the REVIEW.

The same subscriber also asks: "Tell me the best remedy for mealy bug, which is so fatal to coleus." If this troublesome insect gets on palms, crotons, a fine stephanotis or plants of value, then syringe, or still better, sponge with kerosene emulsion. If it badly infests coleus, then the most expeditious and inexpensive cure is to throw away the coleus, or better still, burn them.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

A GOOD CATALOGUE.

One of the best printed catalogues of the season is the new and greatly enlarged edition by the John C. Moninger Company, Chicago, entitled "Perfect Greenhouse Construction." The cover is printed in three colors and presents a view of the establishment of Bassett & Washburn, at Hinsdale, Ill. The body pages show thirty-five half-tones of greenhouses and ranges of greenhouses and the balance of seventy-eight pages is devoted to details of the various styles of construction. It is stated that the catalogue cost in the neighborhood of 80 cents a copy, but it will be sent free to any one who is sufficiently interested to send 6 cents to pay the postage.

HOTELS OF MILWAUKEE.

The following downtown hotels in Milwaukee are within five or ten minutes' walk of the convention hall. Rooms for convention week may be reserved at any time:

Aberdeen Hotel, Grand Ave.—Rates, $10 to $14 per week, American plan.

Hotel Atlas, Third and Sycamore Sts.—Rate, $2 per day.

Hotel Blatz, City Hall Square—Rate, $1 per day and upward, European plan.

Globe Hotel, Wisconsin and Cass Sts.—Weekly rates; American plan, $10 to $15; European plan, $5 to $10.

Kirby House, E. Water and Mason Sts.—Rates, $2 to $2.50 per day.

Hotel Pfister, Wisconsin and Jefferson Sts.—Rates, American plan, $3 to $5 per day; European plan, $1.50 to $3.50 per day.

Plankinton House, Grand Ave.—Rates, American plan, $2.50 and upward per day; European plan, $1 and upward per day.

Republican House, Third and Cedar Sts.—Rates, American plan, $2 to $3 per day; European plan, $1 and upward.

Schlitz Hotel, Grand Ave. and Third St.—Rate, European plan, $1 per day and upward.

St. Charles Hotel, City Hall Square—Rates, per day, one person, $2 to $3.50; two persons, from $4 to $6.

HEATING SURFACE.

We have four houses, 20x80, three in carnations and one in roses. The boiler is of the horizontal, return flue, Scotch marine high-pressure type, but we fear a defect in piping, as it does not do the work. We have 2-inch feed pipes, 1-inch in the coils and 1½-inch returns, two going in on one side of the boiler and one on the other. In all we have 2,500 to 3,000 feet of pipe.

The boiler is twenty-three horse-power and will carry 100 pounds pressure, but by the time we turn on all the houses we don't have more than five pounds of steam and in cold weather we cannot leave the boiler any length of time.

T.

I think a part of his trouble lies in a shortage of heating surface in the houses, as if there is glass on the roof only, there would be about 7,800 square feet of glass exposure, which would call for about 1,100 feet of heating surface, or roughly about 3,300 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe. If the correspondent is able to hold five pounds pressure at the boiler, with all pipes working, it would indicate sufficient boiler capacity for the present work. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

"SUN FLOWER" ASTERS.

Please give me the cause of so many asters showing the yellow centers, or, as we call them, "sun flowers." I was careful in buying what I thought was the best seed. One stalk may be all right, while the next to it will be all "sun flowers." Please explain in full.

H. H. G.

In my opinion this is a case of the aster, through some cultural defect, reverting back to its original form, and it is not at all uncommon. You may save seed from the very finest double flowers, but without good culture many of them will come as our friend describes. Some five or six years ago we had about a quarter acre of Semple's. They grew finely until the middle of July, when no more rain fell for two months. Our great expectations took flight and we did not pick one per cent of good flowers. We had no means of watering them and they were a complete house and ranges or greenhouses and the balance of seventy-eight pages is devoted to details of the various styles of construction. It is stated that the catalogue cost in the neighborhood of 80 cents a copy, but it will be sent free to any one who is sufficiently interested to send 6 cents to pay the postage.

Convention Preparations.

There is not much left to be said in regard to the coming convention that has not previously been told. The local committee has completed its plans for the reception of the visitors and it is now up to the good graces of the weather man and a large attendance to make it a complete success. The trade exhibit will be a great feature at the convention. Our spacious hall is well filled and it will be a grand display.

Those interested in the bowling will find here excellent facilities, and the prizes are numerous. A gold medal for each man on the winning team may be more satisfactory than cups, for every man in the winning team will have something to show for his skill. This prize is offered by the Milwaukee Florists' Club. The C. C. Pollworth Company offers six scarf pins for members of the second high team. Sargeant's restaurant offers a gold medal each for the men making greatest number of strikes and spares. John Evans offers a gold medal for high man in the individual class, J. F. Wilcox offers a fine umbrella for highest single score made during the tournament. The Citizens' Business League has voted $25 in prizes, the awards to be designated by the bowling committee. Henry Weber will offer a gold medal. F. Pollworth & Brother and Kurz Bros. have also donated trophies. Great interest will center in the Mussey $25 prize, which will be contested for among the high men on each team and in the individual class, making it a championship game in the S. A. F. tournament. The ladies will have an opportunity to bowl Wednesday morning and their outing is planned for the afternoon. There will also be many points of interest to visit during their leisure moments. The hotels are numerous and there will be excellent accommodations for all.

DETROIT.

Club Election.

The last regular meeting of the club was the annual one for the election of officers and it resulted in the election of Robt. Flowerday as president; Robt. Watson, vice-president; B. Schroeter, treasurer, and J. F. Sullivan, secretary. Everything points to a very successful year under the administration of the two "Bobs."

Detroit will be represented at Milwaukee by about forty delegates, who will go via the Grand Trunk to Grand Haven, thence by boat to Milwaukee, arriving on Tuesday morning at 6:30, and leaving here Monday evening at 5 o'clock, standard time. Geo. A. Rackham has the transportation in charge and has secured a special car, etc., and would like all florists to join us who can do so. If notified any time before 2 p. m. of Monday he will secure berth on steamer. The fare from Detroit and return, including berth, is $9.65.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The mountain weather which favored this city during the early part of the month had a beneficial effect on flowers. We really need mountain breezes to waft a little business this way. Alas, it is chiefly the rider on the white horse who comes now. Still there is a little activity at the Flower Market and the commission houses, though many of the employes are enjoying their vacations. The latest acquisitions are dahlias from W. P. Peacock, of Atco, N. J., who is sending in some flowers of Clifford W. Bruton, a fine yellow, a sort of all-the-season variety. Virtually the entire cut of this great dahlia specialist goes to S. S. Pennock.

Coal.

The coal situation showed a marked change during the past week. The anthracite dealers, finding that bituminous coal was replacing the small sizes of hard coal to an alarming extent, put down the price of that stock at the mines about 25 cents, making the price of buckwheat, the most popular florists' size, $1.15 to $1.25 a ton for the commercial grades. This is from 5 to 15 cents a ton higher than two years ago. At these figures most florists will find hard coal, if of fair quality, cheaper than soft, the first cost difference being about 90 cents a ton in favor of the former. Excepting in excessive cold weather, it is not probable that the soft coal will make up this difference by the additional heat given out. Possibly prices may decline still more, but in view of the unsettled

HOW TO GET TO THE Principal Places About Chicago.

The convention visitors passing through Chicago on their way to and from Milwaukee will wish to inspect the great greenhouse establishments for which this vicinity is famous. Below we give directions for reaching the various places from the center of the city:

Bassett & Washburn—Take C., B. & Q. R. R. at Union depot, Canal and Adams Sts., to Hinsdale, 18 miles; short walk to greenhouses.

Brant & Nee—Take C., M. & St. P. R. R. at Union depot, Canal and Adams Sts., to Forest Glen, 10 miles; short walk to greenhouses. Peterson Nursery half mile further on same road. Wittbold's new range at Edgebrook also accessible from here.

J. A. Budlong—Take Lincoln Ave. cable cars on Dearborn street; take transfer to Bowmanville electric; greenhouses close to end of line. The places of Weber Bros., H. Bauske, the Krutchens and others are close at hand.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Take C., M. & St. P. R. R. at Union depot, Canal and Adams Sts., to Morton Grove, 14 miles; greenhouses right beside the track. Morton Grove Greenhouses close at hand. Niles Center establishments accessible from here.

Reinbergs—Take Lincoln Ave. cable cars on Dearborn St.; take transfer to Robey St. electric, which passes the greenhouses of Peter Reinberg. George Reinberg's place one block to west. Walking west one comes to Bauske's, Budlong's and numerous others within a mile.

Welland & Risch—Take C. & N. W. R. R. at Wells St. depot to Evanston, 12 miles; or take Clark St. cable on Dearborn St. and transfer to Evanston electric.

Wiator Bros.—Take No. Clark St. cable cars on Dearborn St., and transfer to Evanston electric; get off where car turns north from Devon Ave. and walk west over the hill. Close at hand are the places of M. Winandy, Jno. Munro, Adam Zender, Sinner Bros., the Beckers, and many others.

Geo. Wittbold Co.—Take Clark St. cable cars on Dearborn St. and transfer to Evanston electric, which passes greenhouses at North Halsted and Buckingham Pl. New range at Edgebrook, 11 miles on C., M. & St. P. R. R.

Joliet—At Joliet there are the places of the Chicago Carnation Co., Jas. Hartshorne, Mgr., and the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. Joliet, 40 miles, is reached by frequent trains on the C., R. I. & P. R. R., station at La Salle and Van Buren Sts., on the elevated loop. The greenhouses are some distance from the depot; visitors will be met with a carriage if they give notice as to hour of arrival.

conditions at the mines, it seems good policy to buy now.

Some New Ideas.

M. Rice & Co. have been devoting their energies to making certain things that they are confident will fill long felt wants of the florists. For this purpose Mr. Rice postponed his European trip and he is justly enthusiastic over the results obtained. The first domestic novelty, one which seems destined to play an important part in the work of the decorator, was the willow screen. It stands five or six feet high, about three feet broad, and comes in either open work or closely woven. What an acquisition! Every decorator knows how often he wants to hide an ugly corner, to conceal an orchestra, or what not. Perhaps room is an object, or it is bitter cold, so that plants are not the thing, then here are these screens. Tie several together, drape with some graceful green, fasten on a loose bunch of effective flowers, and presto! it is done.

The basket stands for plants have been greatly improved. One of these filled with a handsome specimen Boston fern should prove well nigh irresistible. Next came a collection of dainty little stands, basket work with wooden top, just the sort of tasty little thing that finishes off an effective decoration when used here and there to support a handsome jardiniere tastefully filled.

Then there were urn-shaped baskets of "green straw" made in sizes to fit fiber vases, so that the busy florist can just drop in one of his store vases, flowers and all, when he wants to show a customer how it will look, a kind device truly, that means good-by to all frantic rushing around to find a vase that will fit. The decorator will be further assisted by combination plant stands holding a specimen on high with four smaller plants below; airy hanging baskets, tin or foil lined; a wonderful reversible plant stand and pedestal, which must be seen to be appreciated, and ever so many other fetching things.

Then there are increased ribbon cases filled with all styles, from 12-inch sashes to 1/8-inch showers, also object lessons in the use of so called Porto Rican mats and in the once well known immortelle wreath, revived and adorned in new attire. Mr. Rice is to be congratulated on the good work his firm is doing for the advancement of our calling. Rice & Co. are preparing a grand catalogue, to be issued in a month.

Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer has returned from abroad, bringing in his train many interesting novelties which the REVIEW hopes to describe when they are safely unpacked. Paul Berkowitz has gone west to arrange his firm's large exhibit at Milwaukee.

Samuel S. Pennock and Mrs. Pennock sail for Liverpool from this port on the steamer Haverford, Saturday, August 15. Mr. Pennock's many friends wish him a pleasant vacation.

The fine canna display at the August meeting of the club was enjoyed among others by Mr. Seeger, of Hartford, who is staying in this city. He brought letters of introduction to George Huster, of Girard College, and, I think, to O. B. Paul, of Fairmount Park.

George Anderson is rapidly pushing the work on his new rose house, one of the largest in this city. Mr. Anderson has been very successful with Bridesmaid. He has increased his planting of this rose.

The firm of D. Landreth & Sons, seedsmen, propose devoting their attention to their wholesale business, relinquishing their retail department after September 1. The street has it that both Peter Henderson & Co., of New York, and J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, are considering locating in this city.

John F. Andre, of Doylestown, has built two new houses this season. Mr. Andre has been ill. He is recuperating at Wildwood, N. J.

C. A. Dunn spent a few days among the carnation growers near Oxford and in Chester county lately.

Peter Reinberg's Force of Greenhouse Employees.

The Lord & Burnham Co. have, through their indefatigable agent, D. T. Connor, secured the contract for constructing and heating a rose house 100x19 feet for Richard E. Lange, of 7001 Ridge avenue.

Charles Gray, formerly with Dumont & Co., has returned to Leo Niessen.

Richard Umphried, of the Flower Market, is back from his vacation.

Ralph G. Sheigley, lately with S. S. Pennock, will on Monday commence work with Leo Niessen.

Robert Scott & Son are sending in some of their new rose, Florence Pemberton, to Samuel S. Pennock.

Better go to Milwaukee and cheer for our bowlers. PHIL.

BUFFALO.

Club Picnic.

We can't afford much space for business this week, as the picnic will take up all available room. It did not rain on Wednesday last, so the adjourned picnic came off, not with such an attendance as there would have been if Tuesday had been fair, for all adjourned events are sure to suffer; but still there were about 100, young and old, and the verdict of all was that it was the banner affair of all the club's picnics, and this is due largely to the well laid plans and most excellent work of the committee, Charles H. Keitsch, Rowland B. Cloudsley, W. A. Adams, Emile Brooker and Fred B. Lewis. Gardenville is an ideal place for such a party as ours. There are shady seats for the old and infirm, a fine hall for the two-step, a well kept diamond and field for the young athletes, a bowling alley, a dining-room, a commodious and well stocked—well, everything that you would want at a picnic. The officials of the sports were W. F. Kasting, starter; Captain Braik and Prof. Cowell, judges; Lewis H. Neubeck and R. Cloudsley, handicappers; W. Scott, announcer; Willie Donaldson, general utility man, and William Heuson, chief rooter.

The sports began with a well contested game of baseball, West Side against the East. The western men were drawn from anywhere this side of Erie, Pa., and the east extended almost to Syracuse. But if the west did win by one run, there was the best of feeling. The battery for the east was composed of Mathewison Weise and David Corfu Scott; for the west, W. Belsey Scott and Robert Burns Scott. The playing was so brilliant all around that it would be impossible to speak of anyone in particular. The umpiring of Wm. Kasting was perhaps the best feature. The 100-yards dash was won by Deerfoot Reichert, the prize a house and lot on Dorchester avenue. In the old man's race Geo. McClure won first prize, a thousand pieces of ornamental wall paper. The race on all fours, 50 yards, brought out brilliantly the peculiar talents and conformation of good old Joe Neubeck, and he looked so much like one of the large anthropoids running from one tree to another that a farmer looking over the fence wanted to shoot at it. The prize was a copy of Huxley's "Descent of Man." The quarter-mile race was won by the same speedy Mr. Reichert and the prize was ten shares in N. Y. C. R. R.

The ladies' race of 75 yards was a very close affair and was won by a nose by Mrs. Bailey. The prize was a celluloid baby carriage. The track, however, was heavy, and if it had been fast Mrs. W. F. Kasting would have won. She was heavily backed for the place, however, and pulled out her backers. This race gave the starter much worry, as the majority of the contestants were maidens and quite fractious at the post and there was considerable backing, rearing and bumping before the barrier rose. Next year I would advise all starters in the race to wear blinkers, so that they wouldn't see who their neighbor was.

The sack race was won by W. B. Scott with both feet through the bottom of the sack. The prize was a box of "Greenhouse Perfectos." The potato race, a very amusing but exhausting event, again went to the swift, Mr. Reichert, and the prize was a bottle of Wilson Family Disturber. The hop, step and jump went to Wm. Greever, with a fine effort of thirty-nine feet, the prize being a fine kodak. The broad jump was won by David Scott, of Corfu, with nine feet and ten inches; the prize was a gross of corn brooms and a week's meal ticket at Maplehurst. The three-legged race was won by Messrs. Weiss and Reichert. The prize was two bottles of elderberry wine. The one-legged race was won by Mr. Slattery, the prize four cases of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Now I pause to say that Mr. Slattery, late of New York and now of Byrnes & Slattery, of our city, is an athlete and an all-around good fellow. Half a dozen like him make a picnic an assured success, and if he had had running shoes instead of stockings, he would have given all his competitors a posterior view of himself in several events. He is an acquisition to our club.

A shoe race was won by one of W. J. Palmer & Son's juvenile assistants, name not given, and this ended the sports, after which appetites were appeased. Then the music started the waltz, the rattle of the pins was heard and a select few took a vocal exercise. The sentimental singing of Jake Bailey is alluring—a treat—and the duets by he and Charlie Kanitch are most enjoyable; but of all the vocal efforts the song by Charlie was the thing. The words were Peking Chinese and the air Hiawatha. Finally, there was not an unpleasant incident during the whole day to mar the enjoyment and everyone got home, even if some don't remember how. I forgot to mention that there were good second and third prizes for every event and scarcely a contestant but that earned something. Strange to say that "Old Hoss" Warring won for second prize in the old men's race, a beautiful German stein holding at least a quart. How touchingly appropriate! And now we hear frequently the pathetic appeal, "Kind sir, won't you fill my stein?"

To the Convention.

I don't know that I have mentioned before that the Buffalo delegation to Milwaukee will leave here via the Wabash on Sunday at 8 p. m., arriving in Chicago on Monday at 10:30 a. m. If we get eighteen to go we will have a sleeper to ourselves. Secure tickets of W. F. Kasting, our well known commission man, and join us. When we get to Chicago we trust that some of them there will show us the road to Pabstville. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There are more good Beauties now available, several growers getting fair cuts from young stock, but of course stems are not yet very long. Brides and Maids are not increasing in supply as rapidly as might be expected, possibly due to the cool weather, and good roses are still hard to find. Some growers are getting a second cut of Kaiserin of very good quality. Golden Gate is the most plentiful rose. Carnations from the field are coming in heavier every day, but not in quantities to seriously affect the market.

Asters are in heavy supply, but there are scarcely any whites, and, on the whole, the quality is very much below par. Gladioli are too plentiful, and the same may be said of rudbeckias, hydrangeas and all the outdoor flowers; while large quantities are sold, yet not all the daily receipts find a buyer. The Easter lily is about out of the market, but there are auratum of all degrees of quality. Valley is very good. Green goods of all classes are abundant, except green galax, which is out.

Convention Entertainment.

The plan is to take the S. A. F. members in hand at about 2:30 Friday afternoon, August 21, on their return from Milwaukee. Headquarters will be established in the wholesale district and open house will be kept until 6 o'clock, when the guests will be escorted to the Auditorium for supper, after which everybody will go to the concert at the Coliseum garden. Plans are being made to entertain not less than 800 and it is the understanding that the Milwaukee boys will provide transportation back to the convention city for those who must start their return journey from there, so that everybody can come down for the Chicago affair.

Various Notes.

Stocks of greenhouse glass are pretty well cleaned out, but local dealers expect to have enough to last until new glass is being made, in September. One of the leading houses says that 65 per cent of the calls now are for 16x18. The present market is about $4.28 on small lots of D. S. A.; $3.80 on car lots; $4.10 on B. in small lots; $3.64 by the car.

Coal contracts are being made at an advance of from 30 to 35 cents a ton over last year's contract price. This makes a big difference where from 2,000 to 10,000 tons are burned, but the dealers say the cost of mining and transportation has advanced nearly the full amount of the raise.

O. P. Bassett and Mrs. Bassett are at Lake Minnetonka.

This has been a great growing season. The carnations in the field all did splendidly, and on being moved indoors took hold of the soil in fine shape. The chrysanthemum plants, too, are making good growth with all the growers in this neighborhood. It has been a particularly favorable summer for those who benched

Mrs. Lawson carnations direct from the pots.

Misses Nell M. Sisler and Lillian Tonner, of E. H. Hunt's, are at Niagara Falls this week.

Sam Pieser has sold his store at 387 North Clark street to Ackerman & Co. Mr. Pieser will have no further connection with the trade.

J. P. Brooks has assumed charge of the Weiland & Risch establishment as foreman.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Reinberg, George Weiland and Mr. and Mrs. P. Olinger went to Newcastle Tuesday evening for a few day's visit with Peter Weiland.

Mrs. Horton, of Bassett & Washburn's, leaves Saturday for two weeks in the east.

Alois Frey, until recently in business at Hartford, Conn., is to become assistant to C. J. Stromback at Lincoln Park.

Visitors.

J. W. Davis, Morrison, Ill., and A. J. Stahelin, Sand Hill, Mich., buying building materials; John G. Heintz, Terre Haute, Ind.; Miss Martin, of L. L. Lamborn's, Canton, O.; Fred. Breitmeyer, Mt. Clemens, Mich.; Wm. H. Donohoe, with Thomas Young, Jr., New York; Carl Erickson, Princeton, Ill.; S. M. Wyeth, Watseka, Ill.

BOSTON.

Everything is sailing along as smooth as a button. The output has been depreciated by rainy weather, but there is enough of everything to fill all orders unless it may be on the colored carnation side of the house.

Negotiations seem to be progressing better in the Sutherland bankruptcy matter than in those almost immediately preceding. At the second meeting of creditors the committee recommended the acceptance of 25 per cent in cash, a note of nine months for 15 per cent and another of a year and a half for 10 per cent, making 50 per cent all told. This being the best that can be done in their estimation, and agreed upon on his part, it is hoped all hands will sign papers which have been forwarded to them and push this settlement along to a quick finish.

Jack Minton is out with another business card. This time it reads: "Tobin & Minton, undertakers." If there is anything illegal about that, I guess the "Judge" knows it and I presume the same might have been said in regard to the affairs of the N. E. Cut Flower Company. J. S. MANTER.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade in cut flowers still retains its summery conditions, and the report from several of the large retailers is "exceedingly quiet." The recent rains put all outdoor stock in fair shape. The early part of last week there was a greater demand for white flowers than at present, on account of extra funeral work. The stock in roses continues to come in very poor, Kaiserin being about the best. Golden Gate and Meteor are also of fair quality. Bride and Bridesmaid are very poor. The best of these bring $5 per 100, while the poor ones hardly bring over $2. No good Beauties are in the market. The demand for roses is very good, but they must be of the first quality to sell well.

There are some good field-grown carnations in the market, especially Mrs. Fisher. The bulk of the carnations that come in are small and with very short stems, which do not sell well at any price. The best long-stemmed ones bring $1.50, while 50 cents per 100 is all the shorts bring. Good valley continues to come in at the usual price. Of the general outdoor stock tuberose stalks and asters sell the best. The asters that come in are not of as good quality as they should be at this season of the year. Tuberose stalks are selling well at $4 and $5 per 100. Gladioli, hollyhocks, hydrangeas and candytuft come in by the thousands, and are having a slow sale at cheap prices. Some good smilax was offered at $15 the past week.

Various Notes.

The great wind and hail storm of last week, Wednesday, caused considerable damage about town to trees in the parks. The hail was not large enough to do much damage to greenhouses. Some damage to outdoor plants was reported by several of the florists, and C. Juengel lost a little glass.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., reports the loss of about 300 feet of glass by hail on Tuesday, August 4.

Theo. Richter, a florist of Kirkwood, was killed on Wednesday last at the World's Fair grounds during the wind and hail storm. Mr. Richter was at one time a member of the club. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss. The remains were taken to Washington, Mo., for burial. The family has the sympathy of the craft.

John Young and family left last Thursday for Atlantic City, N. J., for a month's recreation. John will visit New York and Boston before returning home.

Harry Young is away for a week's hunting trip in Franklin county. Harry is one of the crack shots among the florists and never comes home empty-handed.

George Ostertag was thrown from a street car one day last week and received painful injuries about the head and arms, from which he is recovering fast. Brother Fred has taken his place during his absence.

Charlie Schnelle, with M. M. Ayers, is on his vacation. After seeing the sights in East St. Louis and Belleville he will return and let Wil Adels go with the St. Louis party to Milwaukee. Mrs. Ayers is reported somewhat better and out of danger.

Otto Heineken, who represents Bobbink & Atkins, of Rutherford, N. J., is now stationed out at the World's Fair grounds. Otto likes St. Louis, and expects to stay here until after the World's Fair is over.

Fred C. Weber returned Monday from French Lick Springs much improved in health. Mr. Weber will go with us to Milwaukee, accompanied by his wife, daughter and niece, Miss Dora Weber.

Mrs. C. C. Sanders and her two daughters, Misses Laura and Jessie, returned Saturday from a three weeks' trip down the Tennessee river. They report a pleasant time.

Convention Talk.

Convention matters are being discussed, and you often hear the question asked, "Are you going to Milwaukee?" The arrangements for the trip are complete. Vice-president Juengel, who has the matter in charge, sent out a neat circular explaining all about the trip, in which he says the St. Louis delegation will leave Sunday, August 16, at 9:05 p. m., via Wabash railroad, in a special sleeper for its exclusive use, arrive in Chicago at 7:30 a. m. Monday, and leave Chicago for Milwaukee Tuesday morning. The return tickets are good until August 25, and will admit of a short stop-over in Chicago if desired. A pleasant trip is expected, and those who have failed to send in their names should do so at once and secure a berth on the St. Louis special sleeper to Chicago. The transportation committee has now some thirty-five names of persons who will make the trip to Milwaukee.

Bowling.

The bowling club held its last practice games Monday night. A new set of pins was used and the score below will show what was made by the team that will represent St. Louis at Milwaukee next Wednesday afternoon. The club has discovered a new florist bowler who is said to be a "crackerjack," but never made it known. He will be at Milwaukee and may roll with the team. His name is Vincent Gorley, who has a store at Fifteenth street and Cass avenue.

NEW YORK.

To the Convention.

Four days more and the New Yorkers and their neighbors will begin their journey to the Cream City. Sunday at 1 p. m. the exodus begins. That it will be a happy party needs no assurance and that it may total 100 is our ambition. Before this issue of the REVIEW reaches your eastern subscribers on Saturday morning the members who will go will be definitely known. There will doubtless be a few stragglers who will get into the ark at the eleventh hour. It will certainly be a disappointment if fewer than 100 materialize when the hour for departure arrives. It is hard to understand why anybody with any love for his profession and for the grand old Society of American Florists can possibly stay away if by any means he can arrange to go. The fact is that there should never be a smaller attendance than 2,000 at any of these annual reunions. That this year may see these figures excelled is the desire of the generous men of Milwaukee who are doing so much to make this convention memorable. Just as I expected, it was necessary only to make the announcement of the prize bowling requirements to have generous offers from every part of the country. Mr. Pollworth has already given a list of donors that includes many of the best known horticulturists, and I have no doubt that by the day of the bowling competition the number will be largely augmented. The evening entertainment to follow the president's reception is now assured. Some of the most popular members of the society will take part in it. I predict it will be a crowded house and an appreciative one. The Milwaukee club deserves all the appreciation and encouragement it is possible for the society to give, and in no more practical way can this be demonstrated than by a record breaking attendance. The west will do its duty in this respect and the east cannot afford to be outdone in courtesy and numbers. It will be a great host that marches into the beautiful city by the lake next Tuesday.

With the Seed Houses.

The downtown seedsmen are taking advantage of the summer dullness and renovating their establishments, so that with new coats of paint and general refurnishing they begin to look in readiness for the busy fall season so close at hand. Meantime they are running with light forces and enjoying the well earned rest that should always follow a strenuous season. Charles Henderson has just returned from his European trip in excellent health. Patrick O'Mara has wisely deferred his outing until next week and will combine pleasure and recuperation at the Milwaukee convention. Mr. Walter, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., is having his usual vacation with his family up in Maine. C. H. Joosten takes the ocean trip to Portland next week and will have a couple of weeks of ozone in northern New England.

Various Notes.

Charles Carl, of Thorley's has July and August in which to forget business and build up for his arduous ten months' purchasing responsibilities.

James McManus has completed the improvements in his store and handsome oak finish gives the place a decidedly metropolitan appearance.

Mrs. Lairn, bookkeeper for Traendly & Schenck, leaves next week for her annual vacation in the mountains. Thomas Martin, of the same establishment, has been at the Thousand Islands, and Fred Klinge has enjoyed a rest at Rowayton, Conn.

Alex Guttman is comfortably settled in his new home on West Twenty-ninth street, and devotes the entire basement, which has been enlarged, to his wholesale business, an especially convenient arrangement. He is handling immense quantities of gladioli, receiving large daily shipments from the leading growers. He will be with the New Yorkers at the convention. The father of Mr. Guttman met with a serious accident last week by falling down stairs, the eldest son of Mr. Guttman taking the fall with him, but escaping serious injury by a miracle.

August Gaedeke, of Nashua, N. H., was in the city Monday with his brother Albert, of Perth, Scotland. Both gentlemen will be at the convention.

John I. Raynor and Mrs. Raynor have been spending a week at Atlantic City.

Mr. Houghton, of Houghton & Clark, of Boston, with his family, were visitors in the city last week.

Hitchings & Co. are building a 100x24 house in upper New York for A. N. Towell, the florist of Fort Washington avenue.

W. G. Gomersall, of Poughkeepsie, is starting in the florist business at West Nyack, N. Y.

William Tricker has been appointed gardener to W. H. Vanderbilt, Jr., at Great Neck, L. I., and has assumed charge of this splendid estate, where he will have abundant opportunity for the demonstration of his "water garden" ability.

Retailers, notwithstanding the dull season, continue their attractive window displays, and Small's is as brilliantly lighted as in mid-winter every evening.

The Pierioni fern has arrived and promises to be very popular. Doubtless September will see every bon-ton store stocked with a generous supply. During the summer the Anna Foster has won golden opinions as a keeper and for its gracefulness, and many of the window decorators have utilized it and find its good qualities quite equal to its parent, Bostoniensis. The immense greenhouse at Scarboro, which Mr. Pierson erected last year, has been entirely devoted to Pierioni, and with its stock of well developed plants for the retail trade is a wonderful exhibit. Some indication of its beauty will be realized by the firm's display at Milwaukee.

The event of the week is the Astor ball at Newport. Hodgson sent a carload of supplies for it from New York, and many hundreds of American Beauties. The tables are to be decorated with orchids and lilies of the valley. Palms and electric lights innumerable will add to the grand effect. The Newport florists are all busy with dinners, and engagements are looked for into September.

E. W. Bliss, of Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, died suddenly a few weeks ago. He has long desired to have his beautiful property, which commands a view of New York harbor, preserved by the city, and it is now announced that it will become one of the Brooklyn parks. There are splendid greenhouses on the estate and it will become one of the favorite resorts of the metropolis. The aggregate of acres comprising the parks of New York totals nearly 7,000.

Wm. Griffin, landscape superintendent for Alex McConnell and formerly manager of the Sloan estate, met with a serious accident last week, while directing the work at the Carnegie gardens. He fell from a ladder and broke several ribs.

John Lewis Childs sends me some grand spikes of gladioli. He is marketing great quantities.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

OMAHA, NEB.—The contract is shortly to be let for the new greenhouse at Forest Lawn cemetery. The building is to be iron-frame, 30x30, with two wings 20x50 feet.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—Thomas B. McClunie, who died recently at Hartford, Conn., is said to have built the first greenhouse ever put up in Berkshire county. He laid out many estates in this neighborhood and along the Hudson.

PINE BLUFF, ARK.—A. A. Harper reports summer business dull here, for the community is healthy and there is little funeral work. Lots of outdoor stock goes to waste. Building material is too high for much of an increase in glass here this year.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.—John Porte, chief florist for the Illinois Central Railroad, has done a great deal of good bedding work at the station grounds along the line. The three greenhouses 20x120 turn out a great deal of stock. Gus Johnson, his assistant, was gardener at the Insane Hospital at Anna, and August Wagner, another assistant, was for years with E. A. Kanst, in the South Park system, at Chicago.

The Picnic.

On Wednesday, August 5, the florists of the Sainly City held their annual outing at Wildwood, White Bear Lake, and pretty nearly every one belonging to the craft, male and female, was there and had the most hilarious time on record. The committee, composed of Messrs. O. Olson, Carl Vogt and C. A. Hanson, worked hard to make it a success, and the many races and contests came off finely, without a hitch or misunderstanding. The prizes were fair donations from different firms connected with the business, directly and indirectly, and were all accepted with grace by the winners. The prizes and the names are too numerous to mention singly, so we will pass that. Of course the pie-eating contest of the senior florists furnished a lot of fun and laughter. Some of the more hairy faces looked anything but nice.

In the afternoon more florists with their spouses and friends came and enjoyed the different sports on the ideal picnic grounds. At 5 o'clock a ride on the steamer across the lake was taken by all. On the other side of that beautiful sheet of water a halt was made at Ramaley's pavilion, the machines were greased, the boys were watered at the nearest inn and the ladies were served with ice cream free by J. Ramaley, the well known Nestor florist, who is entitled to many thanks from the committee. After this trip the day was finished with dancing and other amusements, and it was late, very late, when the last florist reached home. On the whole, the affair was a success; and it was our first picnic single handed, that is, without Minneapolis.

GOLD MEDAL FERN.

The following is an extract from the report of the committee on plants, from the Transactions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for 1902:

By far the most important and remarkable new plant that has been shown before the society for many years was placed on exhibition at the March show by the F. R. Pierson Company, of Tarrytown, N. Y., and was shown under the name of Nephrolepis Piersoni. It originated with them as a sport from N. exaltata Bostoniensis, and is very interesting botanically as well as of great value commercially. Instead of the fronds being simply pinnate, as in the original form, the pinnæ have become divided, making the fronds twice pinnate. At the same time, the power of indefinite extension of the tips of the fronds, a characteristic peculiar to nephrolepis, seems to have been communicated to the pinnæ, thereby making the fronds of great width and beauty in a well developed plant. The Pierson variety was so remarkably distinct, and at the same time of so much commercial value, that we considered the plant worthy of the highest award offered by the society; we therefore awarded it the gold medal.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

C. W. WARD, of the Cottage Gardens, reports peonies for September shipment selling very well indeed.

SEYMOUR NELSON, of Chicago, has made plans for the improvement of South Park at Des Moines, a portion of which will be developed this fall.

P. J. BERCKMANS has again been elected president of the Georgia State Horticultural Society, a position he has held for more than a quarter of a century.

THE consensus of opinion is that the fumigation of nursery stock was by no means general the past season. There are only two fumigation houses at Danville, N. Y., but they have had no San Jose scale there.

At the session of the Indiana Horticultural Society, at Anderson, August 4 and 5, E. Y. Teas, of Centerville, read a paper on "The Catalpa" and C. M. Hobbs, of Bridgeport, one on "Five of the Most Promising New Varieties of Apple."

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad is about to make a practical experiment in forestry, planting catalpas along its right of way, 640 trees to a mile. It is figured that in sixteen years these trees will have attained a size to furnish one telegraph pole or five cross-ties.

CHARLES H. VICK, director of the New York state horticultural exhibit at the St. Louis World's Fair, states that the extensive grounds around the state building will be largely planted by four Rochester nursery firms, Chase Bros. Co., Ellwanger & Barry, Charlton & Son and Brown Bros. Co.

THE losses at Topeka during the spring flood were: Apple seedlings, 80 per cent; apple grafts, 60 per cent; peach seedlings, 40 per cent; peach coming one year, 65 per cent, with losses on other items about in proportion, according to figures compiled by Peters & Skinner.

THE G. M. Bacon Pecan Company, at De Witt, Ga., has been organized to take over the nursery and 165 acres of pecan groves of G. M. Bacon. There are 200,000 pecan trees in the nursery and a large business is being done in supplying stock to planters, but this department is to be greatly enlarged. They have a new variety, Georgia Giant, shortly to be distributed, the parent tree of which at five years of age bore nuts weighing thirty-two to the pound.

TREE PLANTING IN NEBRASKA.

One hundred acres of land in the sand hills of the Dismal River forest reserve, Nebraska, were planted this spring by the Bureau of Forestry. On eighty acres 100,000 pine seedlings were set out; the other twenty acres were sowed with seed. The work will continue this summer. The nursery will be enlarged so as to cover two acres, which will hold 2,000,000 seedlings. The bureau intends to increase the size of the nursery gradually so as to make it grow enough seedling trees every year to furnish sufficient stock for the planting. It is intended ultimately to turn the whole of the Niobrara and Dismal River reserves, which are now barren sand hills, into forest by planting. The Dismal River reserve includes 86,000 acres, the Niobrara reserve 126,000. A survey of the boundaries of the Niobrara reserve will be made this summer by E. J. S. Moore, of the Bureau of Forestry.

CHICOPEE FALLS, MASS.—Field-grown carnation plants are in good demand in this vicinity, as several florists lost a good many by stem-rot in the field. Chrysanthemums are being grown in about the usual quantities, and the plants are looking well. Hitchings & Co., New York, are building an iron-frame greenhouse for the Springfield Cemetery Association, on Pine street.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis Mo., June, 1904.

JESSE E. NORTHRUP, of Minneapolis, has fully recovered from his recent injury.

JOHN C. LEONARD and his bride are again at Chicago after a trip to the Pacific coast.

AUGUST RHOTERT sailed from New York for Europe August 11, on the Kronprinz Wilhelm.

ANOTHER two weeks should give much more satisfactory information as to the outcome of the growing season.

THE July issue of Frank B. White's Class Advertising is devoted to the Seed Trade convention and to seed advertising.

BESSEMER, ALA.—W. D. Taylor will open a wholesale and retail seed store in the building now being erected adjoining his premises.

PRACTICALLY all seed crops may be said to be late and early frost is likely to be a very large factor in determining next season's supply in many lines.

THE Department of Agriculture is asking seedsmen for back copies of catalogues to complete the department's files and aid in the work of tracing the origin of varieties and giving proper credit. W. W. Tracey, Jr., is in charge of the work.

THE discontinuance of the Landreth retail department leaves some good men in the market, among them James Vick, who had charge of the mail order department, and Robert Carpenter, who has been with the firm upwards of forty years.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—The insurance on the H. W. Buckbee seed stock destroyed by fire some time ago is in a fair way to be settled, the companies involved having left the matter to a committee representing three of their number for adjustment.

ANNUALLY increasing quantities of radish seed are being grown in the United States. The Michigan crop is short, but rather better than a year ago, while the silence with regard to conditions in California leads to the belief that a good crop may be expected there.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the Goodwin-Harries Co., Chicago, returned August 10 from a trip to the northwest and says corn is not in an encouraging condition. Mr. Harries is just back from the Michigan bean and pea districts, where conditions are better, but the critical stage is not yet passed.

PHILADELPHIA.—Both the hay and grain crops of New Jersey and Pennsylvania are below the average. Corn and tobacco crops are very backward. Both wheat and oats are of average quality. Late planted potatoes are looking thrifty and promise to develop nicely. The cold nights of late are working great havoc with the tomato and vine seed crops. The rust has attacked some fields of tomatoes and the vines are dying without ripening a single tomato. David Dugreth & Sons are making active preparations to close up their retail department in the city and are offering about everything at bargain prices. Alexander Stewart, formerly with this house, is now with Moore & Simon. Mr. Philler, formerly manager of the retail department, is thinking of starting in the seed business upon his own account.

THE government crop report for August 11 summarizes the corn situation as follows: "Corn is making favorable progress in the central and western portions of the corn belt, but in the upper Ohio valley and the middle Atlantic states the outlook is less promising. While improvement has been general in the states of the Missouri and upper Mississippi valley, in the more northerly portions of these states the crop is in need of warmth."

PEAS AND BEANS.

The John H. Allan Seed Co., Sheboygan, Wis., sends out the following under date of August 10:

Early peas are now mostly harvested except where they were sown very late, and some lots already threshed. Until recently weather was favorable for harvest, and crops that ripened early have been saved without damage and are bright and sound; but for the past two weeks there have been frequent and heavy rains in northern Wisconsin and northwestern Michigan, Ontario, Canada and Northern New York, particularly the latter section, where all crops have been damaged; in some cases to large extent. Along the general line, we hope to ship a large percentage on contracts except in a few lines we have mentioned before, which from special local causes have been cut short, among which are Nott's Excelsior, American Wonder, Pride of the Market, Allan's Dwarf Telephone. We expect shortly, when we shall have finished roguing late peas, to send you a list with percentages we hope to send you on each sort ordered.

Regarding beans: The heavy rains, with cool nights, in New York state have not been favorable to a luxuriant growth, but from the present condition we are expecting a fair crop of dwarf beans from our acreage in western New York, and our acreage in Wisconsin is promising well up to the present, but pole beans have with us been specially unfortunate. Having previously called attention to the loss of large portion of our crops of Kentucky Wonder and Old Homestead, we have now to report the loss of several fields of Worcester, Hampden and Carmine—podded pole beans, and we fear our delivery on these will be light.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The weather continues abnormal; the days are warm, the nights cool (August 7 the mercury stood at 50 degrees after sun up) and the precipitation is above the average. Outdoor stuff is plentiful. Asters are wasting by the thousand, and Cochet roses are in excess of requirements, and their quality is not up to that of former years. Last week the demand was somewhat better than the preceding one, but dullness is general.

The White Cochet rose grows constantly in favor as a summer variety. Fred'k. C. Bauer has a block of 7,000 in fine condition on his place, and every one sold. Carnations are being benched, the plants in most cases being fair in quality, though the wet season has resulted in much stem-rot.

Various Notes.

Halliday Bros. have closed up their Baltimore street store and will concentrate their business at 329 N. Charles street. It is a remarkable circumstance that now, on Baltimore street, our main business thoroughfare, there is but one

The Market.

We are still being favored with good summer weather, moderately warm days and cool nights. There has not been as much rain as could have been used readily, but a good soaking rain last week helped outdoor stock a great deal, and a marked improvement is seen in that class of stock.

Business is still first-class for this season of the year, and is far in advance of other years. The supply of good stock of any kind is very scarce and is sold out on sight. Good roses are especially much sought after and are bought as soon as they are unpacked at the wholesale houses. There is a good supply of short roses of all varieties and they sell nicely. Bride and Ivory are most in demand, as there is a great deal of funeral work.

Carnations are very scarce, and those to be had are of poor quality. Gladioli are almost a glut. As is always the case, the spikes of good quality sell readily and at a good price and the poor ones cannot be moved at any price. Moral: Grow only good stock. Great quantities of asters are also on the market. White ones in all grades sell readily and at good prices. Colored ones do not do quite so well, unless of first-class quality. Smilax is scarce, but there is a fair supply of Sprengeri and plumosus.

Notes.

Saturday evening a meeting of the Florists' Society was held in the club rooms. But few members were present and very little business was transacted. E. G. Gillett reported on the final arrangements for attending the convention at Milwaukee. Everything is in readiness and it looks as if Cincinnati will send a large delegation this year. Berths out of this city can be reserved by addressing E. G. Gillett, at 113 East Third street, stating what you want.

The Ohio Cut Flower Co. has moved into larger quarters situated at 129 East Third street.

Louis Kyrk and family and Fred Gear and family are spending their vacations at the lakes.

The Jabez Elliott Flower Market is being repainted on the inside and will be in first-class shape for the fall trade.

I wish to call the attention of growers everywhere to the two flower shows to be held in this city during the fall festival in September. The show days are September 10 and 17. The premiums offered are sufficiently large to attract growers from all over the country. The premium list was published in the REVIEW a few weeks ago. The books are now open for entries, which should be made as soon as possible to insure obtaining space. Entries to be made with John A. Ringold, Room 75, Perin Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Visitors were as follows: Dr. and Mrs. Howald, of Atlanta, Ga.; Geo. F. Stuck, representing Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; H. T. Moon, representing the Wm. H. Moon Co., Morrisville, Pa.; B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and Chas. E. Critchell, manager of the Atlanta Floral Co.'s store and plants, Atlanta, Ga. C. J. OHMER.

CLEVELAND.

There is no change to be reported in this market. Roses are scarce and poor, excepting Kaiserins, which are very fine. Carnations are poor, and almost every one is planting or has finished. Asters are plentiful, but small and short-stemmed. The whites come in very handy for funeral work, which keeps up quite steadily and is well distributed among the different stores.

Vacations are still in fashion, and this week finds F. W. Griffin and wife and George Bate and wife, with a party of friends, camping in the wilds of Canada on the shores of Georgian Bay. They expect to be away two weeks, and large fish stories may be looked for on their return. E.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

At the recent meeting Henry Sidenburg, of Hastings; Wm. H. Douglass, of North Tarrytown; J. F. Ditmar, James Devell, and F. V. Mallard, of Tarrytown, were elected to honorary membership in the Tarrytown Horticultural Society. The judges at the fall exhibition will be John G. McNicoll, of Lawrence; Peter McDonald, of Yonkers; Thomas Harrison, of Glen Cove, and Wm. Turner, of Oceanic, N. J. Wm. Smith and A. Gricson were given votes of thanks for their work in judging the June show. Exhibits were staged by Thos. A. Lee, Wm. Scott and David McFarlane, the judges giving the prize, a silk umbrella, to Mr. Scott. It was voted to have an outing, the same as last year, and Wm. Scott, James Smith and Francis Gibson were appointed to arrange the details. H. J. R.

"A SUBSCRIBER" is reminded that one's full name and address are necessary on queries to secure a reply.

MADISON, Wis.—George Rentschler, brother of Fred, the well-known florist, is planning to go into the business here, building greenhouses near the German cemetery.

Good Fortune is the Chum of Opportunity.

This is your chance to lay in a stock of Godfrey Aschmann's tip-top Araucaria Excelsa. Do it now and they will help to fill your treasure box: they will be growing into money for you while you're asleep. We are headquarters for this great favorite among decorative plants. Our houses are full of choice April importations—no seedlings—raised in Belgium from top cuttings only. Here is my very lowest quotation. Who can beat such stock as I offer for the money?

5½-in., 3 to 4 tiers, 10 to 12 in. high.... $0.50 each 5½-in., 3 to 4 " 10 to 12 " very broad .60 "
5½-in., 3 to 4 " 13 to 15 " .75 "
6-in., 4 to 5 " 16 to 19 " 80c. 90c. 1.00 "

Cycas Revoluta—(Sago Palm) very fine, 6 to 7-inch pots, from 3 to 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 leaves, 10c per leaf.

Kentia Forsteriana—36 to 42 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 75c to $1.00 each.

Ficus Elastica—Imported, 4-inch pots, 25c each.

Boston Ferns—5-in. pots, 25c to 35c each.

Asparagus Plumosus—3-in., at the rate of $10.00 per 100.

Solanum—(Jerusalem Cherry), 2½-inch, to clean out, only $2.00 per 100.

Cash with order please. Goods travel at purchaser's risk only. Please state if with or without pots.

Business in the wholesale marts is at low tide, and seems to be completely stagnant. No change is anticipated before the end of the present month. It is the old, old story, repeated year after year at this time. The summer reports have been late in opening because of the unpropitious weather, but a profitable season is anticipated, if a late one. Gladioli are coming in enormous quantities, and asters, too, are coming like a flood. Values on these have steadily fallen, but the best roses are readily taken at good prices, and the supply is not equal to the demand.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

A very common expression in this section is "Business is gescheft," but it has not held good the past week; the only thing one can say is that it is dead in every sense of the word. It looks as if all the flower buyers had left this part of the country.

The wholesale houses and the markets are swamped with gladioli and asters, about the only good flowers we are getting now. There are a few good roses, but not enough to go around, if there was any business.

Notes.

A number of the boys have had their vacations and are back at work, looking the better for their trips.

A. T. Lorch, of De Haven, Pa., has built a new carnation house, 40x300, which is about planted.

T. P. Langhans, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., left last Monday with his family for Chautauqua. If his fishing results compare with his expectations and preparations, his friends here will have to save all their spare change to pay express charges on the fish he will send them!

The Florist Club met last Tuesday evening to cuss and discuss gladioli; also the trip to the convention. The best rate from here is $17 for the round trip. A large party expects to attend.

Miss E. B. Maxwell, of Wilkinsburg, is visiting Chicago and other western points and will look in at the convention.

Karl Klinke, bookkeeper for the Cut Flower Co., is visiting his brother at Muncie, Ind.

Ernst Zieger, who has just returned from a trip through the east, goes to Cambridge Springs with his wife, for a ten days' rest. Hoo-Hoo.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The sweet pea show given in the Dayton building, under the auspices of the Journal, was a pronounced success. It was an amateurs' exhibition, but the florists got some good advertising out of it.

I AM very well pleased with returns from the REVIEW.—FRANK N. PIERSON, Cromwell, Conn.

THE AMERICAN

CALANTHE VEITCHII.

In a great many places this orchid is very much neglected, but when grown well, there is nothing to surpass it for Christmas decorations, and it may be freely used for house, conservatory, or table. We have had many racemes measuring over 50 inches from the base to the summit, the flowers of good size and splendid color. This I attribute to the pseudo-bulbs not being too large, and also not being too much hurried into flower. After finishing their growth, a lower temperature suffices. The best time for potting this species is the month of March, when growth has recommenced. The cultivator should never cut away all the old roots, but leave plenty to support the pseudo-bulb in position at the top of the soil, which should be quite half or even an inch above the rims of the flower-pots; in no case should too large ones be used. The

by
WILLIAM SCOTT

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co., CAXTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

compost should consist of one part turfy-loam, two parts turfy-peat, one part sphagnum, with an addition of small pieces of dry cow-manure, but not using any sand. Special care should be taken to use no fine material whatever, letting the roots ramble with as much freedom as possible. Firm potting should not be resorted to, the fingers being sufficient. In finishing off, use a stick and an old pair of vine-scissors for cutting off the rough material used.

Then place in a temperature not less than 60 degrees for the first month, after that the stove temperature will suit them, but be most careful in watering during the first period of their growth; also avoiding strong sunshine, as it is apt to burn the foliage. When growth is completed, which would be in September, a lower temperature is essential, gradually exposing them to the sun to ripen the bulbs. During the growing season, applications of manure-water are beneficial, but in no case use artificial manures. Damping between the pots with manure-water is of great benefit to the foliage; syringing should not be resorted to at all, as it often causes that black spot which is seen on the pseudo-bulbs. An occasional sponging of the foliage is all that is necessary to keep in check red-spider and scale. After the flowering period is over, calanthes should be rested in a temperature not less than 60 degrees.—W. Fulford, in Gardeners' Chronicle.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather still continues cold. We see nothing of the sun until the afternoons, and plenty of wind from the ocean. Business is about the same as for the last few weeks, considerable funeral work, and now that the schools are commencing their sessions again, many families are coming back to town. The prices of roses and carnations remain the same, but there is some advancement in the quality. Asters are beginning to be a factor in business and, although they are not as plentiful as they will be in a week or two, they bid fair to be of good quality. They are raised mainly by Chinese and long-stemmed flowers bring from $1 to $2 per hundred. E. Schwerin is cutting some very fine valley, about the best I have seen. The outlook for stock at present is good and if we have plenty of cool weather our fall crop of carnations and roses will be first-class.

Various Notes.

D. Greuttner, the well known florist of Vallejo, Cal., was in town Monday and says that business is very good at present. He has the majority of the floral work that used to be made in San Francisco before Vallejo had a first-class florist. Mr. Greuttner was gardener at the Mare Island navy yards for many years.

The California commissioners have asked Professor G. W. Dunn to take charge of the state botanical exhibit at St. Louis. Professor Dunn had charge of the exhibit at the World's Fair at Chicago.

The Alameda County Horticultural Society had its regular meeting in Oakland on Wednesday. Landscape gardening was the subject for the evening's discussion. Several new names were proposed for membership.

James Bell, the well known rose grower of Berkeley, instituted suit against his wife this week to quiet title to a piece of property which he desires to sell. Mr. Bell states in his petition that it was his before he married and wishes to have the court set it aside as his individual property. G.

ROSWELL, N. M.—Mrs. J. R. Church is adding a house 17x100 to her facilities. She anticipates a good fall and winter season.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

We have had a dull, cloudy, raw week, cool enough to wear an overcoat at night; good carnation growing weather, but unfavorable for peaches, for which this section is famous.

Several firms started Monday to plant carnations, which are, despite the late frost and unfavorable weather, nice, bushy plants, better than they were this time last year. The carnation crop is about over, and but very few asters are in as yet. Funeral work and shipping keeps all greenhouse flowers cleaned up; outdoor flowers are cheap. One of the florists had a wagon-load of hardy phlox and Golden Glow, peddling them on the street at 75 cents per 100. Then it is when the storemen are asked why they charge 25 cents or more per dozen for the same goods, that they feel pleasantly disposed to the peddler wagon. Prices of carnations are 25 cents per dozen; roses $1; American Beauties, $1.50 to $3. Outdoor flowers: prices unmentionable. Although every one is busy, either rebuilding or building, there is talk of going to the Milwaukee convention. While every one favors conventions and likes to attend them, it is hard to get them to offer a positive promise. "I'll see if I can spare the time," but at least ten will attend, and will do what they can to make the convention a success, and we may carol the busy bees to the tune of five or six more.

It is now time to turn our attention to the coal bins, the florists' "supply combination" seems to be quietly sleeping, and it now, evidently, is a "go-as-you-please" race.

The city is trying to purchase 40 acres of land adjoining John Ball Park, the project of purchasing Schmidt Bros.' greenhouses and grounds having fallen through.

PLAN FOR PIPING.

I will build a house 20x100, even span, running north and south, side ventilation. This is to be heated with hot water but with no pipes under the center bench. Can I run three lines of 4-inch pipe from the northwest corner clear around the house to return to the boiler on the northwest side? Will it do to sink the pipes at the door in the south end of the house, or how would it be best to get a night temperature of 55 degrees at 15 degrees below zero outdoors? Which is the safest plan, to hinge ventilator sash at ridge or leader? This is a windy place. Boiler will be under potting shed at north end of house and both ends of the greenhouse will be glass. How should the boiler be placed? A. W.

The pipe arrangement suggested is not desirable on account of the proposed dip at the south door. If the sill of the south door be raised to clear the pipes when passing around on an even grade there is no objection to the pipes being run from the northwest corner around the south end to the northeast corner and back again on same lines, provided that they be so graded that they are at least one foot higher at the northeast corner than at the northwest. Six lines of 4-inch pipes will not give a night temperature of 55 degrees in a house twenty feet wide with a 15 below zero temperature outside. If the house has glass on the roof only, at least eight lines of pipes will be necessary and if there be glass on the side walls more pipe must be used. Ventilators should be hung from the ridge, using galvanized wrought-steel hinges with brass centers. The boiler cellar should be deep enough to have the top outlet of the boiler at least eighteen inches below the greenhouse floor, but a little deeper will be advantageous. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

THE MILWAUKEE SOUVENIR.

The Milwaukee souvenir is a credit to its publishers, one of the handsomest pieces of printing ever issued for such a purpose. It contains many fine views about the convention city and much general information. It seems certain to be, to date, the record convention in the history of the S. A. F.

"Thripscide"

(REGISTERED)

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

7 YEARS IN BUSINESS

IS NOT A VERY LONG TIME, BUT SEE WHAT WE HAVE ACCOMPLISHED! Starting smaller than most any wholesaler ever did start, we now have the largest and Best Equipped Place in the City

What has brought about this almost phenomenal success?

Careful conservative business management.

We have taken good care of every flower our growers produced and shipped in and earned their confidence that we are at all times working for their interests.

We have carefully studied the wants of our customers and proved to their satisfaction that we can at all times be relied on to furnish anything that is to be had in this market and in addition we make special efforts to supply Novelties or Specialties not always to be had elsewhere.

In short—Fair and Square treatment for both Grower and Buyer.

We Stand on Our Record

We expect to continue as we have done, and push our business harder than ever this season. We certainly can do better now than ever before. Seven years ago the work was all done by one man. Now we have five experienced helpers and a wholesale house equipped second to none.

Those who have not been dealing with us we invite to investigate our Record. Our are our recommendation. We can do as much for YOU as we have done for THEM.

Our Mr. Amling is at the Convention this week.

We hope you have all seen him and got acquainted, or renewed old acquaintance.

Make our place headquarters when passing through Chicago.

are headquarters for Liberty, Chatenay, Sunrise.

This is our 1903 addition: Nine houses 27½ x 304, 8½ feet to Gutters. These and twice as many more in Beauties.

Why are We on Top?

THE Florists of America say it is because we are the Largest, Best Equipped and Most Progressive Florists' Supply House in the country. Perhaps they are right, the Florists are a pretty smart crowd. Anyway our stock is a little Finer than even we ever offered before. Mr. Bayersdorfer has just ransacked Europe for Novelties of merit. Meanwhile our own great factory has not been idle. You can depend on us for the best of everything.

We Are Ready to take better care of our customers than ever the coming season. We have this summer added three large houses to our plant of 225,000 feet of glass and will have the product of considerably more glass than last year with which to meet demands. And the quality from all will be high. We shall be especially strong in

Brides, Maids, Meteors, Beauties and Carnations.

In addition to the cut from our own large place we shall have the product of several first-class growers of roses. And we shall have other new consignors who are growers of high-grade CARNATIONS and other stock. We shall be in a position to give you the best the market affords at fair prices, and would like to add you to our list of satisfied customers. We can do it if you give us the opportunity. Write us about it. We make no charge for P. & D. on orders amounting to $4.00 and over.

The Milwaukee Convention.

THE BANNER MEETING OF THE SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Next Meeting to be held at St. Louis, Mo.

OFFICERS FOR 1904:

President, PHILIP BREITMEYER, Detroit, Mich.

Vice-President, J. J. BENEKE, St. Louis, Mo.

Secretary, WM. J. STEWART, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, H. B. BEATTY, Oil City, Pa.

All that Milwaukee promised has been fulfilled and the nineteenth annual convention of the Society of American Florists goes on record as the best yet. The attendance was large, all the familiar faces being seen, with many for whom it was a new experience and one long to be remembered. Many new names were added to the membership roll and an impetus given to the grand old society which will carry it on to other and yet better things.

The far east turned out strong, New York, Boston, Washington and Philadelphia having excellent representation, and Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Denver and Chicago did themselves proud, while from the towns of the middle west the craft was present almost to a man. It was a gathering to rejoice the hearts of the hospitable men who have worked so long and arduously for this successful culmination and it was a turnout to afford the most adequate compensation to the exhibitors who had gone to such great pains to put up the most magnificent exposition of florists' wares ever staged.

The trade exhibition was a revelation, not only to those who came to their first convention, but also to those who have not missed a meeting, and the elaborateness of the display spoke more eloquently than words of the marvelous advance in all departments of our trade in recent years. Never has so large a hall been available for the showing of our wares and never has the space been more completely occupied. In fact, so extensive was the display of florists' supplies that much more room might have been devoted to this department to the advantage of all exhibitors. The aisles were very crowded between sessions. All the houses were represented and made showings of greater extent than ever before; good things were on all the stands. In the end of the building devoted to plants the space was more nearly adequate to the needs, but here, too, the display was far more extensive than usual. The stock shown was of uniformly high quality, mostly in the line of decorative plants, and some very large exhibits were staged. The general effect of the exhibition, viewed from whatever point, could hardly have been improved upon, even the exhibitors of building material and heating apparatus putting up their displays, usually more practical than decorative, in very pleasing shape.

When the hour for the opening session arrived every seat in the adjoining audience room was occupied. Vice-President Pollworth called for order and in a few well chosen phrases presented a gavel to President Burton, on behalf of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, and introduced Mayor Rose, who straightway won for himself a place high in the esteem of his auditors.

Mayor Rose said that the exhibition spread out in the big hall was a revelation to Milwaukee, an evidence that the magnitude of the industry it represented was inadequately appreciated by those whose daily avocations do not bring them in touch with the florists' trade. He said that Milwaukee was famous as a city of beer, but that it does not deserve an opprobrious title; a walk in the residence districts would show it to be a city of flowers. And flowers are essential to human happiness. Take the aesthetic attributes away from man and you have no man left. The Mayor proceeded to "point with pride," as mayors do, to the many things for which Milwaukee should also be famous. He said his city had the greatest bowlers in the country and challenged the best team the florists could produce. He said that Milwaukee is only 85 miles from the wickedest city on earth, yet it is the most orderly; that it has a splendid police department but that its duties are more in line with the good offices of the Red Cross Society when visitors are in town.

Mr. Pollworth then introduced Adam Graham, of Cleveland, one of the eleven ex-presidents of the society who sat in a semi-circle back of the presiding officer, to respond. His remarks in response to the mayor were of witty character, relating to the extent of the free advertising Milwaukee gets from having her name over the doors of so many business houses through the length and breadth of the land.

Vice-president Pollworth next introduced President Burton, who took this, the first opportunity, to thank the society for his re-election under unusual circumstances at Asheville. He then read his address, as follows:

President Burton's Address.

Most of you are aware, I suppose, that I am not a believer in long addresses, and it will be my aim in the few remarks I have to make to you at this, our nineteenth annual convention, to say that which I have to say in the fewest possible words.

From all sections of the country I hear good news of a prosperous business during the past season. The black cloud which hung over many of us during the fall and early winter, the strike in the hard coal regions of Pennsylvania, was happily dispelled before it had spelt absolute ruin to our business. The subsequent good prices and brisk demand largely compensated for losses sustained in the majority of cases, but we regret the misfortune and extend our fullest sympathy to those who suffered so severely, many of whom were almost ruined by this calamity.

Another black cloud which threatened our business last season in addition to the calamity of the coal strike, was the arbitrary action of the express companies in advancing rates on the shipment of cut flowers, to an exorbitant and almost prohibitory extent. The trade was greatly alarmed and a storm of protest arose in all sections of the country. Florists' clubs, local committees and private individuals all took an energetic hand in resisting the exactions, and the national society gives full acknowledgment to all this assistance in securing the victory which it happily gained after several months of energetic effort. Special acknowledgment is also due to the valuable and faithful work performed in this connection by the society's special committee, Messrs. May, O'Mara and Sheridan.

Expansion in the West.

On the whole, the past year has been one of progress and prosperity, and there seems every reason to believe that the upward tendency will continue. I am not going to preach to you about the inevitable reaction which they say is bound to come sometime, but will content myself with a word of caution to hold something in reserve. During a season of remarkable expansion the excitement is apt to carry us further than is wise or expedient and in this, as in all other things, it is best not to be as expansive as we can, but to stop short before we reach the extreme of our ability or endurance. This remark is inspired by the way things are developing in the middle west. Glass is being erected so fast and general business is expanding at such a rate in that section as almost to make an easterner's head swim.

I have traveled considerably over the western section in the past year and have to acknowledge that we in the east have but the faintest conception of how things have been developing, especially in the production of cut flowers. It is simply astonishing and we must extend our congratulations and endeavor to sit as gracefully as we can on the back seat hereafter. I may remark, however, that the development in the culture of foliage and flowering plants does not seem to have kept pace with that of cut flowers. Plants will probably be the next department taken up by our enterprising friends in the west and will tend to diversify and steady the business.

Value of the S. A. F.

Looking back over the development of the past nineteen years, we must all feel that that progress would have been much slower if there had been no Society of American Florists with its annual conventions, its discussions of timely topics, the swapping of ideas among the members, each member giving and receiving inspiration for further progress, giving and receiving counsel of untold value and laying the foundations of success, not only for themselves, but for all those of their neighbors who in turn profited by their good example. Those pioneers of progress who attended the conventions in days gone by, came from all sections of the country and when they went home and put their new ideas into effect, all their neighbors saw it and went and did likewise. And so the good work went on all over the land, quietly and unostentatiously, but none the less surely until we see the remarkable expansion of the present day. And yet how few of those stay-at-homes ever give the society the credit for all the priceless benefits they thus received from it.

Every member of the trade owes a debt of gratitude to the society beyond money and beyond price, and they owe it to their profession to do their share for the general advancement. One's first duty is to look after his own interests, of course, but there are other duties besides that of one's family and one's business, one of which is the duty which each of us owes to his profession. I do not attribute neglect of this higher duty altogether to mere selfishness. I think a great deal of it comes from want of reflection. If all would reflect on the great silent work the society has been doing for the past nineteen years we would never hear the question: "What has the society done?" And instead of grudging the $3 annual dues they would put their hands in their pockets cheerfully to the last man, for that small sum, and also find the time to attend conventions, and so pay the debt to the society at least that much. We have made great strides so far, but there are great questions in front of us yet and we need the combined strength of the whole trade to tackle them.

Industry and Thrift.

While reflecting on my visits among my compeers in different parts of the country, there is one point that has struck me very forcibly, namely, that the place where packing sheds are clean and tidy and orderly, where the walks are smooth and free from rubbish, where the beds are without weeds, where paint and repairs are in evidence all around, there is the place where the prosperous man holds out; showing very clearly that the old fashioned virtues of industry and thrift are not dead letters in this modern age of improvement and invention but are still the difficult and narrow paths that lead to success. I admire hard work, aided by brains, but I do not forget that hard work comes first, brains after. Brains will never do anything in this world unless there be some push behind them. An industrious and thrifty worker will beat the born-tired genius every time.

In our business it is not the genius we want so much as the fellow who will take hold with a will and do his share of the daily grubbing, confident that in the long run that is the way to become competent and be able to hold his end up in the race for life. Not that I object to genius; about one in 5,000 perhaps will be a genius and we can look on and wonder when he comes along; what we have to consider now is that we want the other 4,999 to be competent and industrious hewers of wood and drawers of water. If the whole 5,000 are aided and abetted by higher education into thinking themselves geniuses, life will be half over for most of them before they realize their mistake. Let us start them out right.

We heard something recently about the help forming a union which may be a good thing for the business and then again it may not. For myself I have grave doubts about it if the same spirit of antagonism and selfishness animates it as seems to be the case in other businesses. I have no objection to any good workman bettering his position if he can, and I think merit should always be promptly recognized, but I cannot see any good in boosting the incompetent man at the expense of his fellows. If a workman's union will devote itself to improving the quality of our help it will be doing a good work and if the help are bound to have a union we ought to minimize the evil of same by encouraging them along that line. Most of you have had experience of what a coal strike means and you can realize the damage that a body of irresponsible, bull-headed men could do on a greenhouse establishment at a critical time. For damage of that kind there seems to be no protection and we will have to prepare ourselves as best we may against this threatened trouble. A factory or mine can shut down without much direct loss but the florist has to keep going or be ruined.

The Peony Committee.

Among the few remarks which I had the honor of presenting to the society for its consideration last year, I included a suggestion for a plan to knit our organization more closely together when special work was required on any particular flower. The method previously followed had been to form a separate society, and I agreed with nearly every president before me in thinking that was not the best that could be devised and suggested that a committee, with power to add to its numbers, should be appointed, say, on the peony as a starter, not that that was the only flower of which good work could be done best, but because the interest in it was on the increase and its possibilities in the florists' business seemed capable of being stimulated for the benefit of the members of our society.

The suggestion having been adopted, it devolved on me to appoint the committee and in that I found some difficulty. I had to cover quite a large field and occupy several months before I could find nine men to serve on that committee. As finally made up the committee consisted of the following: Patrick O'Mara, Carl Cropp, G. C. Watson, John Farquhar, Edwin Lonsdale, J. T. Temple, Peter Bisset, S. M. Meehan and W. R. Smith.

That committee will no doubt make its report to you in due course. I understand there has been a question raised as to the committee's power to add to its number from the omission of that clause from the motion, although the said motion was intended to give effect to my suggestion: "That a committee with power to add to its numbers be appointed." This may have hampered the committee but if the society wishes to continue the work of the committee the defect can easily be remedied at this meeting. A year will not make a great deal of difference to a committee whose work will be continuous and permanent. The difficulty of securing a committee on the peony arose from two reasons, first because few of the S. A. F. members had gone into peonies as a specialty, second because several of the more prominent peony specialists had already pledged themselves to another organization. While disclaiming all thought of rivalry we recognize that there is work of a special nature from the florists' standpoint, which our organization can do for us better than the other, which seems to be under the wing of the nurseryman's society.

I would also suggest for consideration at this meeting, the wisdom of appointing similar committees for the iris and the phlox. Both of these families have a future before them and we want all the information we can get that will help the florist in extending his business along these lines.

In regard to nomenclature I would again suggest the advisability of reviving that committee. This matter was recommended by the executive committee at its meeting in Milwaukee. The good work accomplished in the past leads to the belief that such a committee has a permanent function in our society, both preventive and remedial, and I would strongly recommend to the individual members to call the attention of this committee (if appointed) to all instances of duplication or renaming that come to their knowledge. It is of very little encouragement to a committee of this kind to be told that they have not corrected an abuse when the individuals who suffered never took the trouble to call their attention to the matter.

Executive Committee's Work.

The executive committee had several important matters before it at the annual meeting in Milwaukee which will come before you in the regular order. Of special importance I consider the arrangement instituted for the meeting of state vice-presidents for the purpose of getting in closer touch with each other and with the society. The wishes of each state as to next incumbent can be more readily ascertained by this means also, and I look for good results in various ways from this innovation and trust each vice president will be on hand.

Another important subject discussed was how to have the business sessions better attended. This resulted in the appointment of a sergeant-at-arms, who, with his assistants, is required to see that all members who can do so be induced to attend the meetings and postpone the discussion of personal or business matters to a more opportune time.

This is no new problem, being as old as civilization. We read of the scheme which the ancient Greeks adopted, a rope covered with wet paint stretched from side to side of the street in the hands of two stalwart officers, to compel the crowd to attend the public meetings and even in more modern times, among our colonial fathers, the pains and penalties for lounging instead of going to church were severe, but while we are not going to be so drastic, perhaps, in our case we still mean in all seriousness to make an earnest effort to do justice to the able gentlemen who have come so far and who have prepared themselves at great pains to address us. The executive committee wishes it clearly understood that the rule as to having the exhibition hall cleared during sessions is to be strictly enforced; that it is no mere whim of the sergeant-at-arms but an ironclad rule that must be obeyed by all, by exhibitors as well as by visitors.

In conclusion, I take this opportunity of extending sympathy as official head of our society to the families and friends of those of our members who have been called from among us during the past year. To feel the loss of their able assistance and wise counsels in the work we are now doing; what they have done is graven on our memories and in the records of the society and we will ever hold them in affectionate remembrance.

Secretary Stewart then presented his annual report, as follows:

Report of the Secretary.

Again we assemble as a society, to sum up the doings and experiences of another year, to draw conclusions therefrom and determine lines of future activity; as individuals, to meet congenial friends and renew old friendships, to gain knowledge and enlarge our minds by contact and intercourse with the foremost representatives of our profession.

It becomes my duty to make report to you of our transactions and our progress as an organization, since the hour of our adjournment one year ago, when we said good-bye to beautiful Biltmore and voiced in vociferous chorus our gratitude to the good and faithful friends we had found in Dixie land.

The story of our Asheville convention is told in a book of 210 pages, the largest annual volume ever issued by the society. Its contents established the fact that our meeting in the south compared favorably in all respects with its predecessors, that the accompanying exhibition, although of moderate size, was comprehensive and creditable and that the customary pastimes and entertainments were fully enjoyed.

The list of the year's plant introductions in America as recorded in the annual report comprised nineteen cannas, seventeen carnations, forty-seven chrysanthemums, ten roses, four geraniums and eighteen miscellaneous plants, doubtless a very incomplete list but the best possible with the data at hand. Unquestionably, full and authentic statistics on this line would prove of great service for future reference.

During the past year our florists have been confronted with an unusual measure of harassing conditions demanding alert vigilance on the part of the national society. The extortionate prices exacted for greenhouse glass, the notorious coal famine and the advance in express tariff on flowers may be cited in particular as inflicting direct injury upon the florists' industry. On two of these matters special committee reports are due, hence a brief reference to them will suffice here. Numerous letters from the secretary's office to influential florists, seeking to stir up a movement in favor of congressional action on the glass question, met with a depressingly scant response. A remarkable evidence of indifference on the part of the florist trade outside of the society's membership, which I feel should go on permanent record as a modern repetition of an oft-told story, was furnished after our successful encounter with the express companies. Immediately upon the rescinding of the high rates, letters were written by your secretary to the numerous florists throughout the country—who had been appealing to the S. A. F., through trade papers, petitions, protests and letters, for relief—announcing to them the happy outcome of our agitation, reminding them that this could not have been accomplished without organized effort and asking that they become members and supporters of the organization in recognition of its substantial services to them. Just one response was the net result.

The executive committee met in Milwaukee on March 17 and 18, seven members being in attendance, and their reception by the Chicago and Milwaukee brethren was generous and cordial. The various departments of the society's affairs were scrutinized, suggestions as to our future welfare fully discussed and progressive measures adopted with a view to bringing every feature of this Milwaukee meeting up to the highest standard. An innovation which will doubtless find occasion to speak for itself and demonstrate its utility during the next three days is the appointment of a sergeant-at-arms with two sturdy assistants whose functions are to see to the enforcement of the rules appertaining to the exhibition and maintain order in and about the hall and anterooms while the society's deliberations are in progress.

J. J. Beneke, Vice-President-Elect, Society American Florists and President-Elect St. Louis Florist Club.

The list of plants registered in the secretary's office has been added to during the year as follows:

Aug. 25, 1902, Carnations Wingold and Biltmore, by J. B. Trudo.

Sept. 20, 1902, Geraniums Double Dryden, James S. Wilson, Little Red Riding Hood, Governor Stone, Cleopatra and Goliath, by Henry Elchholz.

Sept. 22, 1902, Rose Beauty of Rosemawr, by the Conard & Jones Co.

Oct. 20, 1902, Rose Ideal, by Jacob Becker.

Oct. 27, 1902, Carnation Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, by Leonard J. Stankowicz.

Nov. 10, 1902, Carnation Governor Lowndes, by H. Weber & Son.

Nov. 10, 1902, Rose Canadian Queen, by the H. Dale Estate.

Nov. 17, 1902, Cannas Hiawatha, Chautauqua, Gladiator and Louise, by the Conard & Jones Co.

Nov. 19, 1902, Roses Prof. C. S. Sargent, Wm. F. Dreer, Wm. K. Harris, Robert Craig, Edwin Lonsdale and John Burton, by Hoopes, Bro. & Thomas.

Jan. 31, 1903, Adiantum cuneatum Crowe-anum, by Peter Crowe.

March 28, 1903, Herbaceous peonies Rosalind, Medusa, Crown on Crown, Originality, Harlequin, Daybreak, Cascade, Delight, Felicity, Cathedral, Sunrise, Dragon's Head, Flamboyant, Bonfire, Ebony, Crystal Queen, Fantasy, Marble Faun, Apple Blossom, Mayflower, Cashmere, Cherub, Bacchus, Diana, Gypsy, Fascination and Fireball. Tree peonies Achievement, Wistaria, Icicles, Red Cape, Morning Glory, Panorama, Pink Silver, Red Riding Hood, Frugality, Red Cloud, Blushing Bride, Coral, Snowstorm, Jacqueminot, White Dragon, Eternity, Meteor, Purple Crown, Rose Queen, Dawn, Pink Perfection, Mars, Celestial, Purple Cloud, Serenade, Croesus and Abbess, by Suzuki & Iida.

April 20, 1903, Rose Climbing, Pillar of Gold, by the Good & Reese Co.

July 14, 1903, Canna Lord Charles Beresford, by Henry Morris.

Aug. 1, 1903, Roses Leo XIII. and Northern Light, by Conard & Jones Co.

Aug. 5, 1903, Geranium The Mascotte, by E. Worden.

Aug. 8, 1903, Manda's Golden Privet, by W. A. Manda.

Medals have been awarded since last report as follows:

Nov. 8, 1902, through the Cincinnati Florists' Society, a silver medal to George & Allan for Adiantum cuneatum Georgell.

Dec. 3, 1902, through the New Haven County Horticultural Society, a silver medal to David Kydd for Begonia Kydii.

Dec. 4, 1902, through the Horticultural Society of Chicago, a silver medal to Fred Dornier & Sons Co. for Carnation Fiancee, and a bronze medal to Nathan Smith & Son, for Chrysanthemum F. J. Taggart.

Dec. 14, through the New York Florists' Club, a silver medal to F. R. Pierson Co., for Nephrolepis exaltata Piersoni and a bronze medal to the H. Dale Estate, for Rose Canadian Queen.

Dec. 29, 1902, through the Chrysanthemum Society of America, to E. G. Hill Co., a silver medal for Chrysanthemum R. E. Richardson, and a bronze medal to Nathan Smith & Son, for Chrysanthemum H. W. Buckbee.

March 3, 1903, through the American Carnation Society, a silver medal to L. E. Marquisee, for Carnation Flamingo and a bronze medal to Peter Fisher, for Carnation Mrs. M. A. Patten.

Our total membership as per the printed list for 1902 was fifty-eight life and 820 annual, fifty-three less than for 1901. Nine annual members have since taken out life memberships. Seven have been taken from us by death since our last meeting. Deaths are recorded as follows:

W. A. Bock, Cambridge, Mass., August 19, 1902.

J. J. Harris, Philadelphia, Pa., November 25, 1902.

F. L. Harris, Wellesley, Mass., January 11, 1903.

A. Wollmers, Brooklyn, N. Y., February 25, 1903.

J. W. Withers, New York city, April 13, 1903.

Charles Zeller, Brooklyn, N. Y., June 28, 1903.

A. H. Hews, Cambridge, Mass., July 8, 1903.

The number of new and reinstated members added during the year 1902 was 107, of whom three are life members. In these additions the various states were represented as follows: Connecticut, Kentucky, Minnesota, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Louisiana, Texas and Ontario, one each; Michigan, Rhode Island, Tennessee and Indiana, two each; District of Columbia, Florida, Maryland, and Massachusetts, three each; Alabama, California, Maine, New York and Virginia, four each; South Carolina, five; Georgia, seven; Ohio and Illinois, eight each; Pennsylvania, fifteen; North Carolina, sixteen.

From the foregoing it will be seen that, notwithstanding the disadvantage of having moved our center of activity from the thronged Pan-American to remote Asheville with its scattered constituency, our society is in fairly prosperous circumstances as to funds, membership and general activity along legitimate lines. It is especially gratifying to note that the life membership list is steadily lengthening and its permanent and approaching dimensions where the accruing annual interest amounts to a substantial sum.

We should not, however, lose sight of the fact that, considering the number of people engaged in horticultural pursuits in the United States, our membership is disappointingly small and our sphere of usefulness consequently limited. We should have a life membership of at least 1,000 and an annual list of twice that number. How shall we attain it? Thus far all expedients for acquiring the consistent allegiance of the thousands of prosperous florists of our country have produced but minor results and when such services as we have been able to give this year prove ineffectual, whither shall we turn?

In closing this report permit me to express the hope that the results of this convention will justify all the unselfish, faithful preparatory work which has been done by society officials and the energetic members of the local florists' club whose favored guests we are today.

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

At the conclusion of the reading of the secretary's report Alexander Wallace asked if the peonies noted in the registration were new varieties. The secretary stated that he had no personal knowledge, of these or other plants, simply taking the members' word in such matters. Mr. Wallace asked if it is not a fact that the peonies in question are a Japanese set previously distributed under native names. The secretary replied that if such were known to be the case when notice of provisional registration was given, the member should have given the society the benefit of his knowledge at that time, that the secretary had no option in the matter. Mr. Wallace said he had no desire to attack the secretary, but that the peonies were not competent for registration as they are not, in his opinion, new sorts, and moved that that part of the report relating to this subject be laid on the table until such time as it can be shown that these varieties have not previously been distributed under other names. The motion prevailed and the balance of the report was adopted.

Treasurer's Report.

The treasurer reported as follows:

Cash, Jan. 1, 1902.....	$2,111.11
Receipts	2,519.82
Total	$4,630.93
Disbursements	1,920.16
Balance, Jan. 1, 1903.....	$2,710.77
Receipts to July 31, 1903.....	1,255.00
Total	$3,965.77
Disbursements	1,492.70
Balance, Aug. 1, 1903.....	$2,473.07

In the life membership fund there is $2,223.04.

Judges of Trade Exhibits.

Judges of the trade exhibits were appointed as follows:

Class A—Plants: A. Ferguson, Detroit; Henry Young, St. Louis; W. L. Palinsky, Chicago; H. Papworth, New Orleans; Otto Spiedel, Oconomowoc, Wis.

Class B—Cut flowers: A. H. Langjahr, Brooklyn; Jno. Sibson, Philadelphia; E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati; A. F. Barbe, Kansas City.

Class C—Boilers: Lemuel Ball, Wisconsin; Philadelphia; J. M. Gasser, Cleveland; J. T. Temple, Davenport.

Class D—Appliances: J. S. Wilson, Western Springs, Ill.; W. A. Kennedy, Milwaukee; H. M. Altick, Dayton, O.

Class E—Supplies: W. F. Kasting, Buffalo; C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee; Jno. Westcott, Philadelphia.

Class F—Bulbs: Wm. Currie, Milwaukee; August Poehlmann, Chicago; Jno. Farquhar, Boston.

Communications and Amendments.

Several communications were read and laid on the table and the state vice-presidents' reports were presented and ordered printed without reading. For the legislative committee John N. May presented a report on the matter of express rates and the society voted its thanks for the good work done.

For the peony committee George C. Watson presented a report which stated was no more than his personal statement, the committee not having had a meeting recently. He detailed what the committee had done and stated that it had acted on the supposition that it had "power to add to its number" until the matter was questioned, when it ceased active operations until the will of the society could be ascertained. Patrick O'Mara moved that the committee be continued with power to add to its number and the motion prevailed unanimously.

William Scott, for the committee on closer relations, presented the following draft of an amendment to the constitution:

Closer Relations with Kindred Societies

Sec. 1. Any number of persons, not less than fifty, and not less than twenty-five being members in good standing of the S. A. F. & O. H., who shall be interested in horticulture or in horticultural pursuits, and who represent any particular power or particular branch of horticulture, may be organized as a section of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

Sec. 2. Officers and Government of Sections—The officers of any section shall consist of a president, vice-president, secretary, and an executive committee, composed of the president and secretary, and in addition thereto, three members, who shall be appointed or elected in such manner as may be provided in the by-laws of said section, and such executive committee shall be vested with the government of such section between its regularly called sessions.

Sec. 3. Delegates—Each duly enrolled section having a membership of fifty or more in good standing, of whom at least twenty-five are members in good standing of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, shall be entitled to elect one delegate annually, who shall serve for one year as a member of the executive board with all the powers, rights and privileges appertaining thereto, the payment by the S. A. F. of traveling expenses of such delegate in attendance on meetings of the executive board being alone excepted.

Sec. 4. Annual Dues—The annual dues and membership fees of any section shall be determined and controlled by the members of any section themselves, and will be entirely separate and distinct from their annual dues and membership fee paid to the S. A. F. & O. H. Any member in good standing in any section, shall be entitled to the annual report of the S. A. F. & O. H., but he will not be entitled to a vote or to take part in the deliberations of the S. A. F. & O. H. unless he is a member of that society in good standing.

Sec. 5. Constitution and By-Laws of Sections—Each section shall, in conformity with the aims and purposes and the charter of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, provide for itself such additional officers, constitution, by-laws, rules and regulations, as may be required by such section in the accomplishment of its work, and shall determine the date upon which its annual meeting or exhibition shall be held.

Sec. 6. Annual Report—The secretary of each section shall attend each annual meeting of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, and at such meeting shall present in writing a full report of the proceedings of such section, which report shall be incorporated by the secretary of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists in the annual report of this society.

Sec. 7. Plant Registration—Registration of plants by members of sections shall be effected through the registration department of the S. A. F. & O. H.

Sec. 8. Special Appropriations—The Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists may from time to time pay to any duly organized section in good standing, for its use in furthering its work, such sum as may be voted by its executive board, due regard being had for the number of members, the average attendance, the amount, character and importance of the work being done and the needs of the section, and may at the order of said executive board, contribute for the use of any section, suitable medals, certificates or other awards for new plants of American origin and other products of American skill deemed of special value to horticulture.

Sec. 9. Scientific Work—The services of the regularly constituted legislative, botanical, pathological and the entomological committees of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists shall be at the disposal of any Co-operative Society making request therefore through the secretary of the S. A. F. Any expense appertaining thereto shall be paid by the S. A. F., but a full detailed report of such investigation or other work shall be furnished by said Co-operative Society to the secretary of the S. A. F., and to him only, for the purposes of record.

On motion of W. N. Rudd the matter was referred to the executive committee, if approved by them to take the usual course of amendments to the constitution. The meeting then adjourned.

The President's Reception.

The president's reception Tuesday evening was a great success. Mr. Burton was assisted on this occasion by Vice-President Pollworth, Mrs. Siebert, Mr. and Mrs. Hunkel, Mr. and Mrs. Whitnall and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Beatty, W. R. Smith, Robert Craig, Adam Graham and Mr. and Mrs. Pollworth, Sr. The immense balcony of the Exposition building had been set apart and handsomely decorated for the occasion. Nearly every member of the S. A. F. in Milwaukee honored the president by his attendance. The Milwaukee Club had made elaborate arrangements as to music and refreshments. The Glee Club sang sweetly and often. An excellent orchestra added its quota of harmony. Ice cream and cakes and lemonade were in profuse supply, and a few tripped the light fantastic as the evening's enjoyment neared its end.

The appropriate songs of Miss Pearl Fulmer, of Des Moines, were especially appreciated. Altogether it was one of the happiest evenings in the history of the society.

It was nearly midnight when the last of the guests departed.

Wednesday's Proceedings.

Wednesday morning a number of the judges of trade exhibits reported, but others had not yet completed their labors and the convention proceeded to the selection of a meeting place for 1904. Secretary Stewart read invitations from hotels and business leagues in various parts of the country, and F. J. Ammann spoke for the St. Louis Florists' Club to such good effect that the secretary was instructed to cast the unanimous ballot of the society for St. Louis in the world's fair year.

Robert F. Tesson, of St. Louis, was then introduced and read his paper on "System of Accounts for Greenhouses and Forms for Determining Cost of Production." He illustrated his essay with large sketches showing his system in detail.

The next order of business was the nomination of officers for 1904. Patrick O'Mara, of New York, named Prof. John F. Cowell in a brief speech, and William Scott seconded the nomination. E. G. Gillett, of Cincinnati, presented the name of C. C. Pollworth, ex-Vice-President Deake, of Asheville, that of John T. Temple, of Davenport, Ia., and H. A. Bunyard that of Phil Breitmeyer, of Detroit. Further nominations not being forthcoming, the vice-presidency was taken up, J. J. Beneke, of St. Louis, being the only nominee. Secretary Stewart and Treasurer Beatty were nominated for re-election. Adjournment was then taken to the bowling alleys.

On Wednesday afternoon, while the bowling was in progress, the ladies, and there were a goodly number, were taken out for a ride and shown the beauties of Milwaukee.

At the evening session Prof. F. W. Taylor, chief of horticulture at the St. Louis World's Fair, made one of his characteristic addresses, briefly outlining the scope and purposes of his department. He stated that at no previous exposition has such liberal provision been made for the display of growing stock. Besides the great building there are fifty acres of outdoor space, fully two-thirds of which has already been applied for. Much work has been done, 10,000 roses having been planted this spring, and Mr. Taylor stated that men of the trade who have visited the grounds recently have all spoken highly of the facilities for good displays. He asked that all growers prepare exhibits. The owner is asked to plant his own stock, but after it is established the management will assume all responsibility for its care. Mr. Taylor was given a vote of thanks for his remarks.

John N. May, of Summit, N. J., was called upon for his paper on greenhouse construction and at its conclusion, on motion of Mr. Heacock, he was voted the society's thanks. The session closed with C. B. Whitnall's address on decorating home grounds, illustrated with stereopticon views from photographs by the speaker.

Thursday's Proceedings.

At the opening Thursday morning the remaining reports of judges were presented and the polls were opened for the election of officers. H. M. Altick was then introduced to speak on behalf of the McKinley Memorial League. He said that the observance of McKinley day, January 29, by the wearing of the late president's favorite flower is of greatest value to the carnation and all florists and urged that everyone join the league. He said that he feels sufficient personal interest to be willing to give the movement all of his receipts on McKinley day, 1904. W. F. Gude, of Washington, said that while he appreciates the business opportunity presented, he wished to speak for the sentimental side, and J. D. Carmody urged the adoption of the carnation as the national flower.

William Scott read Alex McConnell's paper on "Modern Methods in Floral Decoration" and on motion of E. H. Cushman both the author and the reader received the thanks of the society. Mr. Scott then called attention to the millions of money expended by the Department of Agriculture for the benefit of the farmer and contrasted it with the meager work done for our trade, representing a large investment and perplexed by many problems of which the average grower has not facilities for solution. He offered a resolution that the society petition congress for sufficient appropriations to enable the Department to take up work for our trade on a scale equal to its importance. The resolution was adopted.

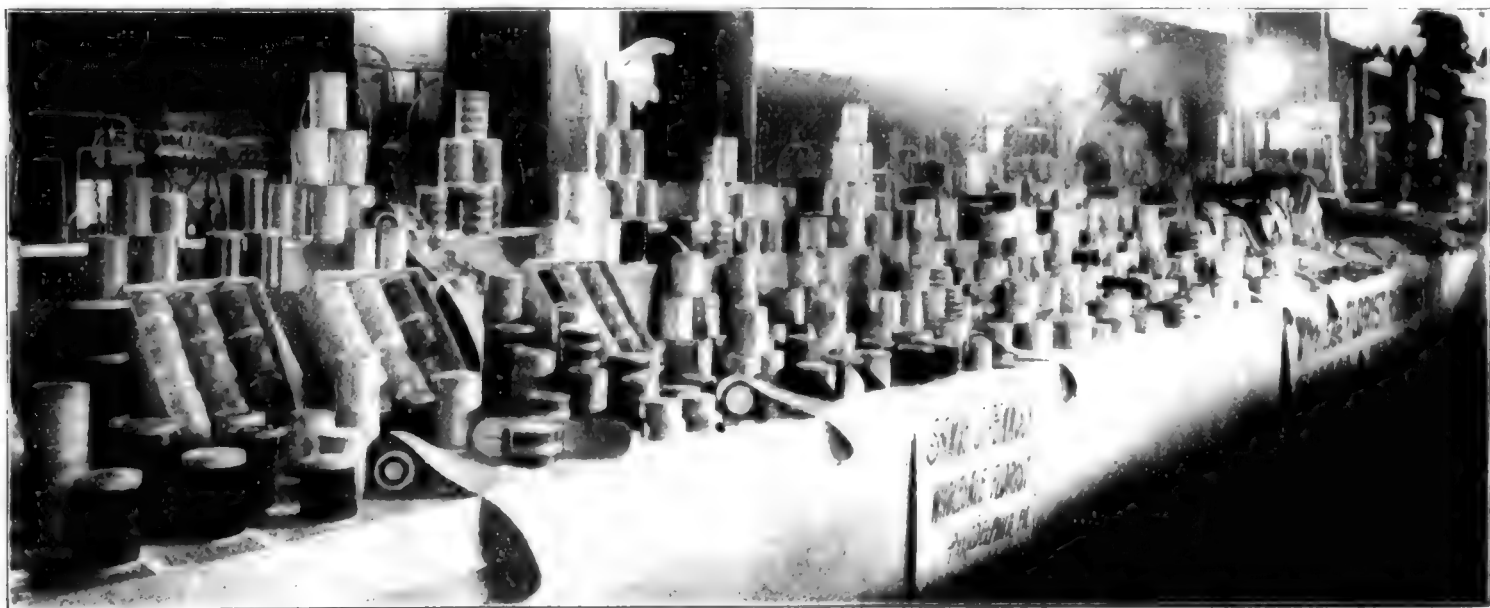

George F. Crabb, of Grand Rapids, read his paper on "Violet Growing in the West" and received the thanks of the society. In reply to a question he said that he prefers benches to solid beds because the former are more under control as to moisture.

E. G. Gillett, of Cincinnati; W. F. Sheridan, of New York, and W. F. Gude, of Washington, were named as a committee on final resolutions.

On motion of E. H. Cushman and P. O'Mara, the matter in the secretary's report referring to peonies was referred to the peony committee, to report.

The amendment to the constitution offered by Alex Wallace, of New York, eliminating certain unnecessary and possibly misleading words from one section was rejected.

The new section on plant registration, offered by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, was adopted on motion of P. O'Mara. It is as follows:

Ribbon Display of S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, at the Convention.

F. R. Pierson Co.'s Exhibit of Nephrolepis Piersoni at the Milwaukee Convention.

Article VI. A registration book shall be kept by the secretary, in which shall be inscribed names and descriptions of new plants, as furnished by the owners thereof, under the rules of the society. Names so inscribed shall be recognized officially as the proper and permanent titles respectively of the varieties as registered and this society shall do all in its power to prevent the subsequent application of any name thus registered to any other plant in the same special class or the distribution of plants so recorded, under any title other than the one thus given it.

On receipt of application for registration, it shall be the duty of the secretary to give public notice thereof, and if, after the lapse of three weeks from date of said application, no protest shall have been filed with the secretary, due announcement of registration shall then be made, but when there exists a permanent committee or affiliating society specially devoted to the interests of any distinct class of plants or flowers, the secretary shall on receipt of application for registration of a plant belonging in such class, refer such application to the duly constituted authorities of such committee or society, in lieu of public notice, and, upon the return of said application regularly approved by such authorities shall make public announcement accordingly. Failure to return such application to the secretary within a period of three weeks shall be construed as approval and announcement made accordingly.

Any protest under the above provisions shall be referred to a committee of three specially appointed by the president of the S. A. F. for this purpose. The committee shall act promptly and their decision shall be accepted as final.

The fee for registration shall be $5, which shall be returned to applicant if registration is not effected, but to all members of the S. A. F. in good standing, the privileges of the department of plant registration shall be free.

Prof. L. C. Corbett, of the Department of Agriculture, told of the efforts made by him to collect accurate data as to the area of glass in the greenhouses of the United States and the meager success of an endeavor to keep track of the increase in glass and the areas devoted to special crops. He asked the co-operation of the society in his work, arguing that the information would be of large value to the whole trade. On motion of George C. Watson the president was given power to appoint a committee of three to assist Prof. Corbett.

The exhibitors put themselves on record in thanks to F. H. Holton for his efficiency and courtesy in the management of the trades display and later they presented him with a little token of further evidence of their appreciation.

In the five-minute talks which followed L. H. Foster, of Dorchester, Mass., spoke for the parcels post. He urged that the society take action in support of the movement, which he believes of incalculable importance to all of us and on motion of Mr. Watson the Postal Progress League was given the society's indorsement, upon which E. G. Hill moved the appropriation of a sum of money to enable the society to join in the movement.

The opening of the question box brought up several pertinent topics, principal among which was the matter of establishing a standard grade for plants and other stock, along the lines of the establishment some years ago of standard sizes for pots. It was recognized as a difficult proposition but after some debate a motion, offered by Hugh Wood, of Chicago, prevailed, instructing the president to appoint a committee of five to see what can be done to fix a uniform grade for plants. E. H. Cushman moved to add to this cut flowers and bulbs, and this motion also prevailed.

The judges of election reported the following as the result of the ballot for president:

Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, 203.
C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, 55.
Jno. F. Cowell, Buffalo, 52.
Jno. T. Temple, Davenport, 24.

Before Mr. Esler could announce the unanimous election of Vice-President J. J. Beneke, Secretary Wm. J. Stewart and Treasurer H. B. Beatty the friends of the successful candidate came marching in with the popular Detroiters on their shoulders and the boys let loose their voices in glad acclaim. When the uproar was stilled and Mr. Breitmeyer had sufficiently recovered his breath he thanked his friends for their hearty support and pledged his best efforts to the society as an evidence of his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him.

Thursday afternoon was devoted to the shooting tournament and the closing session of the convention came that evening when final resolutions were adopted and W. R. Beattie, of Washington, read his paper on "Substitutes for Coal," illustrating his remarks with stereopticon views of the coal and oil fields and drawings showing apparatus for burning petroleum. Mr. Beattie was followed by J. D. Carmody, who discussed one side of the florists' business in a humorous way.

The Trade Exhibition.

A detailed description of the trade exhibits, such as would be necessary to do justice to the subject, would fill many pages of this issue. The following were the eighty-three exhibitors and each one deserves much credit for his display:

Herendeen Mfg. Co., Geneva, N. Y., and Riemer & Radmer, Milwaukee, Furman boilers.

Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y., round and sectional boilers and a model of greenhouse construction.

Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, boiler.

Chadborn Manufacturing Co., Newburg, N. Y., automatic ventilator.

J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind., ventilating apparatus.

Dillon Mfg. Co., Bloomsburg, Pa., section of greenhouse roof and concrete gutter.

A. Dietsch & Co., Chicago, model of greenhouse construction.

John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, model of greenhouse construction.

Geo. M. Garland, Des Plaines, Ill., iron gutter.

Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, model of greenhouse construction, iron gutter and ventilator lifter.

I. N. Kramer & Sons, Cedar Rapids, Ia., metal gutter and iron frame greenhouse.

Leopold Koropp, Chicago, pot hanger.
H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, seeds and glazing points.

A. Klokner, Milwaukee, vase holder.
C. E. Finley, Joliet, Ill., pot washer and Thistleline.

M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, very large display of all lines of florists' supplies.

Jos. Kift & Son, Philadelphia, vase holder and baby cacti.

J. G. & A. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., rubber hose.

De La Mare Ptg. & Pub. Co., New York, horticultural books.

D. B. Long, Buffalo, printed matter.

Engineering & Power Co., Jamestown, N. Y., photos of soil conveyor.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., orchids.

E. H. Hunt, Chicago, large line of florists' supplies.

W. C. Krick, Brooklyn, letters, pot hangers and supports.

Edwards & Docker Co., Philadelphia, paper boxes.

W. J. Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., wired toothpicks.

H. J. Smith, Hinsdale, Mass., ferns and bouquet green.

H. Beaulieu, Woodhaven, N. Y., hose roller.

Thos. Collins, Hinsdale, Mass., ferns and decorative greens.

Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., gladioli.

B. Rosens, Brooklyn, bells and florists' supplies.

H. Thaden, Atlanta, Ga., wire tendrils.

F. F. Benthley & Co., Chicago, Aster Benthley's Perfection.

C. A. Olmstead, East Bloomfield, N. Y., Aster Olmstead's Commercial White.

John C. Meyer, Boston, silkline.

Ionia Pottery Co., Ionia, Mich., flower pots.

J. W. Sefton & Co., Chicago, paper boxes.

Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, palms, ferns, glazing points, etc.; a large exhibit.

P. J. Berckmans Co., Augusta, Ga., Biota aurea nana, palms.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J., palms, pandanuses, crotons.

A. C. Oelschig, Savannah, Ga., ficus.

George Wittbold Co., Chicago, palms and ferns, including some specimen plants.

L. H. Foster, Dorchester, Mass., Nephrolepis "Anna Foster."

Geo. A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill., fine Boston ferns, etc.

Chas. D. Ball, Holmesburg, Pa., fine exhibit of palms.

J. B. Heiss, Dayton, O., palms.

Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., Philadelphia grown palms.

Siebrecht & Son, New Rochelle, N. Y., palms, ferns, etc.; a very large exhibit.

Lemuel Ball, Philadelphia, palms, a good exhibit.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, Lorraine begonias, palms and ferns.

August Jurgens, Chicago, lily of the valley.

Albert Fuchs, Chicago, palms and ferns.

Robert Craig & Son, Philadelphia, palms, pandanuses and crotons, including the new Craigii.

C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, palms, ferns, Araucaria plumosa, wire work, etc.; a large exhibit.

E. F. Winterson Co., Chicago, florists' supplies. (Seven cases of their exhibits were lost in transit.)

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y., Nephrolepis Piersoni; a very fine exhibit.

Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, palms and ferns.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., Manda's golden privet and orchids.

Mrs. R. Mauff, Denver, a nephrolepis sport.

Cushman Gladiolus Co., Sylvania, O., gladioli.

Misses Wilson, Montgomery, Ala., bulbs.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, palms and bulbs.

Clucas & Boddington, New York, bulbs.

Caldwell the Woodsman Co., Evergreen, Ala., wild smilax.

Peter Crowe, Utica, N. Y., Adiantum Croweanum.

H. W. Koerner, Milwaukee, hybrid gaillardias, centaureas and asters.

E. Hippard, Youngstown, O., catalogue of greenhouse construction.

S. Stone, Chicago, flexible steel mats.

H. C. Chessman, Richmond, Ind., adjustable pot hanger.

The Judges' Reports.

The judges, particularly in the plant class, made such favorable mention of exhibits that the reports are voluminous. The certificates and commendations were as follows:

Class A—Plants: Certificates of merit to Siebrecht & Son, Peter Crowe, J. A. Peterson, Lemuel Ball, Julius Roehrs, Robert Craig & Son, C. D. Ball, L. H. Foster, C. C. Pollworth Co., Vaughan's Seed Store, Geo. Wittbold Co., Lager & Hurrell, two to W. A. Manda and three to Henry F. Dreer for novelties. Honorable mention to Holton & Hunkel Co., Albert Fuchs, R. & J. Farquhar, Geo. A. Kuhl, Joseph Heacock and J. B. Heiss. Highly commended, P. J. Berckmans Co., A. C. Oelschig and Mrs. R. Mauff. The F. R. Pierson Co. received special mention, Nephrolepis Piersoni having last year been given a gold medal.

Class B—Cut flowers: Certificates of merit to E. H. Cushman and C. A. Olmstead. Honorable mention to Arthur Cowee.

Class C—Boilers: Certificate of merit to Kroeschell Bros. Co. Herendeen Mfg.

The Plant Display at the Milwaukee Convention, August 18 to 21, 1903.

Some of the Exhibits of Florists' Supplies at the Milwaukee Convention.

Finley, H. C. Chessman, A. Dietsch & Co., Ionia Pottery Co., E. F. Winterson Co., H. Thaden, I. N. Kramer & Son, Dillon Mfg. Co., Chadborn Mfg. Co. and J. A. Evans.

Class E—Supplies: Certificate of merit and high commendation to M. Rice & Co. Certificate of merit to H. Bayersdorfer & Co. Honorable mention to Sigmund Geller, E. H. Hunt, Reed & Keller, J. Stern & Co., Jos. Kift & Son, C. C. Pollworth Co., S. S. Pennock, Roseville Pottery Co. and D. B. Long. High commendation to Schloss Bros., L. Baumann & Co., A. Klokner, E. F. Winterson Co. and Dayton Paper Novelty Co. Special mention to J. W. Sefton Co.

Class F—Bulbs: Special mention to Clucas & Boddington Co. and Vaughan's Seed Store.

The Bowling Contest.

The bowling contest was one of the warmest on record since the pastimes feature became an institution of the S. A. F. conventions. Ten cities were represented and the Olympia alleys proved in all respects admirable and adequate to the occasion. The sport began at 2 o'clock, but it was not until 11 p. m. that the last pin fell in the individual championship contest that followed the team contest. Chicago led up to the time Philadelphia came into action, and then gracefully succumbed to the inevitable. The rooting was loud and continuous and there was "something doing" every minute of the afternoon and evening. Following are the scores:

On Tuesday evening there was a meeting of the Florists' National Bowling Association and officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, Wm. Scott, Buffalo; secretary, P. J. Hauswirth, Chicago; treasurer, J. J. Beneke, St. Louis.

PRESIDENT-ELECT BREITMEYER.

The presiding officer for the S. A. F. convention of 1904 is a native of the city in which he lives and one of the most popular representatives of the younger element in the society. Born in 1864, he received his education in the public schools of Detroit. In 1882 he went to Philadelphia to gain a knowledge of the retail flower business, in the establishment of Pennock Bros. Returning home he went into the store of his father, the late John Breitmeyer, and when he attained his twenty-first year was taken into partnership. The firm now consists of three brothers, Philip, Fred and William. They have a handsomely equipped store at Detroit and 200,000 feet of glass at Mt. Clemens. Mr. Breitmeyer is also interested in the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, at Detroit. He was vice-president of the S. A. F. and president of the Detroit Florists' Club at the time of the successful convention in that city, in 1899.

HAIL ASSOCIATION.

There was a meeting of the directors of the Hail Association Wednesday night and the annual meeting Thursday. According to the report of Secretary J. G. Esler on August 1, 1903, the association insured 18,217,381 square feet of glass. The losses for the year were $4,623.34, which was below the average, but at the date of making the report about fifty losses were in course of adjustment. Since then forty of these claims have been proved, amounting to $6,300. The receipts for the year were $13,987.23 and $4,200 on the repayment of loans. Expenditures were $1,741.93 for running expenses and $5,177.50 for investment. The reserve fund amounts to $11,142.01 and $16,019.25 is on hand for the payment of losses. Secretary Esler will be in Chicago next week.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

There was a meeting of the directors of the American Carnation Society on Wednesday evening. The premium list was adopted, the principal change being the addition of a sweepstakes prize for the best vase of 100 blooms in the show at Detroit, March 2. The treasurer was given a salary of $50 a year and will hereafter relieve the secretary of the collection of dues. The president was instructed to appoint someone in each city where there is a show this fall to report on the exhibits in the carnation classes. At the Detroit convention in March the following papers are expected to be read: "Advisability of having Seedlings Examined Early, Mid-season and Late Before Committees Appointed for the Purpose," by William Scott; "Maintenance of Health, Energy and Vigor in Carnations," by Robert Craig; "The Management of Exhibitions," by W. N. Rudd.

NEW WATCH FOR OLD.

It is seldom that a man is robbed two days in succession, but this unique experience fell to the lot of ex-President Wm. R. Smith, of Washington, this week. Mr. Smith and Robert Craig lost their purses on the train en route to Chicago, and at the Hotel Pfister Tuesday night thieves went through their rooms, Mr. Smith losing some borrowed money and the handsome watch given him by the S. A. F., which was one of his treasured possessions. In an adjoining room were Phil Breitmeyer and Wm. Dilger, who lost watches and money. As soon as Mr. Smith's loss became known Robert Craig fathered a movement to replace it, and before the convention adjourned another watch was presented as a further evidence of the esteem in which the venerable Washingtonian is held.

EARLY IMPRESSIONS OF A GREAT CONVENTION.

Milwaukee is a decidedly northern city, and yet, strange to say, people from the crowded eastern cities, the southern states, and the warm western plains are gasping and wiping their faces for relief. We struck a hot week, but what matters. Of all the cities in the country this is the one in which irrigation of the throat, can be most pleasantly and frequently accomplished. The first session of the meeting not being called until 3 p. m. on Tuesday, allowed time for everyone to get here and be comfortably settled before business began, and, still better, it found at the opening session the immense and attractive exhibit fully staged, the hall cleaned up and all in perfect order. The trade exhibit has never been surpassed, or perhaps equalled, in the history of the society. In plants, bulbs, heating and ventilating appliances, and above all, in floral supplies it is a wonderful exhibit. Never before has there been such an array of baskets, designs of many kinds, beautiful vases, and everything to tempt the eye of those looking for the new and artistic. Many of the exhibitors have brought their wares a thousand miles, showing the faith they have in the business of this and the still farther western country. I hope to have something more to say later about the individual exhibits, for it takes more than an hour or two to look them over.

The attendance is large. How it will compare with the past I cannot say, but the section of the Exposition Building devoted to the opening session was scarcely large enough, and but for the oppressive heat it would have been much too small. Milwaukee has a mayor that I bet is a first-class chief magistrate, and combined with that he is an orator, not only eloquent but humorous withal, and his address of welcome was greatly enjoyed. His assurance that, excellent as is the police force of Milwaukee, in convention week their functions would be more in the line of officers of the Red Cross Society, was highly appreciated, and I noticed ex-President Smith, of Washington, glance significantly at several of the boys as much as to say "You may be thankful for that." It was a gem of a speech.

Ex-President Adam Graham, responded to Mayor Rose, and very happily he did it. Adam is proud of Scotland, the land of his nativity, and reminded the mayor that for the Scotchmen in attendance the article that made Milwaukee famous was not strong enough, if inclined that way at all. If a Scotchman goes to church at all, he goes three times a day, for pious reasons partly and incidentally to get his money's worth.

President Burton was given a most cordial reception when he stepped to the front to deliver his annual address. It was not lengthy but full of good sense. At its conclusion the routine business of the session began, which it is not my province to report.

Exhibit of E. H. Hunt, Chicago, at the Milwaukee Convention.

A Part of the Exhibit of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia.

While some of the large eastern cities might have done much better in attendance, it is compensated for by splendid delegations from smaller central cities, and by just what we expected—hundreds of new members from small towns of the middle west.

We did not see that Chicago train of thirteen cars arrive with standing room only, but if the windows were open, the hot air escaping must have scorched the grass on both sides of the track.

We miss several good old familiar faces, but John Westcott is here with his bowling enthusiasm and famous brand of S. A. F. brew, and that convinces you a convention is on.

Detroit has sent a splendid delegation, and if other towns had done anything like as well, we should have to have overflow meetings.

Vice-President Pollworth is here and there and everywhere and has more than fulfilled all he promised, and does it all with a perennial smile and no worry or fuss. It is evident that the men of Milwaukee have worked hard in making this a memorable and enjoyable convention. And Mr. Holton, the superintendent of exhibits, has had a great chore on his hands and has succeeded.

Dear Baby Foley is not allowed to stand too long in one spot, as the Exposition Building has been built some years.

Phil Hauswirth is working hard to arrange the great bowling match, and what a game it will be. At least a dozen teams will compete, and sixteen fine alleys to roll on. It was considered unfair that Anton Then and Fritz Bahr should both root for Chicago, so Anton has been loaned to Buffalo, and if Billy Kasting's voice gives out he will be needed.

One of the most picturesque features of the convention is six stalwart men from far off Denver, headed by J. A. Valentine, a large six shooter in their belts, a bowie in their boots, but those are common things on the plains. Their hats are the feature—soft grey felt, three feet in diameter. I am afraid if they do not win on the alleys the Red Cross officers will have real work to do.

The President's reception was a brilliant affair and everyone enjoyed himself, renewing old and making new friends, and as I hear the band just striding up "Willie, we will miss you," I shall leave other items for next issue, and in conclusion will say that when President Burton spoke of "this, our nineteenth annual meeting" it made some of us feel old. Eleven of the ex-presidents sat in a semi-circle on the stage and it was such a touching and inspiring sight that I noticed several elderly ladies in the audience wipe away a tear or something. The hall sadly needed ventilation, so no wonder we all used handkerchiefs. WILLIAM SCOTT.

MODERN METHODS IN FLORAL DECORATION.

BY ALEX. MCCONNELL, NEW YORK.

The artistic arrangement of floral decorations for best effect is an important factor and well deserving the study of the professional florist, especially the younger generation, who are ambitious to become proficient in their chosen profession.

A progressive movement in the arrangement of floral effect has been manifest to all observing admirers of the blending of color and the graceful clustering of Nature's most beautiful gifts.

The incongruous massing of flowers regardless of harmony of color, ignoring surroundings where it is desirous to produce an artistic effect, is frequently the cause of failure and disappointing results.

Church weddings of the present day, where the decorator has been given carte blanche, or a liberal remuneration for his material and artistic skill, are certainly an improvement on the decorations of auld lang syne; no reflection on the ability and refined taste of the operator of the past. Lacking the material from which to select for pleasing and beautiful effects, set designs of decapitated flowers entered largely into the arrangements. Specimens of the graceful and stately kentia with its dark, rich foliage, contrasting in color and characteristic habit, with Areca lutescens; the expansive foliage of Lantana borbonica and other natives of the tropics could not then be obtained in stately specimens as today.

One of the most important factors in church wedding embellishment is the proper grouping of the magnificent palms, elevated to the proper height, not in a conglomerated mass, but grouped to show individuality and graceful habit.

In the floral arrangements cut flowers with long stems are now, and should be, used wherever most effective. The sacred altar and chancel decorated with a tasteful profusion of white flowers and Asparagus plumosus; columns or arches garlanded with the same attractive green or perhaps, which is more pleasing in a large hall or church, the glossy foliage of southern smilax, introduced in the north a few years ago and now almost indispensable to the floral decorator.

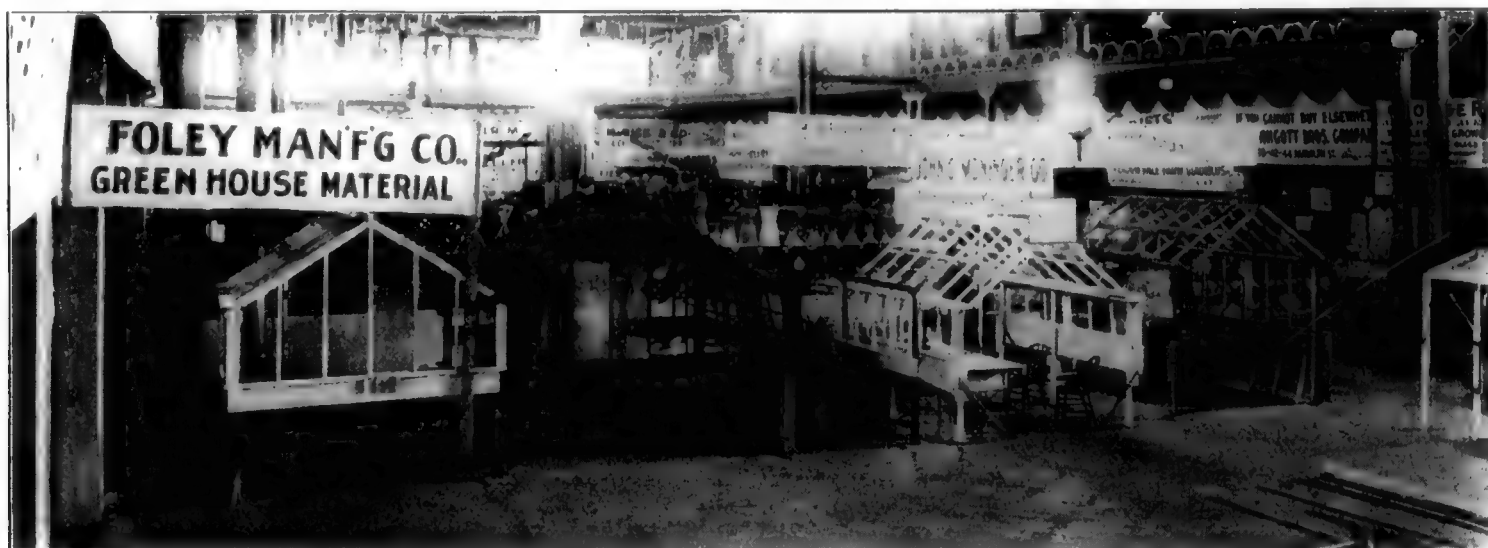

The lycopodium, or Christmas green roping, which was considered very essential in days of yore, is almost obsolete excepting for the Christmas festivities.

The decorators should ever bear in mind to obtain a successful result the treatment of the church should be as pleasing and effective on entering the holy edifice as at the altar.

The decoration of the home for the wedding festivities has been somewhat revolutionized. We seldom behold flowers contorted in such emblems as cupid's darts, bow and arrow, or balls of flowers massed in solids and suspended in some prominent place in the drawing rooms. The ancient wedding bell appears to be the only reminiscence of "Ye olden time" and its apparent fascinating influence on the fair sex justifies the belief that the old emblem may continue to ring joyfully for many moons to come.

In modern treatment of the house the same conditions may be adhered to as in the church or hall. The grouping of the plants, artistically arranged in the parlors in a selected corner, forms a bower, giving sufficient space for the performance of the wedding ceremony and for the bridal party to receive its congratulations. The wire frame in the shape of a canopy, covered with green and wired flowers, has lost its popularity and is now supplanted by the dignified palm.

The banked mantels of growing adiantum, interspersed with long-stemmed roses of one color, arranged in a loose and natural habit, are much more attractive than the ancient formal stereotyped arrangement, where so much wood and wire entered into the construction. Garlands of Asparagus plumosus, or smilax, entwined on mirrors and wherever effective, orchids with stems in water contained in small glass tubes, to prevent wilting, vases of long-stemmed cut flowers of distinct color, harmonizing with the decorations of the different rooms to be treated, are more preferable and artistic than the former everyday basket arrangement, even if the durability of the flowers were the only consideration. It is gratifying to observe there is less ribbon used in conjunction with floral decorations than formerly. While ribbon embellishment is not objectionable sometimes on floral designs, it is somewhat out of character garlanded with flowers and smilax in the drawing room decorations.

The construction or arrangement of the bridal bouquets of previous years was formal and compact. I will not reflect so far to the past as to refer to the camellia and tube-rose bouquets of thirty-five years ago, with a border of bristol board paper surmounted by an edging of silk fringe, but contrast the progress in floriculture of later years.

The introduction and growing of improved varieties of roses, orchids and novelties of every family in flora, all assist the artist in forming the beautiful and graceful bouquets of the times.

Flowers are never more admired, nor do they appeal to us more favorably in decorations of any kind than when arrayed as near as possible to Nature's handiwork.

The treatment of the residence for receptions or dinner entertainments is somewhat similar to decorations for the wedding celebration.

Illustrating the decoration for a modern festivity, we cannot do better than describe in detail one of the many which came under our own consideration.

Groups of palms arranged for best effect were relieved by cut branches of Forsythea Fortunei, Spiraea prunifolia and Pyrus japonica, forced for the occasion, loosely arranged in concealed vases of water. Mantels and mirrors were banked and treated with the same flowering shrubs, all producing a very pleasing effect. Stairways were profusely garlanded with Asparagus plumosus and forsythea, descending to the main floor, where the dining room, library, parlors and conservatory were thrown into one great dining room. The tables, which seated 300 guests, were constructed to order, the center portion built separately, six inches below the outer sides for the placing of growing orchids in pots. With tubs concealed under the tables, the trunks coming through twelve feet apart, specimens of Dicksonia antarctica eight feet in height were utilized, their tropical and graceful fronds producing an admirable and tasteful decoration. Hidden and suspended in the fronds by flexible wires were many glass tubes of water, each containing sprays of cattleya orchids.

Growing orchids embellished the mantels, festoons of Asparagus plumosus interspersed with cattleya orchids beautified the mirrors, and the conservatory in the background, in brilliant colors of potted azaleas, sheltered, as it were, by the overhanging branches of tropical foliage, completed one of the most original and elaborate decorations of the season.

Now, as to the accomplishment of success in these "modern methods," it must be remembered that these results can be attained, so far as artistic effects and charming designs are concerned, without any expensive and elaborate process and with even limited means at one's disposal.

If one has the love of flowers and the soul of the artist within him, as every florist worthy of the name should have, the "modern methods" become a delight and the development of a satisfactory contract an easy possibility. Any intelligent florist can succeed, who gives proper thought and study to his decorative department, and realizes that therein lie the greatest opportunities for his own development and the certain growth of his business.

One must be alert, progressive, ambitious and a student to achieve lasting success in these modern days. With the growth of capital come greater demands and larger opportunities, and to fill the demands of the wealthy, originality, tact and ability to advise must be continually cultivated. There is no limitation to the growth of the taste for, and elaborateness of, floral decorations. Its future will be a giant in comparison with what has been accomplished in the past. There is no "method" of the present that does not admit of improvement, and to be "modern" we must live in the future and grow upward to its inevitable demands.

Should time permit, it would be interesting to look at another side of our subject, and that is the achievements of our time in the decorations of immense buildings, for national events, such as the inauguration of a president or the graceful testimonies of respect and grief when a hero is buried. But this opens up a field that our limited time forbids us to enter. Again, another demonstration of floral decoration flashes across our vision, and we behold what art and nature combined to produce in the glorious floral effects at the World's Fair in Chicago. Now comes another exposition, building at St. Louis, by "modern methods," grander results than were even imagined ten short years ago, and demonstrating to all the world, as it will, that Flora is the American queen, and that in our devotion to her, and in ability to utilize her handiwork, we lead the nations.

It would be an interesting study to consider how, under efficient supervision, the modern methods will be utilized in working out the perfected accomplishments in decorative floral and horticultural achievements, that will make our glorious country in this respect, the admiration of the centuries.

MODERN GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION.

BY JOHN N. MAY, SUMMIT, N. J.

Why I have been chosen to talk to you on this subject is a conundrum to me. When your secretary wrote me some two months ago, asking me to prepare a paper on this subject, I told him that I was not in a position to do justice to it, as I have not any of the so-called modern houses of my own, and have not had time to investigate them properly in other places and so declined to handle it. One week ago I received another letter from him reading something like this: "I like to see your name in the program and am going to put it there, and trust to providence and you, as I have done more than once before—so fire away. Yours, Stewart."

Now the weather is a little too warm to need fire at the present time, besides I do not like the stove hole well enough to go down there to make fires; coal is also too expensive to burn it unnecessarily.

Regarding the sentence, "trust to providence," here he is off his base and the empire should declare him out; because if he had given this subject to one of the florists of that fine old city of Rhode Island you might have had an interesting and instructive paper prepared, instead of a running talk, as must always be the result of any thing written on a train going at something less or more than forty miles an hour—particularly when that train is practically full of florists out for a royal good time, with many of them, though not full in the common term, yet generally pretty merry. So under these circumstances I trust you will not be too severe in your criticisms of my shortcomings in what I may have to say about modern greenhouse construction, because this word "modern" applies to all sorts and sizes of greenhouses, ranging from one of 6x8 all the way to others 50 feet wide by 400 or 500 or 600 feet long, and each and all of these have their especial use and claim to modern construction.

Some are built of practically all iron, or rather steel; others a combination of iron and wood; others again nearly all wood. Which of these is the most desirable, all things considered, is yet an open question.

For the general florist, the first question in building a greenhouse to be considered is the cost, and with many, this is a very important matter, as every additional dollar expended on it means additional yearly cost in interest on the investment; for no matter how you figure it, the money put into any kind of a business should be charged with the interest yearly—whether it may be borrowed money, or ready cash on hand. This brings us face to face with the different kinds of greenhouses most desirable to build.

In deciding this point, the next question that comes up is that of durability in conjunction with first cost. If a house, say, of any given size, costing 50 per cent more when built of the most expensive materials than another built of a cheaper grade of material, but with the same quality of glass in each, if the more expensive one can be safely guaranteed to stand in good order for twice the length of time than the cheaper one will, then it would be a safe investment to adopt the higher priced one as a general rule. But this is another open question, which I, for one, would not like to venture an opinion on. Many of our younger florists will have ample opportunity to judge of this in a few years.

That there have been improvements made in modern greenhouse building within the last twenty years, no one will deny, but not all the changes made in construction can, I think, be called improvements. The adoption of much larger glass, with a corresponding lighter grade of woodwork, producing, as it does, a much brighter light in the interior of the greenhouse, is, unquestionably, an improvement in producing a better and larger quantity of cut flowers during the dull, cloudy months of winter. But, are such extra light houses any benefit for general plant culture—as a general rule, I think not.

Another point of improvement, considered so at least by many, is the size of the greenhouse. It is an undisputed fact that a large volume of air enclosed in a greenhouse can be maintained at a more even temperature much easier than a small volume can; in other words, a house, 8' 30x100 feet, can be kept at a much more even temperature than two houses each 15x100. The two having the same relative amount of glass and volume of air as the one larger one. This is an advantage, especially as the consumption of coal is less to maintain an equal heat in the large house than in the two small ones, hence the reason why some of our live florists are building much larger houses than formerly.

Some will probably ask, what is the best form or style of house to build? This is purely a matter of choice with each one contemplating building, because there are so many different forms in use, and all have their advocates, and as far as my limited observation goes, almost all of them will produce good flowers in quantity.

The system of ridge and furrow built house without any partitions, leaving a very large clear open space, or in other words, a large area covered with glass, certainly has many features to commend it.

In a little trip around among the florists' establishments last winter, I was particularly struck with the fine, healthy growth and abundance of bloom (roses) which I saw in one such a range of greenhouses near Chicago. I considered it at the time the best I saw in my whole trip. There are also very large establishments, practically all built in this style, around Toronto, Canada.

In other sections I saw what is known as the short-span-to-the-south style of house. These never struck me as favorable, for rose growing especially. In fact, I have yet to see where any advantage is gained for any class of flowers or plants by this method of construction and it is certainly the most expensive to heat of any system I know of, having much the largest area of glass exposed to the north.

Another style of house, which is gaining in favor to a large degree, is a very wide house with equal span, each being a separate structure. These are very light and have many points of advantage over the others named above and for certain varieties of roses, such as American Beauties, they are certainly much better adapted, when the side walls are made high enough to allow the walk next to the side wall and with low benches or raised beds from the surface of even height all throughout the house.

Such very wide houses should have a double row of ventilators at the ridge and side ventilators, also to give ample circulation of air in hot weather; and as far as my observation and experience goes should have a pitch of the roof of 34 to 36 degrees; or, in other words, a fall of from 7½ to 8 inches to the foot. This applies to all and every class of greenhouse, whether large or small, for the production of cut flowers in winter.

In conclusion I would suggest that those contemplating adding new greenhouses to carefully investigate each of the different classes of buildings before deciding in every case. I think it would well repay them to see the houses several times and under different conditions of weather, to enable them to form a fair and correct opinion of which particular style of house will best suit their purpose; and remember that soil and location of the greenhouse, combined with proper management, is a very large factor in producing the best quality of flowers.

CHRYSANthemUMS.

Buds.

We are once more arriving at an important period and that is, the time for the selection of the buds. Many growers seem afraid to take what is known as the crown bud, some because they have happened at some time or other to take it too early and lost the flower altogether, and others because they are unacquainted with the bud and its possibilities. The grower for exhibition takes the crown bud on practically all the varieties. He has to take some chances by so doing, but he knows that flowers produced from crown buds are infinitely superior in size and depth to the ones produced from terminals.

Many commercial growers have an idea that if they take buds in August the flowers will come much earlier. There may be some difference in the times of flowering between crowns and terminals but it is hardly worth considering and in fact with some varieties the terminal bud will open first. I have taken buds on Robinson, for instance, on August 21. These were of course crowns, and I have taken terminals the 12th of September and had the flower from the terminal bud cut on October 18, while the flower from the crown bud was not ready until October 23.

The flowers from the crown buds were worth more than double the price of the others, because while the later growth had been making stem and foliage the crown bud had been laying up to itself treasures of petals so that when the flowers developed the early bud had produced a flower more than twice the size of the others.

An argument against the taking of the crown bud with some growers is that the plants make a long, weak neck which is unable to hold the flower erect. This is true in some cases, but it is almost always the fault of the grower himself. When a man crowds his plants on the benches so that the growth is long-jointed and sappy, he will always get a long neck to his flowers, but if the plants are grown right, that is, given a reasonable space to develop in, with lots of ventilation so that they will make a short-jointed, hardy growth, there will be no trouble about the long, bare neck. There is a time and place for everything and while we may admire a long, graceful, swan-like neck when it is attached to a charming girl in a fashionable ball-room, we do not like to see Mrs. Robinson with a neck so weak that her head is falling over onto Colonel Appleton's shoulder when they are growing together on the greenhouse bench.

Some few varieties do have a weak stem, but they are kinds that are handled only by the exhibition grower, such as Madam Carnot, Durbin's Pride and so on, and the chief reason they fall over is because they make such enormous flowers.

Some wholesale growers catalogue varieties in what I think is a misleading manner, thus: Take first crown on such a variety. Now it may happen that a bud will be produced in June or July and this would certainly be a first crown. I have often seen buds taken too early where the grower was more or less of a novice and was interpreting the information he read literally, whereas had the information read: Take first crown after August 15, he would not have blundered.

If a grower does not plant until very late and he wants late flowers he never takes the crown bud, but encourages the plants to keep in a soft growing condition as long as possible and every bud is rubbed off until he sees by the cluster of small buds that the plant will not make any further growth and he must use that bud. These buds of course produce flowers much later than crown buds would have done because they have been grown differently and are kept very cool and consequently mature slower and better. When crown buds and terminal buds are taken on the same batch of plants, the terminal bud will be rushed too much if the house is kept sufficiently warm for the proper development of the crown bud, which requires a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees.

How the term of "crown" bud originated I have never been able to find out, though it is as good a name as any so long as it is generally understood. A crown bud is always known by the third or fourth growth shoots that appear around it and which, if not removed when in a very small state, soon rob the bud of its sustenance and spoil it. Where the crown bud is showing too early it is removed, and the best of these growths is retained to go on and grow along, and this in due season produces another bud, crown or terminal as the case may be.

The terminal bud is so called because it is the terminus of growth and instead of having the growth shoots clustered round it has several small buds surrounding the larger central one. This large center bud must always be kept because the plant will not make any further growth and if the bud be rubbed off as the previous ones were no others will form and the crop will be a failure. I have tried to be explicit in these remarks, showing how to tell the difference between the buds, because every year I get considerable correspondence from people on the subject which shows that there is much confusion in the lay mind as to which is which. The expert grower scans these notes on buds and perhaps wonders who in this twentieth century doesn't know a bud when he sees it, and yet many people not so well posted cannot understand the crown bud, because the plant if left to itself grows on and on until the flower is finally produced from the terminal bud. It is just one instance where man's interference improves on nature.

The great bulk of the midseason varieties come all right from the first bud produced after the 20th of August, that is to say in these northern latitudes where the plants are grown under glass. There are some few exceptions, Colonel Appleton, for instance, not because the flower will not develop from an August crown, but because a later bud to my mind produces a much more pleasing flower, the earlier bud being so crowded with petals that the flower is rough and shapeless. The "topknot" so familiar to growers of Appleton does not appear when the later bud is used.

It used to be our practice to use a late bud for all the pinks, but varieties are changing and such varieties as Lady Harriet, Mrs. Coombes and Mrs. Barkley produce just as good colored flowers on crown as terminals with the added advantage of coming very much larger. Many of the varieties of European and Australian origin are of little use taken on any but crown buds. Nellie Pockett, which is a great favorite, is useless from the terminal, while the crown bud produces a lovely flower. The new Mrs. T. W. Pockett is much the same, this being one of the most exquisite varieties ever sent out. On all of the Australian novelties which created such a sensation last fall the buds should be secured now as early as possible.

The operation of disbudding should be done in the early morning while the young shoots are soft and brittle. Then they break off easily without injuring the tiny bud. Hold the stem close up to the bud with the one hand and pick out the shoots with the thumb and forefinger of the other. All of these shoots should be removed at the earliest possible moment so that the energies of the plant are kept concentrated directly on the bud.

Personally I always use the thumb nail, but perhaps there is no need for the average grower to do such fine work as that. Some growers leave a reserve shoot for a few days to make sure that the bud is perfect, but ordinarily there is not much need of this precaution unless grasshoppers happen to be plentiful. They delight to 'behead the bud or, in sportive mood, will playfully nibble away half of it and then the grower later on finds to his disgust that his flowers are coming one-sided.

As the crown bud swells it develops into a hard, husky-looking lump, that looks like making anything but a fine flower, but patience will be richly rewarded.

Some varieties, like Eaton, open up and have a cup shaped hollow in the center. With these varieties spraying overhead must be discontinued early or the water will lodge in the bud and cause it to rot, but common sense only need be exercised in their management.

BRIAN BORU.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Last year I said in these notes that after you finish planting in your carnations you should pot up from 5 to 10 per cent as many plants as you benched so that you can replace those that may die out. I hope you did so last year and if you did, you likely did the same this year. No doubt you remember how unsatisfactory it was when you tried to replant a plant here and there direct from the field. They suffer just as much as the whole bench did when you first planted and to run around and dot your beds with sheets of paper every morning and replace them every few minutes on windy days is no pleasant job. After the plants are in pots from two to four weeks you plant them into the beds here and there and they will go right on growing and never wilt a leaf. Of some varieties you may not lose 1 per cent, while on others you may lose as much as 10 per cent, and after you become acquainted with the varieties you will be able to tell pretty nearly what you are likely to need to replant. Of course it will depend as much on the soil and the handling in general, but you will know which varieties transplant easily and which ones usually suffer a great deal.

This has been almost an ideal carnation season with us. The nights have been cool and the days only moderately warm. After a rather too dry May we had a moist June which caused the young plants to make a good, strong growth. July was rather dry again, which caused the growth to mature well and all during planting time it remained rather dry and the plants grew slowly and kept in good transplanting condition up to the present date. We had practically finished planting by the 10th and never before have our plants taken hold so quickly and so uniformly. Here and there a plant is gone, but I can safely say that not 1 per cent has gone wrong. Those planted first are beginning to shoot up now and looking over the beds you can see quite a few buds almost ready to open and unless the plants happen to be undersized we will let them come, as there is sale for them even now.

All the shade has been washed from the glass over these and all the air possible is given them to encourage a strong, sturdy growth. As the roots strike out they will enjoy a more liberal supply of water and in fact you can water the whole bed from now on.

About this time it is a good idea to stir a light coat of lime or wood ashes into the soil to help keep it sweet, and in a week or two a thin mulch of half rotted manure will help that first crop of flower shoots to get a start, besides preventing rapid drying out of the soil. We aim to water the plants well in the morning, according to the state of moisture the soil may be in and right after noon on warm days we damp down the walks and syringe lightly overhead and of course water what dry spots there may be. On cloudy days the morning watering usually suffices. From this time on you handle them just as near like you do in winter as circumstances will allow.

Regular fumigating should commence in the houses that have been planted four weeks or more even if you do not see any greenfly. You don't want to wait until they begin to carry away the plants before you begin to fight them, but you should never let them get a foothold on your place. There are other greenhouse pests that will likely bother you, but I will make them the subjects of my notes in the near future.

I do not see anything in the argument Mr. Lambert is putting up in defense of his article on watering carnations in the field in a recent issue of the REVIEW. Now he says he waters when water is needed, though he does not say what condition the plants should be in when the water is needed, but from the tone of his remarks one would judge that it was done only when the plants become very dry and are really suffering for water. That is correct and I have never so much as hinted that in such cases watering should not be resorted to, but I have always said and I say it again that such cases are extremely rare if cultivating is properly done.

In his first article Mr. Lambert said that he watered his carnations outside just as he watered them in the house, when water was needed, which would lead any one to believe after reading his remarks about cultivating that he watered regularly like you would an aster bed or some other blooming crop. That is the kind of watering I object to. I say that as long as you can touch moist soil with the teeth of the cultivator you need not water even while the plants are making their growth and later on about planting time they can get drier than that. We have gone through rainless spells of from four to six weeks without any serious harm, but they are extremely rare. Of course a sandy soil that dries out rapidly will not stand a long spell like that without burning up the plants. I claim that a moderately dry summer will produce better (not larger) plants than even a moderately wet season. Mr. Lambert says he cannot find where he says that frequent watering or excessive rains do not cause stem-rot. Here are his words, can you make anything else out of them? "Believing as I do that stem-rot arises from the composition of the soil and conditions of the fertilizers used and not from moisture, I have always watered my field carnations as I water them in the houses, etc." Mr. Lambert ignored the fact that stem-rot is caused by a fungus and that that fungus is very apt to be present wherever there is decaying vegetable matter, and that while it is kept dry it remains in a dormant state and that moisture will cause it to become active. The fact that he uses very little or no stable manure is one reason why he has no trouble with stem-rot; possibly there are other reasons.

His argument that cultivation will not produce moisture is very weak. Of course it does not produce water, but I claim that in nine summers out of every ten there is enough rainfall to grow good carnation plants if you will manage so that the plants can have the use of what water falls. This can be done by frequent cultivating or mulching, the former being the most practical in the field. I should like to see Mr. Lambert take a part of his carnation patch another year and cultivate it every week at least once and water only when the soil dries out deep enough so he can not turn up moist soil with his cultivator, and see if he does not have a finer lot of carnation plants six weeks after planting them in the house than the ones he watered all summer. The proof in the pudding is in the eating thereof.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

The cold damp nights which have prevailed during August and which remind us of late September weather, are already showing their effects by the appearance of black spot and mildew.

Where the place is of such dimensions as to warrant the keeping of a night watchman these conditions need give us little or no trouble. He can by keeping an eye on the outside temperature so regulate the ventilation that no sudden change of temperature inside may occur. But in the thousands of places where the extent of glass is below 30,000 feet, and where the space occupied by roses may not be even the half of that, keeping a night man during the summer months appears in most cases too big a drain on the prospective profits to be safely indulged in, and the ingenuity and skill required in overcoming these unfavorable conditions at small cost, will be the cause of many anxious hours.

Black spot is usually engendered by some condition which causes a sudden check to root action, thus lowering the vitality of the plants, such as overwatering during cold, damp weather, when evaporation is slow, and which from now on must be carefully guarded against.

On the first appearance of spot the soil in the benches should be allowed to become moderately dry, and all affected leaves carefully picked off and burned, giving plenty of ventilation even at the expense of a little firing, if the evenings are cold, and particularly if accompanied by rain. Any temperature under 56 degrees should be considered cold, for this is the case where "a stitch in time saves nine," for if not suppressed in its initial stage it soon works sad havoc among the as yet tender foliage of Beauty and Liberty, and in bad cases extending even to Kaiserin. When these methods are put in force early enough and persisted in, the disease will usually give little trouble.

Where the disease has a good headway and is so severe that picking off the affected leaves would leave the plants nearly bare of foliage a spraying once a week with the following mixture will stop it from spreading and if persisted in will ultimately overcome it: Carbonate of copper, 5 ounces; ammonia, 3 quarts, and 60 gallons of water, using a nozzle that will make a fine spray. Every part of the leaf should be washed.

If firing has to be resorted to thus early in the season care will be needed not to get the foliage too soft, a condition which is easily acquired, but from which it is difficult to get extricated before the winter begins. This can be obviated by careful watering and ample but judicious ventilation. When necessary to fire up every advantage should be taken of the opportunity to have the pipes painted with the sulphur mixture to hold mildew in check.

I may here take notice of a practice much in vogue among the less experienced growers, viz., that of shutting down for the night at quitting time. This has often the effect of causing the temperature to take a sudden jump of 8 or 10 degrees. This is a practice which ought to be abandoned at once, as it makes the foliage of a soft and flabby nature, ill suiting them to withstand the vicissitudes of forcing. A little extra time devoted to gradually reducing the ventilation till after sundown will be well repaid.

Mr. Scott's advice anent summer firing in his last week's notes are timely and to the point. I entirely agree with him regarding the September crop of mildew and think the grower who welcomes such a visitant must hold a unique position among rosarians.

A few years ago a firm noted as Beauty growers, but whose houses were so situated that the conditions during September invariably induced a crop of black spot, put out a statement in one of our contemporaries that they rather liked this visitor, as it helped to thin out the too dense foliage. I noticed, however, that within the year they went to considerable trouble and expense to overcome these unsatisfactory conditions.

When the foliage is so dense as to exclude the sun's rays from the surface of the bench it is a good plan to remove some of it; but I would rather have it done under my personal direction than leave the selection to Mr. Blackspot, whose questionable industry is frequently difficult to curb.

Such unqualified statements emanating from growers of undoubted skill and ability are dangerous and apt to lead the less experienced into perilous paths.

NEW YORK.

All Aboard for the Convention.

There were nearly 100 happy excursionists at the West Shore rendezvous Sunday afternoon, as we predicted, but not nearly so near 100 as there should have been by a large majority. In other words, when the noses were all counted—and many of the noses shone with the healthful tan acquired at mountain and seaside resorts—it was found that the total number of "souls" present did not quite reach the figures of last year, much to our wonderment and regret. However, a goodly number started for Milwaukee at earlier dates and by other routes, so that the "contingent" when reckoned collectively at the "Cream City" will not be so discreditable after all. The day was ideal for traveling—cool and cloudy—and the comfort of all amply provided for by the West Shore's chaperon, Mr. Louis Haffner, while for the "inner" man and woman, Mr. Walter Sheridan had thoughtfully gathered some of the best the market affords in liquid exhilaration, the good effects of which manifested themselves far into the night. It was a very happy and harmonious family that filled the Pullmans reserved for the New York Florists' Club, and as the journey progressed its numbers increased until the company was completed by the addition of the massive delegation from Boston and the beneficent Peter Crowe, of Utica. I say "massive" advisedly, for Fred Mathison was one of "the old guard" and his charming personality outbalances that of two "ordinary" men.

We missed the pleasant interludes that characterized our trip last year to Asheville. There was no Philadelphia fraternizing, no banquet at Washington, no "angels feet," the novelty of new territory was lacking. All of us had sailed the classic Hudson, had looked upon the glorious mountains, and revelled in the exhilarating ozone of the Catskills many a time before. So we concentrated our magnetisms and proceeded to become "better acquainted." It was a gathering always observant of the proprieties and never forgetful of the day. But after the hour of midnight a few lovers of "revelry" indulged in the harmless pastimes of bridge whist and hearts, and other and similar orthodox amusements, while the majority slept "the sleep of the just" and arose refreshed amid the quiet and purity of Canadian environments. At Kingston, Captain Lang, of the bowling team, joined us, fresh from his mountain farm, and laden with fruit from his "own vine and fig trees." We picked up a good sized fellow at Kingston, Mr. Burgevin, and later on the "Bostonese." Our train was a little late at Detroit, so that the boys who came to the station to greet us were disappointed and our stay was brief.

The perfect weather we find as we journey westward insures a great attendance from towns and cities adjacent to Milwaukee. It seems a pity we could not have gathered in the Buffalo and Detroit hosts, but it was not to be. Each city was ambitious to have a "special" and doubtless both have sent delegations quite equal in size to our own. The ladies who accompanied us were not numerous, but their quality was unsurpassed. Chatterton Warburton added glory to his halo by chaperoning Mrs. Fernley, of Fall River, and his nieces, the Misses Halford, of Lawrence, Mass. The young ladies sang sweetly and won all hearts by their musical contributions. Mr. Oelschig, of Savannah, Ga., was our only "addenda" from the sunny south. Father Smith, of Washington, was among those welcomed at Rotterdam Junction. Everybody was glad to see "the old man eloquent." Boston seemed a little lopsided without Warren Ewell. John N. May was back from his outing in much improved health and was reminiscent in memories of English experiences of the long ago. C. W. Ward and Henry Siebrecht were among the missing.

Those who made up the New York regiment follow:

Patrick O'Mara, Miss O'Mara, E. Schloss, Walter F. Sheridan, H. Bunyard, J. B. Nugent, Alex. Guttman, M. Craw, Emil Steffens, Theo. Lang and J. A. Shaw, of New York; Julius Kretchmar, H. G. Kretchmar, Miss Kretchmar, A. H. Langjahr, Alex. Wallace, Frank Traendly and W. C. Krick, of Brooklyn; W. H. Siebrecht and sons, of Astoria; Julius Roehrs, Jr., of Rutherford, N. J.; A. T. De La Mare, Oradell, N. J.; John N. May, Summit, N. J.; C. Warburton and three ladies, of Fall River, Mass.; W. B. Du Rie, Rahway, N. J.; G. Burgevin, Kingston, N. Y.; Albert Gaedeke, Perth, Scotland; J. F. Wood and Miss Wood, Providence, R. I.; A. D. Carpenter and Mrs. Carpenter, of Cohoes, N. Y.; W. R. Smith, Washington, D. C.; Victor David, Jr., Woodside, N. Various Notes.

President Troy, of the New York Florists' Club, has returned from Europe, after a very enjoyable and profitable trip, and August Rhotert has just departed for the same territory. Mansfield is home from his summer refreshment at Mt. Pleasant, N. J.

Emil Steffens goes to Lake Placid in the Adirondacks next week for a two weeks' deer hunting and trout fishing.

W. C. Krick, of Brooklyn, met with a painful accident last week through the idiotic error of a druggist, who gave him carbolic acid for chloroform liniment which laid him on the shelf for repairs. It was a close call and the application has left its mark for life.

Mr. Rossow, of Thomas Young, Jr.'s, has returned from the Thousand Islands with some weird stories of their fascinations.

Mr. Ward returned last Friday from New Hampshire, much improved in health.

Mr. Plumb was in the city Saturday, after a severe illness of a week's duration, and seems to be himself again. He is cutting 1,500 to 2,000 Brides and Maids daily at his new place in Madison, N. J., his stock being handled by Mr. John Young. Mr. Young reports a marked scarcity in orchids and a constant demand beyond the market supply.

Mr. Ghormley has returned from the Islands and is about ready for the great violet season, which is fast approaching.

The Cut Flower Exchange has leased its present quarters in the Coogan building for six years.

Thomas Young, Jr., had the decorations at Archbishop Farley's reception at the Catholic Club last week, red gladioli and Hydrangea paniculata being lavishly used.

The yacht races began on Thursday. They are expected to exert some influence in "lifting" the market and some speculative florists think they will also lift the cup.

Mr. George Saltford returned from the Adirondacks on Saturday, greatly improved.

John F. Sharkey, of Thomas Young, Jr.'s, and wife have returned from their holiday season, and Miss Ramsey, book-keeper and stenographer of the same house, goes the last of the month for her outing to Atlantic City.

Charles Kerser, head salesman for Herman Kuhn, of Sixth avenue, was married on Saturday and has gone to Sea Cliff for his honeymoon.

On June 24 Arthur Hunt, of Mr. Young's wholesale department, and Miss Annie Johnson were married and spent their holiday in the Catskills.

Bonnot Bros., are receiving some fine roses daily from their place at Flemington, N. J., where 15,000 square feet of the establishment is entirely devoted to rose growing.

Mr. Reed, of Reed & Keller, left last Thursday for Milwaukee to preside at the installment of their trade exhibit, among which will be found eight patented articles of their own invention for florists. They have a fine display of glassware also.

Mackintosh, who saved a fellow from drowning last year, is now credited with five rescues this season. This ought to make business good this winter.

J. A. McConnell, of the Cut Flower Company has had a delightful holiday on board his uncle Alex. McConnell's beautiful yacht, the "Eleanor."

William Sampson has been handling a superb lot of Kaiserins lately from one of his Nyack growers, realizing top prices. Mr. Sampson had a severe experience with a sandbagger a week ago that nearly ended his rose selling. He was knocked unconscious; the doctor took eleven stitches in the wound, and altogether it was a close call for William that will make caution a virtue hereafter.

Arthur T. Rogers, with Ernst Asmus, goes to Belmar, N. J., for his holidays this week.

Percey W. Richters, manager for Mr. Asmus, and Miss Florence Pollard, of Elizabeth, N. J., were married July 22 and spent ten days of their honeymoon in Maine.

James McManus, the wholesaler of West Twenty-ninth street, has made extensive arrangements and preparations for the handling of orchids this fall and winter and anticipates the greatest success of his career during the coming season. If close attention to business and to the interests of his patrons warrants such results, he certainly deserves them.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The trade in cut flowers has not improved much since last reports, but the quality of the stock has, and the wholesale houses are better supplied with good roses from young plants than they have been for some time back. Bride and Bridesmaid are much better and so are Perle, Kaiserin and Meteor are good in color and foliage. Some good Carnot, from Belle Miller, Springfield, Ill., are in the market. The best roses bring $6 and from that down to $1 per 100. Beauty are also much better than they have been.

Good carnations are very scarce and the few that come in are small and short and not of much use for any kind of work. Asters are not good this year, although quite plentiful. Good whites are selling as high at $1.50 to $2, but the bulk of them are sold at $1 per 100. Gladioli are still very plentiful, but meet with very little sale and are sold as low at $2 per 100 stalks. Single tuberoses stalks are fine, with quite a demand at $5 per 100 stalks. Other outdoor stock has very little call. The fine lily of the valley that comes to this market has not much of a demand at present. Smilax is very good, with fair demand. Other greens, such as adiantum, asparagus, galax and fancy ferns are selling well.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The August meeting of the Florists' Club, held August 13 at Brother Jablonsky's place, was largely attended and the members are loud in their praise of the manner in which they were entertained by Mr. Jablonsky and his family. The very hard rain in the morning did not seem to have much effect on the attendance, which numbered nearly thirty. On arriving at Suburban Park Mr. Jablonsky was in waiting and escorted the members to his place a block away. After inspecting his place, which was found in first-class shape, well kept and clean, the meeting was opened by President Dunford with all the officers present.

The transportation committee made its final report, stating that about forty would make the trip to Milwaukee. The committee was continued until next meeting. The entertainment committee reported that out of the fund of $101.50 the committee spent $97.50, leaving a balance fund of $4.

The communication from W. J. Stewart, secretary of the S. A. F., was read and filed. The following florists were elected to membership: George R. Frow, H. G. Ude, F. W. Ude, Jr., Arthur Furber and Joseph Hauser. Frank K. Balthis, of Shaw's Garden, made application for membership. The election of officers then took place. For president J. J. Beneke was elected without opposition. William Winter received the largest number of votes for vice-president and was declared elected. For secretary Emil Schray was elected, and for treasurer, Otto G. Koenig, both being by unanimous vote. The most spirited contest was for the office of three trustees. There were six nominees. After counting the ballots it was found that J. F. Ammann, Dr. A. S. Halsted and J. W. Dunford received the largest number of votes and were declared elected.

A committee was appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of our late member, Theo. Richter. The committee is composed of H. W. Ude, E. W. Guy and J. F. Ammann. The committee appointed to invite the S. A. F. to hold its next meeting in St. Louis in 1904 is composed of J. F. Ammann, R. F. Tesson and Alex. S. Halsted. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $55.20 on hand. The secretary's report showed an increase of membership during the year. The average attendance was fifteen. The club has fifty-seven members, fifty-three active and four honorary.

The question box is becoming quite a lively feature at our meetings and again there was a lively discussion over several important questions, after which the meeting adjourned.

Mr. Jablonsky invited all the members to an elegant lunch, which was spread on the lawn under the trees in front of the house. Mrs. Jablonsky, assisted by Mrs. Steidle and several other ladies, simply couldn't do enough for us in the way of supplying us with anything we wanted to eat, drink or smoke. The August meeting will long be remembered by those who attended, and those who didn't will surely regret it after they hear what a good time we had.

The next meeting of the club will be held in Edwardsville, Ill., at Brother Ammann's fine place, on September 10. At this meeting the installation of officers will take place and we hope for a large attendance to greet the new officers as they take their seats.

Visitors in Town.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, is in town on his way to Milwaukee. Henry T. Moon, of the W. H. Moon Co., of Morrisville, Pa., is looking up space at the World's Fair grounds. A. S. Halstedt, E. W. Guy and Adolph Fehr, of Belleville, Ill., J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., F. W. Ude and William Winter, of Kirkwood, Mo., were in town to attend the club meeting.

St. Louis to Milwaukee.

The St. Louis delegation left here on Sunday night at 9:05 via Wabash and arrived in Chicago on Monday morning at 7:30. In this party were the following florists: Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Juengel, Mr. and Mrs. John Steidle, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Meinhardt and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Beneke, Mr. and Mrs. Max Herzog, George Waldbart, John Connon, C. A. Kuehn, Theo. Miller, F. M. Ellis, J. F. Ammann, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Guy, R. F. Tesson, Wm. Adels, Otto G. Koenig, Emil Schray, Mr. and Mrs. Kruse, Vincent Gorley and Adolph Fehr. The following party went by the Illinois Central R. R.: A. S. Halstedt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Berning, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Weber, Misses Adel and Dora Weber. The whole St. Louis delegation spent Monday in Chicago and left Tuesday morning for Milwaukee. J. J. B.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business, of course, is very dull; it always is at this season, and there will not be much stir until about Thanksgiving. There will be some business before, but not any great amount, and with the chrysanthemum glut coming, there will be lots of hard work and not much profit for some time to come.

We have had a very cool and quite wet summer. Outdoor flowers are fine and the early fall flowers blooming earlier by three weeks than usual. Good roses are quite scarce, also pinks at present. Asters are abundant and good. Sweet peas have been knocked out by too much rain. Reports from the growers are encouraging for a good supply of everything for fall and winter.

Various Notes.

G. O. Westcott died quite suddenly August 8, aged 72 years.
W. B. Hazard is forced to move again on account of the building coming down. However, he remains in the same block.
M. Macnair & Sons have been remodeling their store with new fixtures, etc., also an alteration sale in progress.
T. F. Keller has returned after a month's rest at the seashore.
A. M. Rennie, of Rennie & Pino, seedsmen, is expected home from Europe soon, after two months abroad.
S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., was in town the past week. He is very busy building a large new stable and boiler house, besides remodeling and adding several new houses to his already large plant.

The J. A. Budlong & Sons Co. has added one new house, 58x350 feet, also changed over four large vegetable houses, all to grow carnations, of which they will grow about 75,000 this season, with three 700-foot houses in roses. They will market in Providence and Boston and probably some in New York.
J. F. Wood and wife and Robt. Greene, of Warwick, are about all that are going to the convention from here.
F. J. Sullivan is building a new glass front at his greenhouses.
T. O'Connor is building a large boiler-house. R. I.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There has been very little going on in a business way this week. For some little time the local retailers have been complaining that trade was not up to last summer and in the last few days shipping requirements have not been as heavy as the wholesalers think they should be. The call is usually for a few Beauties, Liberties or Meteors, all scarce items, but good Brides and Maids are salable at good figures, 6 cents being paid for some of the best stuff cut from old plants. The cut from young stock is steadily improving but is not yet large. Indoor carnations are pretty well over but outdoor stock, short-stemmed, is plentiful. Asters are in heavy supply, but the quality of most of the receipts is away below par. The low grade stuff is hard to sell at any price but special, long-stemmed stock with good flowers sells all the way from $2 to $3 and is in good demand. White is scarce. The auratum season is nearing its end, some growers being already out, but there is still plenty of stock. There are some fine gladioli and good dahlias are at hand, but not selling any too well.

Various Notes.

Chas. Erickson is still cutting some very fine Brides and Maids, not having as yet thrown out his old stock. He is going into carnations exclusively next year.
E. C. Amling says that the supply of Asparagus plumosus strings was probably four times as large the past season as the one before. The demand shows a steady increase and he is looking for good business on this specialty this fall and winter.
A. Lange and family returned August 13 from a couple of weeks at Mt. Clemens.
The Foley Mfg. Co. is getting out a new and powerful ventilator lifter and a new shaft hanger.
The florists have been taking active part in the West Madison street fair. In the wagon parade C. Frauenfelder, H. N. Bruns and Mrs. E. Anderson each had finely decorated turn-outs.
Frank Garland had a deformed auratum stem the other day bearing twenty-four flowers.
A new front is being put in Walter Kreitling's store during the repairs on the structure, ordered by the city.
E. S. Thompson, South Haven, Mich., is exhibiting good gladioli at Randall's, Park Belle and seedlings.
The express service in and out of Chicago is threatened with a strike of the office and depot employes of the companies, who say they will go out unless granted higher pay and shorter hours.

A. L. Randall has been over from his Michigan farm, called by the ill health of Mrs. Randall.
L. Lockyear, of Frank Garland's, has been on the sick list.
Robert Northam has been helping out at Deamud's while Alex. Newett was away on vacation.
Wm. Kyle, of Kennicott's, has been at Kalamazoo, visiting his father, M. F. Kyle, with the Dunkley Floral Co.
Frank Garland is building two cottages for the help at Des Plaines.
Among the visitors last week, on business or pleasure bent, were Hans Tobler, of the Northern Michigan Asylum, Traverse City, Mich.; N. H. Youngberg, Lindsborg, Kan.; H. D. Caldwell, Danville, Ill. This week the town has been full of convention visitors.

On Monday evening St. Louis and Chicago had the bout at bowling which invariably takes place whenever the representatives of either city visit the other. Chicago won three straight. Following is the score:

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

With such fine weather we, who must stay at home, have nothing much to complain of.
Business is still very slow, although some of the stores last week had a bunch of funeral work. T. M. Ulam & Co. seemed to have a little the best of it in that line.
The glut of asters and gladioli is still with us; the wholesale house is crowded with stock all the time.
The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is getting in some very nice Maids, Brides and Liberties for this time of the year.

Notes.

Last week the common salutation was "Are you going to Milwaukee?" and it evidently had some effect, as there was a delegation of eighteen left Pittsburgh Sunday at 6 p. m., to arrive at Milwaukee at 7 a. m. Tuesday. The route is P. R. R. lines to Cleveland; Cleveland to Detroit by boat; Detroit to Grand Haven by rail; Grand Haven to Milwaukee by boat; fare $17 for the round trip. This will be much more pleasant than going straight through by rail.
J. F. Gibbs, of Allegheny market, has closed his stand for the summer and his daughter, who manages his business there for him, is traveling and enjoying herself until business starts in the fall.
John Baldinger is rusticiating at Avalon and fishing on the dam. He says, "It is good fishing, but poor catching."
Abraham Hostetter, of Manheim, Pa., was one of our visitors this week on his way to Iowa; but he expected to get to the convention.
The genial Ringier, of Barnard & Co., Chicago, was in town this week, having returned from Bermuda. Look out for him or he will sell you something.

And then we saw quiet Martin, Bayersdorfer & Co.'s representative, with his big cigar and his quiet "That reminds me," and then you know!

Albert Herr, of Lancaster, was seen here today on his way to the convention. Hoo-Hoo.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Still another week of fine, moderate summer weather, and now it looks very much as if this season would pass without any sultry weather at all. There has been very little rain, but owing to the moderate temperature, flower beds and outdoor stock in general, are in very good condition.

Business is rather quiet. The demand is very light and white flowers are about all for which there is any call. Shipping trade is very good for the season and this helps out a great deal.

The supply of nearly all varieties of stock still remains quite good. Roses, especially short-stemmed ones, are in large supply. White and light pink sell well, but Maids are a drug. Good long-stemmed roses are few and sell out quickly. There is quite a demand for American Beauties, but the supply is very limited.

B. P. Critchell is cutting some of the finest Brides and Maids that are coming into this market. They are long-stemmed, with clean foliage and good sized, well-colored buds. They sell quickly and at top prices.

Carnations are still very scarce and poor in quality. As might be expected, there is a large demand for them and notwithstanding their looks, they go at good figures. Some of the pink ones are good and bring 2 cents readily.

The supply of asters is diminishing very rapidly. The early varieties are very nearly cut out and Semple's Branching are not yet ready to cut.

There are a good many tuberose and they sell well. Gladioli also find a ready market. Some first-class spikes are being handled. There is a limited supply of lily of the valley which is of very good quality. Water lilies are seen now and then, but there is not much sale for them, except for show window purposes.

There is plenty of greens of all description and it sells fairly well.

Notes.

There was a fine display of plants and flowers at the Cartridge Fair last week. J. T. Conger, of Sunnyside greenhouses, Hartwell, Ohio, capturing most of the prizes.

Fred Gear and family have returned from their summer outing and say they had a fine time.

Geo. Tromey, who is with Fred Gear, is treating his friends to 10-cent cigars. It's a little girl and George is receiving the congratulations of his friends.

The Cincinnati party left for Milwaukee, Monday evening, numbering about sixteen. All were in the best of spirits and anticipated a most enjoyable trip. With the Cincinnati party were many other florists who joined them here. Among them were: Mr. and Miss Deake, of Asheville; Miss White, of Lexington, Ky.; Messrs. Papworth, Valdejo and others, from New Orleans.

C. S. Ford, of Philadelphia, Pa., was a caller. C. J. OHMER.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Although business was very slow during the first few days of the month, it now appears to be picking up and the cool weather has had its beneficial effect upon stock generally. It is the general comment on all sides that, with the exception of a few warm days, we have had a very cool summer. This seems to have helped everything, with the exception of Meteor, which is inclined to come very dark in color where no fire heat is being used. Many small weddings have made considerable demand for pink and white roses, while the demand for table cut flowers has kept up well.

Notes.

Toronto is at present making special preparations for the great Dominion Exhibition which is to be held here during the first two weeks in September. This should be especially interesting to the horticultural trade, as the C. H. A. meets during the first week and a special trade exhibit is to be put up at the exhibition. We hope to see many of our American friends with us at that time and can promise them a "Milwaukee" time.

Sinclair's commission house received the first shipment the other day of carnation blooms off young stock. They came from C. Turp, of this city, and consisted of Lawson and other leading varieties, cut off indoor grown stock.

For early mums, we believe that R. Jennings, of Brampton, leads, as he cut his first this week.

Charles Tidy returned from a month's fishing trip and reports lots of bites, but refrains from making any more definite statement.

S. MacFadden, foreman for S. Tidy & Son, is on a two weeks' vacation.

D. J.

MONTREAL.

There is no improvement in the trade, yet enough is done to keep us alive. The weather, dull so far, seems to be clearing up a bit. Cut flowers are scarce all around, excepting outdoor ones. Fine asters are seen in some localities.

The members of the club at their last meeting received with pleasure, a written invitation from T. Manton, president of the C. H. A., to attend the convention at Toronto, September 2. Many of the boys have signified their intention to attend.

The prospects for our chrysanthemum show are all right so far, and prizes are promised to be paid in full. Any variety not yet disseminated is eagerly sought for. Mums are making great growths; some new varieties are promising well. A new white delphinium has been raised here by H. Drennan.

A. T. Copperthwaite, of Outremont, is now a member of our club, being duly elected at the last meeting.

William Hazel is on his third honeymoon. He is well pleased with the thanks of the club for his zealous work in behalf of our picnic.

P. McKenna & Son have torn down all their old houses and barns and opened their store at the corner of Guy and St. Catherine streets.

S. S. Bain is erecting a double carnation house, 200x40 feet, with iron gutters. His American Beauties are looking fine since they are benched.

Hall & Robinson, of Outremont, are also building some houses of King construction. We are waiting to see the snow and how they will work then.

Joseph Bennett has housed all his carnations. Those from the field are a bit larger than those planted in benches this spring. A selected, new variety of mums are on trial there. His Nephrolepis Piersoni are just grand.

J. Doyle is expected at Montreal in the near future. His place in the club has never been filled since he left the city. A. BEE.

CROMWELL, CONN.

One of the most attractive houses on the place at present is a house of the new yellow rose, Frank Deegen. It has most certainly given every indication thus far of being a profitable rose from the commercial standpoint, and it is a rose which is popular with the flower buying public, judging from the call for it by the retailers. It has shown some tendency to black spot, but this disease can be controlled very easily with this variety and its susceptibility to it is not great enough to make this weakness a serious defect.

The first Beauties have been cut and in quality they are the finest we have ever cut at this season of the year and the house, as a whole, is in excellent condition to produce high grade flowers. This house was planted about the first of May and has been practically free from black spot thus far. A second house of Beauties, benched early in July, will give small returns before December.

The finest rose of the season everywhere seems to be the Kaiserin, and with us it is a very popular summer rose and a house of it in full crop is one of the attractions on the upper place.

On the lower place two very fine houses of Adiantum Farleyense attract the most attention, but the numerous chrysanthemum houses give promise of a wealth of beauty in the fall.

Asters are coming in now and meeting with a ready sale. These have been grown inside and are far superior to those grown in the field.

The carnations are planted with the exception of one house, which is being remodeled internally. Solid beds have not given satisfaction and narrow wood benches are being substituted.

The new barns are nearing completion and the raising of beef cattle with the manure for our composts in view, is not in the far distant future.

Coal continues to arrive by the vessel load and there is no danger of this place being injured by the situation in the coal regions for at least a year or two.

W. R. PIERSON.

LINCOLN, ILL.—Good progress is being made on the addition to the establishment of W. H. Gullett & Sons and the new houses will soon be ready for planting.

FOND DU LAC, WIS.—E. Haentze is building three houses 14x274 using one run of Jennings' gutter and one of the new Dietsch patent "U" gutter.

TOLEDO, O.—S. N. Peck is building one more house for carnations. Mr. Peck expects to be at the convention.

PLEASE discontinue my advertisement of field-grown carnations as I am getting more orders than I can fill.—HENRY BAER, Peoria, Ill.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

THE Southern Nurserymen's Association was in session at Winchester, Tenn., August 19.

SILAS WILSON, of Atlantic, will have charge of the Iowa horticultural exhibit at St. Louis.

J. C. HALE, Winchester, Tenn., says he has four million peach trees for delivery next fall and spring.

THE Mankato Nursery, C. R. Brooks, manager, is to be removed from Mankato, Minn., to Little Falls, Minn. They also have a nursery near Darling, Minn.

A NURSERYMAN will have to have a license to do business in the State of Virginia after September 1, but the American Association of Nurserymen will test the legality of the law.

W. R. RUSSELL, of Vermilion, S. D., has a nice stock of trees and shrubs but finds a local market for more than he can produce and supplies the demand with material from wholesale nurseries.

THE Ann Arbor railroad is building a system of big hotels in the northern Michigan summer resort region, the sites including many acres and requiring more or less landscape work.

F. B. ORTON, whose nursery eight miles south of Kiowa, Kan., is not so very old, reports business increasing largely each year. He expects his total output next year will be not far from a million trees.

ORLANDO HARRISON, of Berlin; Charles M. Peters, of Snow Hill, Md.; Wesley Webb, of Dover, and A. W. Slaymaker, of Camden, Del., were among the nurserymen present at the field meeting of the Maryland State Horticultural Society, at Salisbury, August 6.

J. G. HARRISON & SONS, Berlin, Md., have budded about 5,000 peach trees with a variety called Ray for W. F. Allen, of Salisbury, who obtained it from a friend in Mississippi. It does not seem to be on the market but is especially suited to a light, sandy soil.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market is very quiet now. Asters and dahlias are plentiful; there are a good many gladioli; sweet peas can still be had of fair quality; valley is rather poor. Japanese hydrangeas (Paniculata grandiflora) have made their appearance most decidedly, and in a way that is very acceptable to makers of inexpensive designs. Beauties are increasing in number; some of them are really fine for August. There is quite a little shipping business to nearby seashore resorts.

The Convention.

Philadelphia has sent a splendid exhibit of plants, supplies, ribbons, etc., to Milwaukee this week. A fair-sized delegation left Broad Street Station on Monday morning for the convention city. A few left earlier and a few more followed after the main body. Those who went were President John Burton, Robert Craig, Leo Niessen, John Westcott, Edward Reid and family, Joseph Heacock, F. J. Michell, Charles D. Ball and wife, Robert Kift, B. Eschner, Paul Berkowitz, D. T. Connor, Julius Wolfe, Jr., Rupert Kienle, William Robertson, Edward Fancourt, Walter Yates, John F. Sibson and wife, Martin Reukauf, Frank Polites, John Kuhn, George C. Watson, Felix Meyers, William Falk and others. For their success in the hall of debate, in the exhibition and in the sports you must look in another column.

Notes.

C. A. Dunn returned this week from an extended trip throughout the state.

Mrs. R. C. Smith, of Secane, is sending in some fine asters to the Flower Market.

The Steamer Haverford, with S. S. Pennock on board, was delayed in the Delaware river by running on a sand bank.

R. G. Palmer is sending in some very nice dahlias to the Flower Market.

One of the growers in the track of the recent hail storm gives it as his opinion that 16x24 glass suffered less than any other size.

A good story is told of a dog recently imported by Alexander B. Scott, of Sharon Hill. It seems that he got a fine Irish setter from a member of the firm of A. Dixon & Sons, of Belfast. The dog was valued at $5 and the duty paid on that valuation. A friend was so much pleased with the animal that he asked Mr. Scott to import him a pair like it. A reply came from Ireland that a pair could not be had for less than $500. The dog in question had been given to Mr. Dixon by a friend, and the valuation $5 represented the gratuity given a man to put the dog on the steamer.

Edward Reid will go from Milwaukee to his home in Dakota for a vacation.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

POLE beans are looking well in California.

THE seed trade in the west is in healthy shape, a good season past and another in prospect.

THE prospect for a crop of either field or sweet corn is not bright, in the opinion of experienced crop inspectors.

A. B. DICKS, of Cooper, Taber & Co., London, reached New York, August 15 on his annual visit to American seed houses.

BEGINNING August 10 the bureau of statistics of the Department of Agriculture gives reports on clover seed as well as on clover for hay.

SEED exports for the twelve months prior to July 1 were: Clover seed, 15,522,527 pounds; flaxseed, 4,128,130 bushels; timothy seed, 18,289,917 pounds, and other grass seed valued at $581,773.

THE Department of Agriculture has published in Bulletin No. 42 descriptions of udo, a new winter salad, and wasabi, the horseradish of the Japanese, by David G. Fairchild, agricultural explorer.

ADVICE from Hamburg, Germany, says: We are going to have large crops of timothy and trefoil and prices will range low. New trefoil has appeared in the markets. The quality is very good. Prices are as low as 14 marks, which has not been the case for years.

SECRETARY WILSON has ordered Special Attorney George McCable, of the department, to go to Philadelphia with Special Assistant Attorney General J. A. Tanner and take the testimony of Burnett Landreth, the secretary of the Wholesale Seedmen's League, to be used by the government when the Mellis seed contract comes up before the Court of Claims next October.

PHILADELPHIA.—Landreth & Sons are offering all that part of their store equipment devoted to the retail trade at very tempting prices to effect quick sale; this includes both stock and store fixtures. Several outside firms sought to buy up and continue the business, but upon learning the rental—$11,000 per annum—asked by the owners of the building, thought differently.

Late advices from some of the pea growing districts of Canada are definite. Most early smooth sorts will be delivered 100 per cent, most wrinkled sorts 75 per cent and some as low as 60 per cent.

A small acreage of sugar corn is grown in this locality, mostly of the Evergreen variety, and at this writing the outlook for properly matured seed is very dubious. The weather is unusually wet, the temperature is low both day and night and recently a frost was narrowly averted. The outlook for a favorable seed harvest in this locality is not above 50 per cent and some putting it as low as 33-1-3 per cent of all varieties.

OSKALOOSA, IOWA.

Death of W. E. Hearne.

William E. Hearne died of tuberculosis, at the home of W. E. Kemble, Tuesday, August 11, 1903.

Mr. Hearne had been ill for something more than a year. He sought relief by going to England and then California, but all to no avail. He returned to Oskaloosa this spring and was confined to his bed soon after.

Mr. Hearne was born in London, February 11, 1848. He came to this country with his parents when about fourteen years of age, residing with an uncle in New York. He came to Oskaloosa in 1885, and made his home here. He was an expert florist and was considered an authority on subjects pertaining to the work.

The deceased was widely known and was a prominent Mason as well as Elk. The Masonic order conducted the services.

Deceased is survived by his wife here and a sister living in London.

RANTOUL, ILL.—A 20-foot tower to support a 60-barrel water tank is being built on the Morris greenhouses. A hot air pump was recently installed.

MASON, MICH.—Jesse Beech is building an addition to his greenhouse on Maple street.

BOSTON.

Everything plentiful but carnations and sweet peas, and no one seems to miss these very much with so great an overstock of roses, gladioli, asters, etc. There is some kind of a hitch in the red rose situation. Large local growers of American Beauties are out of them, but smaller producers seem able to supply the small demand. There are no good ones. Small Liberty roses are plentiful enough, but larger ones none too much so. Probably the hospital man at the market is as busy as anyone in connection with the business. He took time last Saturday to make an inventory of the asters entering the financial race at the Columbus avenue trade for that day. Forty-one thousand was the total. They did not all race for first money. Most of them ran for any old thing they could see!

"In time of peace prepare for war!" Also in time of heat prepare for cold. So it seems the flower market people believe and are now installing a heating plant in their ware room under the management of Iliffe, the veteran heatist from Somerville. It is a business-looking affair and advertises well for him.

There is quite a bit of heavy repairing going on among the florists and the Waban Rose people claim the record on putting up and planting a 700x40 house of American Beauties, now just finished, first rafter put up June 16 and roses going in July 27.

STEAM VS. HOT WATER.

We would like to ask a few questions through your paper, regarding a heating apparatus. Which is the more economical in fuel, steam or hot water? Which requires the more constant attention? We have five small houses, the boiler to be situated in a basement under one of these. The ground level of this house is higher than that of the other houses. Would not overhead mains to these lower houses be the better? What is the general opinion regarding overhead mains? Is it practical to use pipe as small as 1-inch, in small houses where a perfect circulation is insured providing we use a 4-inch flow and many 1-inch to serve as a sort of radiator, and again conducting the return in a 4-inch to the boiler?

KABER.

The relative cost of steam or water heat depends largely upon the extent and arrangement of the houses to be heated. Small to medium ranges of glass are economically heated, considering cost of fuel and labor, by water, and larger ranges by steam. Steam has the advantage of being more subject to the intelligent control of the grower than water, which is a point greatly in its favor, but as additional labor is entailed in the use of steam, the cost of which per square foot of greenhouse decreases in direct proportion as the extent of the houses increases, it will readily be seen that the advantage in the use of steam is greater on larger ranges. In the matter of fuel cost, that necessary for water heating is greater than for steam, but the cost of the extra labor necessary for steam heating brings the cost of both nearly to the same point, with the advantage on the side of steam that better control is obtained, and the service of the fireman as night watchman is secured without additional cost for this great advantage.

Regarding overhead mains, for water their necessity or advantage is dependent entirely upon the arrangement of the several houses of a range with relation to each other, but for steam the overhead main has in general marked advantage, but here again local conditions must be given consideration.

For water coils 1-inch pipes may be used if the coil is short and the circulation direct, but these conditions can only be found in short houses. For steam coils 1-inch pipe may be freely used in houses up to 200 feet long.

LETTUCE FOR FORCING.

What are the best varieties of lettuce for winter forcing, also at what time should the seed be sown to insure a Christmas crop for market? What should be the temperature of the lettuce house?

W. S. H.

The best variety of lettuce to grow is the kind known as Boston Market. This is a leading lettuce, and is also known as the Belmont, Hothouse Forcing and other names, but they are all the same thing to all intents and purposes. There is a variety known as the Grand Rapids which is extensively grown in some sections, but it does not form a solid head, as does the Boston lettuce, and markets accustomed to the heading variety have no use for the Grand Rapids type.

Seed sown about the last week in September should produce a Christmas crop, as it takes twelve or thirteen weeks to mature a crop from seed. If a succession is desired all through the season, seed should be sown every week until February, and in order to keep the house full, plants should be grown along in flats ready to plant right into the bed as soon as the first crop is cut out.

The temperature of the house should be 40 degrees at night, though on bright days it may with advantage be run up to 65 or 70 degrees.

Lettuce growing presents no great difficulties to the beginner. When you water the bed, do the job thoroughly, so that the soil will get wet down to the bottom and do not practice overhead spraying. Use good, new loam and disease will not be troublesome. Some growers use quite a little fresh horse droppings in the soil after the first crop is gathered, claiming that it warms the soil and starts the new crop away quicker.

C. T.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—Geo. Butler & Son have purchased glass for an addition of 3,000 square feet to their present range of houses. W. E. King is rebuilding one house and is installing a new heating system.

I CANNOT do without the REVIEW, as it is the best guide as to where to buy stock, and if I have anything to sell I can't do better than to advertise in the REVIEW.—E. O'NEIL, Wheeling, W. Va.

"The 25 plants you sent me last spring were planted in the field, receiving the same treatment as the rest of our plants, and Louise Naumann has proved itself to be a good grower, lifts well, is a pleasing shade of dark pink. Its blooming quality up to Scott and with us has been a first-class all-around carnation. A good keeper, and predict for it, if introduced to the trade, a future as bright as its color."

CLEVELAND.

Business for the past week has been fine in all lines and almost everything sent in has found a ready sale. On August 15 occurred the funeral of one of our leading bankers, and both Gasser and Smith & Fetter had orders for many large and beautiful designs. On Monday the funeral of another banker gave these same firms all they could possibly handle.

J. M. Gasser started last Friday for Milwaukee, and will visit New Castle and Chicago before his return. The Milwaukee delegation from here was a good one.

Everyone is busy planting carnations and staking or tying rose plants. E.

LIBERTY, IND.—W. N. Tharp is putting a new boiler in his greenhouse.

KIND WORDS NEVER DIE.

Bellevue, Pa.
Chas. T. Siebert:—Please book my order for 100 lbs. of Zinc Never Rust Glazing Points. I have used five different kinds in the past 12 years, and none of them gave me satisfaction like yours. They will stay in, are easy to drive, no rights or lefts, will hold the glass in place, and do not rust away like all others I have used. Your Zinc Points are easy to take out when making repairs. I have used about 100 lbs. of your Zinc Points in the last two years, and am perfectly satisfied with them.

Yours truly,
F. BURKI,

Cleveland, Ohio.
Chas. T. Siebert:—In our 25 years' experience with glazing points of all kinds, I can say your zinc points are the best to date.

CHAS. H. WILSON,
Mgr. for Grant-Wilson Floral Co.

Lockland, Ohio.
Chas. T. Siebert:—I must say the Zinc Points have given great satisfaction. I have over 100 lbs. on my houses, and feel justified in stating that they are the best point on the market.

Yours respectfully,
W. K. PARTRIDGE, Florist.

Glenfield, Pa.
Chas. T. Siebert:—I take pleasure in expressing satisfaction in using your Zinc Glazing Points. They have outlasted all others used, therefore are better and cheaper. Their merit should result in extended sales. Sincerely yours, THEO. F. BECKERT, Florist.

Fort Wayne, Ind.
Charles T. Siebert:—I can truthfully say your Zinc Points are the best I ever used. They are easily driven and withdrawn and are stiff. Being straight on one side they can be driven accurately; consequently the breakage of glass is very small. I have some in use four years and they are still in their place as good as new.

W. S. ROEBECK.

Springfield, Ohio.
Chas. T. Siebert:—You no doubt know by the 229 lbs. of Zinc Points we have ordered from you that we consider them the best on the market. We have four new houses under way, each 255 feet in length, and will soon have to place our order with you for quite a lot of more glazing points. We are, very truly,

CANADIAN HORTICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.

The Canadian Horticultural Association meets in annual convention at St. George's Hall, Toronto, at 10:30 a. m., September 2. The morning session will be devoted to addresses of welcome, reports of officers and other business, including appointment of judges of the trade exhibition, which is to be staged at the Fruit building at the Industrial Exposition, George H. Mills being superintendent. At the afternoon session a paper on floral decorations will be read by H. G. Dilleuth, Toronto, and one on public parks by A. Gibb, Montreal. On Wednesday the visitors will be the guests of the Steele-Briggs Co. at luncheon. In the evening there will be papers on greenhouse construction by R. W. King, Toronto, and on the advantages of modern construction, by F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y. On Thursday officers will be elected and unfinished business disposed of, the balance of the time being spent at the exposition.

GLENVIEW, ILL.—The Glenview Floral Company is building five houses 14x100 for carnations for the Chicago market. The houses are raised six feet from the ground on 4x4 posts and the space underneath is just the thing for chicken raising, which is an important part of the business.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business has been quiet during the past week. A few weddings and some funeral work is all we have had to console us.

Flowers are coming in somewhat more plentiful, and carnations and roses are in much better color and form than for the last few weeks. Asters are here in big supply and of splendid quality. The whites, light pink and purple are most in demand and bring from $1 to $2 per hundred wholesale. Semple's Branching is the variety almost entirely cultivated in this section and the quality is fully up to those of last year. Sweet peas are still fairly plentiful, but the stems are getting shorter all the time. Double dahlias and gladioli still assist in making the florists' windows attractive. Plenty of Lilium album and roseum are in the market and they are very decorative flowers. Their seasons last about two months. They are sold by the growers at $1 to $2 per dozen stems, according to quality.

Notes.

Geo. C. Roeding, of Fresno, chief of the department of horticulture for California at the St. Louis exposition, has sent out circulars to all the nurserymen and wholesale florists inviting exhibits to adorn our state building and grounds at the coming fair.

John Young of the Dwight Way nursery is taking a well earned vacation of a couple of weeks.

Wm. Kohler, successor to Chas. Haselbacher, has just finished remodeling three of his large rose houses. His place is in excellent condition. He has five houses devoted to roses, seven to carnations and two to Maidenhair ferns and asparagus.

ELLWANGER & BARRY, Rochester, are sending out two new hardy Rambler roses, Leuchtstern, single, bright rose, with distinct white eye like a cineraria, and Rubin, resembling Crimson Rambler but having larger flowers of a deep red or ruby color.

TWO GRAND NEW WHITE CARNATIONS

for the Spring of 1904

Lady Bountiful. The Belle.

Color—pure glistening white; size—full 3 to 3½ inches; form—perfect, ideal for a high grade commercial carnation; stem—24 inches and over, stiff and wiry; fragrance—spicy clove; substance—of the very best. A very strong feature is its excellent keeping and shipping qualities. Habit—ideal, strong, clean, healthy upright growth. Early, free and continuous flowering and also an early and easy propagator. The many exceptional sterling qualities of this variety made it the most prominent of all white carnations seeking honors at Kansas City and Chicago Chrysanthemum Shows, Nov. 1902, and the Judges placed it at the head of all new comers.

A companion to Lady Bountiful with equally strong points to bring it into popular favor with the grower. We have long been looking for a white carnation possessing all the good qualities of Flora Hill but entirely eliminating its weak points. We offer it to you in THE BELLE—a strong, clean, healthy growth; a long, stiff stem; a large flower of best form and a non-bursting calyx. It is the earliest white carnation we have yet found among our seedlings, phenomenally so and not lacking in freedom. It is bound to supplant that popular variety, Flora Hill. This is also an early and very easy propagator.

Our EXTRA LARGE, CLEAN, HEALTHY STOCK and the easy propagation will enable us to offer GOOD, STRONG CUTTINGS, WELL ROOTED and SURE to please.

ASPARAGUS SCANDENS.

Several members of the asparagus family have become wonderfully popular the last few years as decorative subjects, partly on account of their graceful habit, but perhaps even more so through their quality of keeping fresh and bright for days, or even weeks, in a cut state. The one in question is rather more "leafy" in appearance than most of the family, and consequently would make a better and more useful subject for use as a pot plant without detracting from its utility in a cut state. The plant before us, though only from a 3-inch pot, has a very attractive appearance, showing that it will be salable in a young state as well as in older examples, and we consider the novelty to be a very promising one for florists and all engaged in the decorative side of horticulture. It received a reward of merit as A. Japonicus, but the name has now been settled at Kew as above.—Horticultural Advertiser.

MOSQUITOES AND MALARIA.

The following is an advertisement from one of our English contemporaries:

Per small packet, 5s.; plants, 5s each.

BULBS IN WASHINGTON.

As lily growing in the United States is attracting more attention, I would say that I have been experimenting with longiflorums the last four years. They are very healthy and the increase is great from the bulbs planted six inches deep. From six to twelve young bulb-lets form on the stem every year. I do not yet know the best treatment for the bulb-lets, but the plants now in bloom seem very even and fine. I grew candidum bulbs last year that measured nineteen and one-half inches in circumference and weighed two and one-half pounds. Bulbs of Lilium album weighed two pounds and measured sixteen inches in circumference. It is my opinion that longiflorum can be grown perfectly healthy here in the state of Washington. Our climate is warm and very moist up to Christmas, and, with the exception of a few days, I planted bulbs all last winter, finishing February 27 with the last of the stock.

WHITE ENAMEL REFRIGERATOR CO., St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Sir:—The refrigerator you built for us recently is proving entirely satisfactory. It maintains a very uniform temperature of 42 degrees, and flowers keep in it well.

We find it well constructed and a highly attractive ornament to our store.

Yours very respectfully,

E. NAGEL & Co.

ST. PAUL, MINN. December 8, 1898.
WHITE ENAMEL REFRIGERATOR CO.,
St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Sir:—Since using your ice case in our retail flower department we have saved 80 per cent in the consumption of ice. Our saving in flowers we cannot accurately determine, but should estimate conservatively 25 per cent. Not only this, flowers keep with us as they never did before, and retain their salable appearance longer. Your box is certainly a boon to the florists and we predict a wonderful sale on them, especially to the florists, when their qualifications become known.

Yours truly,

They are very healthy and the increase is great from the bulbs planted six inches deep. From six to twelve young bulb-lets form on the stem every year. I do not yet know the best treatment for the bulb-lets, but the plants now in bloom seem very even and fine. I grew candidum bulbs last year that measured nineteen and one-half inches in circumference and weighed two and one-half pounds. Bulbs of Lilium album weighed two pounds and measured sixteen inches in circumference. It is my opinion that longiflorum can be grown perfectly healthy here in the state of Washington. Our climate is warm and very moist up to Christmas, and, with the exception of a few days, I planted bulbs all last winter, finishing February 27 with the last of the stock.

"Thripscide" (REGISTERED) Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

1 lb. Tin Can.....	$.25
5 lb. Tin Can.....	1.00
25 lb. Sealed Box.....	4.50
100 lb. Sealed Box.....	16.50

Dear Sir:—The refrigerator you built for us recently is proving entirely satisfactory. It maintains a very uniform temperature of 42 degrees, and flowers keep in it well.

We find it well constructed and a highly attractive ornament to our store.

Yours very respectfully,

E. NAGEL & Co.

WHITE ENAMEL REFRIGERATOR CO.,
St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Sir:—Since using your ice case in our retail flower department we have saved 30 per cent in the consumption of ice. Our saving in flowers we cannot accurately determine, but should estimate conservatively 25 per cent. Not only this, flowers keep with us as they never did before, and retain their salable appearance longer. Your box is certainly a boon to the florists and we predict a wonderful sale on them, especially to the florists, when their qualifications become known.

Yours truly,

AZALEA FIELDER'S WHITE.

As an admirer of azaleas in general, I am very glad to notice that there is a revival of interest in their culture, says a writer in the Gardener's Chronicle. To my view, azaleas are by far the most handsome group of hard-wooded greenhouse plants grown. While not looking forward to seeing them cultivated in the form of giant pyramids, as was the custom in the '60s and '70s, I still think that if prizes were offered for groups of more naturally grown plants, much interest might be added to our late spring exhibitions. However, I am getting away from the heading of this note. In these utilitarian days, I do not think we can well afford to put on one side the old Fielder's White. For working up into wreaths and other forms of memorial use, no other white azalea can come up to it; its extended stamens and pistil give it quite a characteristic appearance. We find naturally grown plants, both large and small, to be most useful and acceptable in church decoration at Easter and other times when required. As will be known to many of your readers, this old azalea has a good constitution, hence does not suffer from the changes of temperature, etc., to which plants used for general decorative purposes are more or less subject. When repotting, we always use one-third of the compost in the shape of small nodules of turfy loam to two-thirds of tough peat, with a good sprinkling of Bedford sand.

RAISING SEEDLINGS.

The following will be found an excellent method of raising seedlings. It is very simple, as most valuable things are. In preparing seed pans or seed boxes see that they are dry and clean, and the drainage efficient, over which should be placed some fibrous loam, then put down a layer of good sandy loam, run through a half-inch sieve, and patted down moderately firm. Over this place about one-fourth of an inch of dried sphagnum or common peat moss, such as is used for packing (thoroughly dried), and run through a wire sieve about as fine as a mosquito wire gauge, this powdered moss, about in the condition of fine sawdust, being evenly spread. Upon this moss is placed, about three-fourths of an inch thick, a compost consisting of three-quarters loam and one-fourth sharp sand, well mixed together. Make it level, and sow the seed thinly on the compost, press down with a smooth board, and sift on sufficient fine moss to cover the seed, watering the whole with a fine rose. The top layer of moss keeps the surface always moist, preventing all drying and baking, and allows the young plants to easily reach the light. The layer of soil below it affords nourishment to the seedlings, which, as soon as their roots reach the layer of fine moss below, form a mass of fibrous roots. No one familiar with the raising of seedlings need have the advantages of this method pointed out to him.—W. E. E. in the Gardening World.

To see it in a house is a sure winner and will set aside the prejudices you may have against cast iron gutters. This is not a cast iron gutter. None other gives the same results. No drip from glass or gutter. Never breaks by sagging posts, unequal strains or high winds. Straight as a string. Less shade than any other. Adjustable to any size glass, or pitch of roof.

Post sockets clamp on posts and gutter. A bench under the gutter is the best place to grow flowers and plants in the house. Patents protect the DUPLEX, one gutter under the other. Do not condemn the DUPLEX because you are dissatisfied with your cast iron gutter. The DUPLEX has not the faults you find with many other gutters.

A "COMPLETE" FERTILIZER.

In a series of experiments conducted by the Chrysanthemum Society of France the "complete" manure used contained: Fish guano, 25 per cent.; dried blood, 16 per cent.; sulphate of potash, 24 per cent.; double superphosphate, 35 per cent.; this was mixed with the potting soil in April. From August onwards a solution was used consisting of phosphate of potash, 54 per cent.; nitrate of soda, 46 per cent.; or nitrogen, 6.9 per cent.; potash, 14.04; phosphoric acid, 20.52. The liquid was used in the proportion of two grams to one litre of water, and the other at the rate of 900 grams to 100 kilograms of soil. The most successful result, as tested at the end of the experiments, was obtained where a double dose of the manure was employed; the next best were the plants treated to a single dose of complete manure; next in descending order were plants grown without potash, without nitrogen, and worst of all were those plants which had no phosphoric acid. Nitrogen is most conveniently applied by means of dried blood, horn shavings, or guano in the requisite proportions; potash is best applied in the form of sulphate; and bone phosphate yields the necessary phosphoric acid. Soluble manures are requisite in the case of plants cultivated in pots from the middle of August.

TYLER, TEX.—The first annual chrysanthemum show will be held here in November, by the Guild of the Nativity of Christ Church. Premium lists may be had by addressing Mrs. J. H. Bothwell.

Range of twelve Dietsch Short-Span Greenhouses built for the Henry A. Dreer Co., Riverton, N. J.

This style of construction was selected by Mr. J. D. Eisele on account of the better ventilation afforded. George Reinberg and M. Winandy, Chicago, have similar ranges. Write us for names of many other places where this popular new style of construction may be examined. You can prove our claim that it includes the following

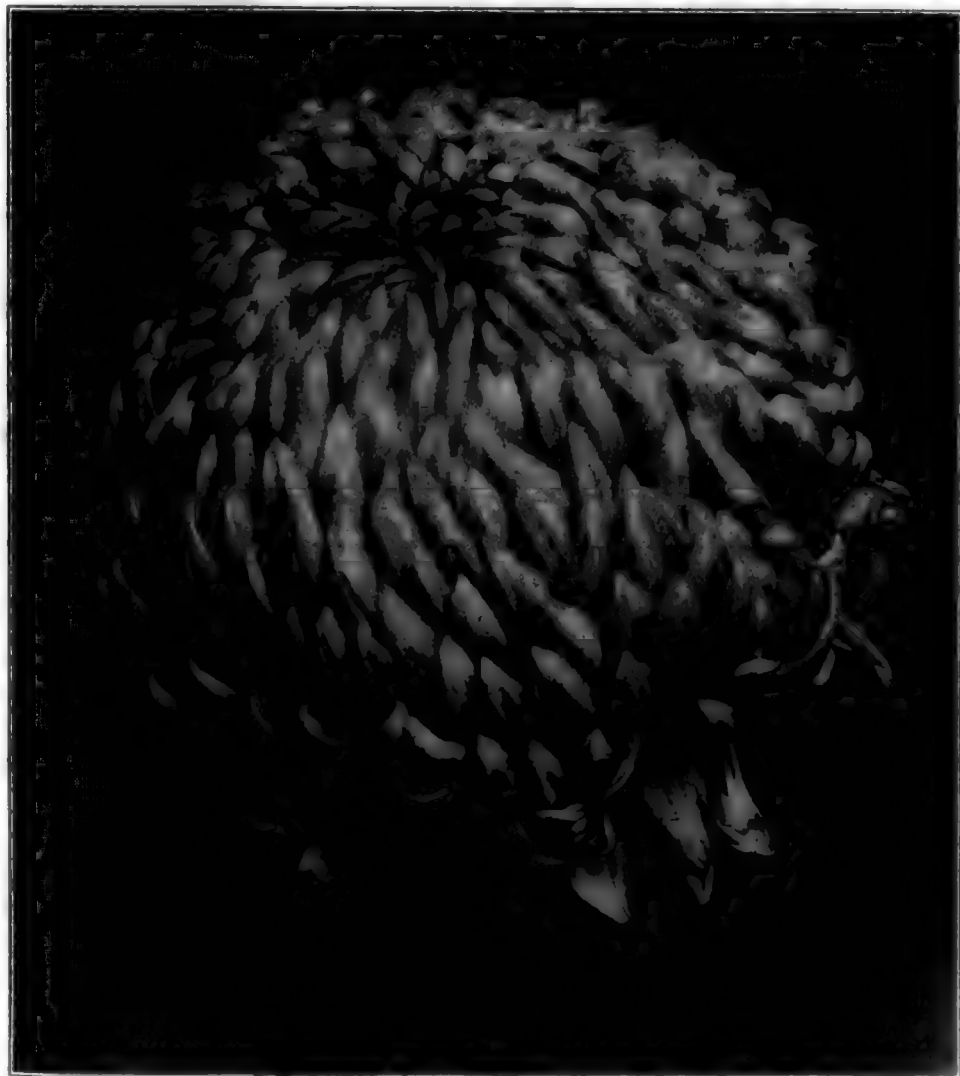

ADVANTAGES NOT POSSESSED BY ANY OTHER METHOD:

- | | | | |
|------------|--|------------|---|
| 1st | Largest bench room obtainable; all benches equally good. | 4th | Least shade possible with any method of roof and wall construction. |
| 2d | Safe construction; roof a perfect truss; no high peaks. | 5th | Ease of construction; greatest durability at minimum of expense. |
| 3d | Best ventilation; a run of ventilators to every two benches. | 6th | Every requirement of modern construction fully provided for. |

These advantages appeal to everyone and this style of construction has the endorsement of many prominent growers.

Let us give you an estimate; the figures will be so low they'll surprise you; the work is so good it will please you.

TOUGHKENAMON, Chester Co., Pa., Dec. 29, 1902.
MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

View in new range of nine houses $27\frac{1}{2} \times 304$ built by Peter Reinberg, Chicago, this summer.

The gutters are in 8-foot lengths, $8\frac{3}{4}$ feet from ground. View shows side and bottom. Notice how little space they take, gutter being only four inches wide at bottom. Purlins (see cut) cast almost as much shade as gutters—yet ample waterway is provided, with an outlet every 60 feet.

Did you ever stop to think?

Had you ever noticed that nowhere in the wide world has the greenhouse industry developed so marvelously as with the growers north of Chicago? Fact, isn't it?

Had you noticed that these prosperous growers all use one style of construction, a style you might almost call the "Chicago Style"—that these growers all build with

GARLAND'S IRON GUTTER?

Does it follow that using my Gutters brings success, or that, being shrewd successful business men, these growers want the very best? Either way, the adoption of my Gutters by these leaders in the trade is a reason why you should use them, too.

IMPRESSIONS OF A GREAT CONVENTION

BY WILLIAM SCOTT.

The feature that made the Milwaukee convention most memorable was the trade exhibit. The writer was somewhat occupied with numerous and diversified duties, and as he makes a point of attending all the business meetings of the convention, as well as various other meetings where two or three are gathered together in holy communion of purpose, there was not much time left to inspect the wonderful collection of those articles that enter into our business in all its branches. There were something over eighty exhibitors. A list of them was given in the pages of the Review last week, and all I can expect to do is to mention here what was out of the ordinary run and what I noticed on entering the hall.

The boilers, ventilating apparatus, greenhouse construction and many appliances occupied a large space. There were the Herendeen Manufacturing Co. with a large and greatly improved boiler, Kroeschell Bros., of Chicago, with their long tubular boiler, Lord & Burnham Co. with their very solid looking sectional heater. The John C. Moninger Co. had a model greenhouse, showing their construction combined with the Garland cast iron gutter; Foley Manufacturing Co., model of greenhouse with metal gutter and ventilating apparatus. John A. Evans, of Richmond, Ind., had a highly polished copper-bottomed exhibit of his well known ventilator; A. Dietsch & Co., model of their well known greenhouse construction; the Lord & Burnham Co., a very finished model of greenhouse and gutter, and the Dillon Manufacturing Co., of Bloomburg, Pa., roof construction and concrete gutter.

Now, gentlemen, in the construction of our houses there has been a most wonderful advance within the past ten years, and the credit is not all due to the man who grows, but is largely due to these men who have studied our wants, and unwise is the man who does not get his material from these specialists, and here was an opportunity to see the best up to date. C. E. Finley, of Joliet, had in operation a pot washer. In size and operation it was something like the familiar scissors grinder of the street, but the wire brush does the trick. Wherever it is desirable to clean pots this is a most efficient machine and not expensive. Entirely out of the common were a dozen or more photographs of a soil conveyor, by the Engineering & Power Co., of Jamestown, N. Y. As I have very recently seen this invention in operation, saw the work it was doing and had done, I must confess that for places of over 100,000 feet of glass it is a great labor saving machine and will soon pay for itself. I will have more to say of it later.

There were a great lot of fine plants exhibited. Henry A. Dreer had a great collection of palms and ferns. The table of small ferns was particularly good. The collection of palms shown by C. D. Ball, of Holmesburg, Pa., was of the perfect, high order for which this gentlemanly gentleman has been for years famous. Henry A. Siebrecht & Son had a very large exhibit and it included a great variety of our desirable palms, ferns and decorative plants. They deserve a reward for sending so fine a lot. F. R. Pierson Co. had a table of the now well known Nephrolepis Pierstoni. It loses none of its charm by familiar acquaintance and is as beautiful as ever. Julius Roehrs, of Rutherford, N. J., had a well grown lot of palms, pandanus and crotons. Robert Craig & Son exhibited a large assortment of palms, pandanus and crotons. The latter were beautiful in growth and color, and, best of all, we had the man himself with us. C. C. Pollworth Co. made a very large exhibit of decorative plants and floral supplies. This rising firm was a large purchaser of eastern exhibits and soon the west and southwest will look to them as the northern star. In orchids, Lager & Hurrell made a pretty display, and so did W. A. Manda. This firm's exhibit of golden privet attracted much attention. I had seen it at South expect to see from this good grower. And there were several others.

The cut flower display was, as usual, a small feature, but the fine displays of gladioli by the Cushman Gladiolus Co., Sylvania, Ohio, and Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., were bright spots in the hall.

I almost forgot to mention three ferns, all worthy of note. Peter Crowe brought with him from Utica, N. Y., a few plants and cut fronds of his Adiantum Croweanum. The fronds were about thirty inches long from where they were cut at the crown. It is indeed a wonderful fern and must soon displace old cuneatum. Anna Foster, as shown by L. H. Foster, of Dorchester, Mass., made a most favorable impression. Its beauty and merits have been obscured largely by the wonderful Pierstoni, but they are so distinct there is room for both. And now there is another sport of N. Bostoniensis. A plant of it was shown by Mrs. R. Mauff, of Denver, Colo. As this handsome fern won't be sent out for a year or so, a description of it just now is not essential and I am not sure I could give it, but it is distinct and has some valuable qualities and will be heard from later.

The greatest class of exhibits by long odds was what we call our florists' sup-

Wreath of Asters and Cycas to cost from $6.00 upward.

Orange a year or two ago. It is said not to lose its golden color with the advance of the season, but is most attractive until hard frost kills the foliage. If perfectly hardy in our northern states, it is a great acquisition. The George Wittbold Co. exhibited palms and ferns, among them some fine specimens. Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., put up a collection of palms of the most useful sizes and kinds and just as finely grown as this excellent gardener can do it. Lemuel Ball's exhibit of palms was of the usual excellent quality which we plies. Never in former years was there such a display. Vases, baskets, bells, wire designs, metal designs, boxes, ribbons and every conceivable article that a florist can find use for and many to tempt his customers. A list of all exhibitors in this and every line has already been published and I have neither space nor ability to describe the many tempting and beautiful articles. I can only say that I sincerely hope that those firms that had the enterprise to put up such fine exhibits at great expense and far from home met with the ample reward which they richly deserve. Mr. Holton, the superintendent of exhibits, did himself proud and nothing but praise was heard of his management. The arrangement of the exhibits was truly well made.

The convention seemed to me to fill almost to the ideal the purposes for which our annual gathering is held—enough essays to give us some food for thought, a great trade exhibit where the newest and most valuable commercial plants, as well as the most up-to-date furnishings of a retail store could be inspected; above all, a most pleasant and fraternal gathering of men and women engaged in our noble calling, an exchange of ideas, a renewing of friendship, and a brief but happy oasis in the laborious life of many a florist.

The hall was perhaps the best for the exhibition we have ever had, but the portion screened off for the business had the worst of acoustic qualities. Nothing but a human fog horn could be heard twenty feet from the stage. Pat O'Mara's clean cut, penetrating basso was about the only one that could cut through the heat waves.

St. Louis had no opposition. It did not even require the persuasive eloquence of Fred W. Taylor to take us to the banks of the Mississippi. This is just as it should be. We all want to see the World's Fair and many cannot afford two vacations in one summer.

The election ended with the best of feeling and I am not sure that the rivalry and canvass for votes among the friends of the candidates did any harm. Those are fine pictures you have, Mr. Editor, of the president and the vice-president, both handsome men in the very prime of life. I mean, of course that the "primeness" is suited for conducting the affairs of our society. For that there is a splendid business force.

Things we eat and drink since coming home do not taste right. The diet we found everywhere in Milwaukee was fine, and as for the amber lubricant, it was superb and without effect unless you took a bath in it. I sincerely sympathize with those rigid characters who would not sample Milwaukee product while they were in the city.

The shooting was a very enjoyable afternoon, after all, and I trust this feature will not be abandoned. There were at the convention several crack shots from Philadelphia and they displayed a fine spirit of sportsmanship when they said to themselves "We could win the best prizes, we know, but let the boys have their fun, we have won enough; when we meet foeman worthy of our steel we will be there again."

The most touching incident of the convention was the restoration of watch and ring to ex-President Smith. Who but Robert Craig, with his classical head and features and sympathetic voice and well chosen words, could deliver such an eloquent little speech? We have only one, and long may he be with us.

The Chicago men simply did nobly. That dainty banquet in the grand banquet hall of the Auditorium was never equaled in the history of our society. It was dainty, elegant and most wonderfully served, and broke up all too soon.

After all the shouting and yelling on the alleys and almost fighting rivalry, it ended with the best of good feeling. The "Phillies" must have surprised even themselves, and as President Burton told John Westcott, there was good playing accompanied by d—— good luck. Well, if ever a club deserved it, Philadelphia does, for it is enthusiastic and keeps the game alive. Phil championship medal was won on form for Mr. Foerster is the best bowler of all the florists in the land. What a joke, however, if Mr. Wilcox had captured the medal. He is a dangerous outsider, always to be feared in any company.

Many little incidents occurred during this memorable convention that I made mental memoranda of, but they have vanished. As it is, my story is amply long enough, quality considered, and in conclusion I thank all who did attend and help to make our gathering in the fine city of Milwaukee as enjoyable an event as is recorded in our memory of our good society. WILLIAM SCOTT.

CONVENTION NOTES.

The E. F. Winterson prize for the man scoring the highest in three games in the Milwaukee contest, was one of the handsomest as well as the most unique ever offered for such an event. It was a silver bowling ball, large size, properly inscribed and mounted on a polished base. It was one of the trophies captured by Joseph Foerster, of Chicago, who also took the Mussey medal in the championship contest.

On Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Phil Hauswirth, of Chicago, were presented with a silver tea set as an evidence of appreciation for Mr. Hauswirth's labors in behalf of the pastimes which are such an enjoyable feature of the conventions. The presentation was made at the Hotel Pfister, where John Westcott, the popular and pleasure-loving Philadelphian, was entertaining his sporting friends.

Through an unfortunate oversight the judges of trade exhibits overlooked the display of the J. C. Moninger Co., Chicago, in preparing their report. It was an excellent showing and while there Mr. Rupp took orders for two houses, 30x300 from Davis Bros., Morrison, Ill., five houses for Fred Ponting, Cleveland, and two houses for H. Kunz, Glenville, O.

Strange, isn't it, that the Ionia Pottery should be the only pot manufacturer to take advantage of the opportunity to make a display. Of course several of the others had representatives on the ground.

There was nothing but praise for the showings of all the florists' supply houses. Such an exposition of choice goods was never before seen in this country. Each and every exhibitor has every reason to be pleased with what he did, for each had a bright and well arranged showing of goods, which would stand closest inspection. Many new things attracted favorable attention and the general lines showed what a truly wonderful advance has been made in this industry in the past few years. One of the most serviceable novelties was the willow screen shown by M. Rice & Co. This firm has every reason to be satisfied with the results of its convention display, much labor and expense as it entailed.

Following the usual custom, at the closing session, William Currie, of Milwaukee, on behalf of the members presented President Burton with a gold watch as an evidence of the affectionate regard in which he is held.

The fatigues of the week were too much for several members. G. M. Naumann was obliged to call a physician. E. Hippard succumbed to the heat on Saturday and R. F. Tesson was taken home sick, while Dan MacRorie took to bowling and other physical exertions they are, of course, long past. Mr. Beneke will work like a trojan to prepare for 1904, and as to Mr. Breitmeyer, it is not taffy to say, for all know it, that there is not a man, and please, Mrs. Breitmeyer, believe me, not a woman who knows Phil but that respects and loves him, and behind his most unassuming good nature he has proved Hauswirth's hard and able work as manager of sports was handsomely acknowledged by the winning team, and when you see John Westcott's and Billy Kasting's noses deep in the loving cup at the same time it looks well for another hot game next year. Poor Chicago! They played well and defeat came bitter to them, for the odds were fifty to one that Chicago had the cup. The his bed for several days without having been near the convention.

Among the plant novelties Croton Craigii in the Craig & Son exhibit, attracted much attention. Seibrecht & Son had Kentia Wendtlandii and other good things, Peter Crowe showed fine plants of Adiantum Croweanum. W. A. Munda's golden privet was thought a good thing. In H. A. Dreer's collection were Kentia Sanderiana, Asparagus myriocladus, A plumosus compactus and some new fancy-leaved caladiums. Lager & Hurrell had some little known orchids and C. C. Pollworth showed Araucaria plumosa.

The Hitchings trophy is now the property of the Philadelphia bowlers.

Signs to the right of us, signs to the left of us, signs at the front of us thundered and roared. Signs of the times.

Coming down from Milwaukee to Chicago on the Virginia on Friday, the Milwaukee Florists' Club had nearly 800 guests. It was a jolly party and a delightful ride. Lunch baskets were provided for all and there was a diversity of entertainment. It was one of the most pleasurable features of the convention.

"We are only eighty-five miles from the wickedest city on God's earth," said the mayor, "but with us life and property are always secure." And that same evening a Milwaukee hotel thief robbed one of our most respected ex-presidents of one of his dearest possessions.

The pot washer exhibited by C. E. Finley attracted the attention of the growers. The machine is simple and effective and seemed to meet with general approval.

One of the good novelties was a cemetery vase shown by W. F. Kasting. It is made of heavy tin, covered with white enamel, with a strong wire to go into the ground. It is a cheap and serviceable article, yet makes an excellent appearance and will enjoy a large sale.

Nothing but words of praise are heard as to the way Milwaukee handled the convention. Messrs. Pollworth and Holton make a strong team.

F. E. Dorner, Jr., was elected a director of the Florists' Hail Association, succeeding William F. Dreer.

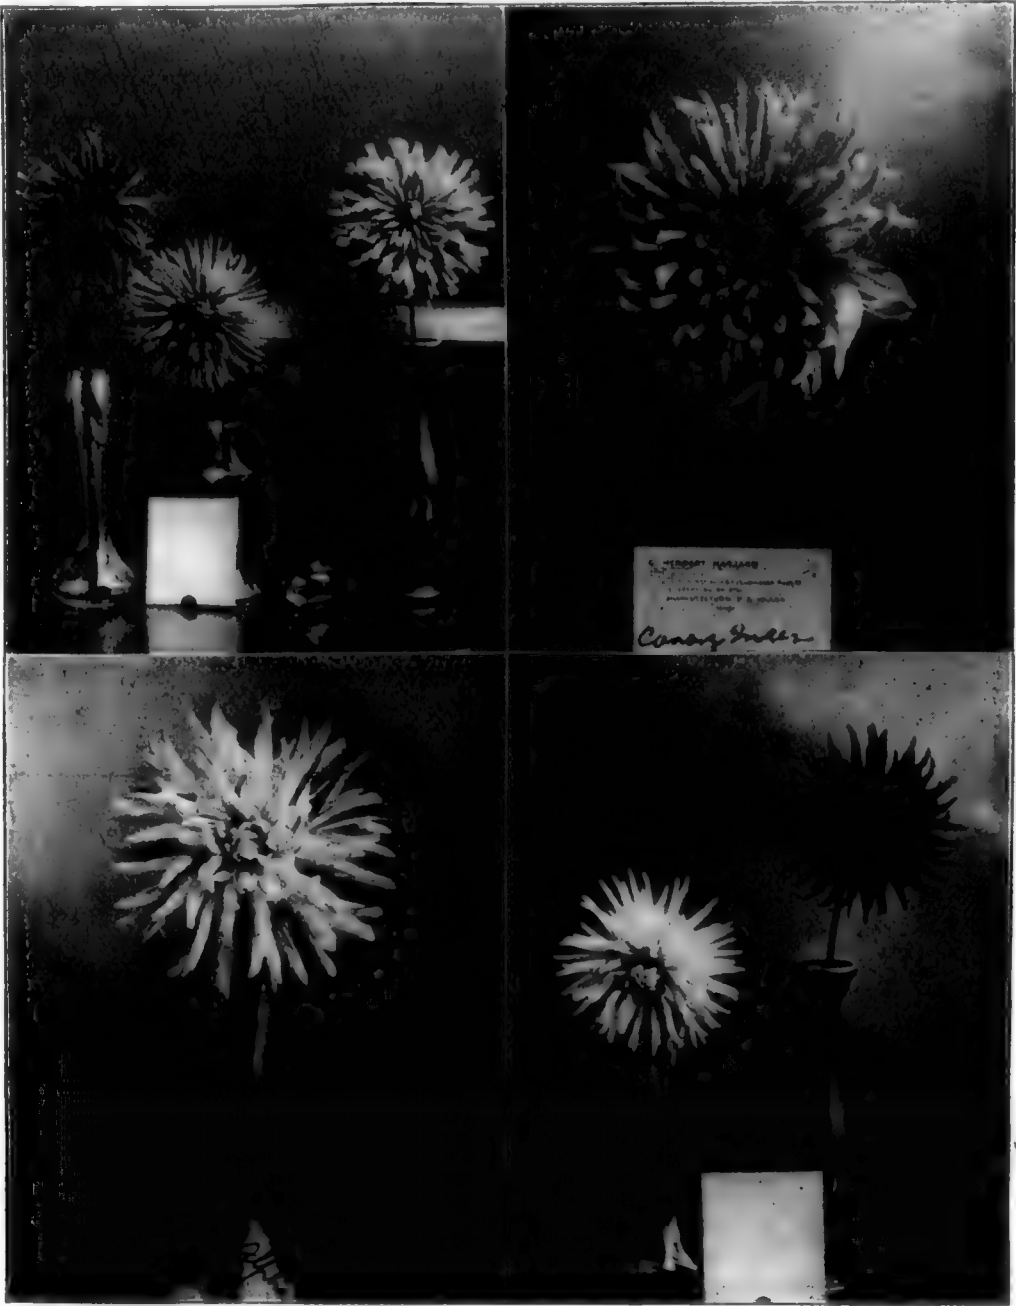

And they didn't take us to the breweries.

CONVENTION GUNNERS.

The success of the annual bowling tournament of the Society of American Florists Wednesday was rivaled on Thursday by the shooting tournament held on the South Side Gun Club grounds, under the able management of F. S. Schmeling. Two events were held and both were won by Ohio men.

In the first event, forty birds, H. M. Altick, of Dayton, was the winner with 31 birds, while E. Hippard was a close second with 30. James Eadie, of Cleveland, was third with 28. The second event was twenty blue rocks, ten pairs. James Eadie, of Cleveland, was the winner with 16, while Reid, of Philadelphia, was a close second with 15. The scores were as follows:

DAHLIAS IN CANADA.

G. Herbert Haszard, at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, is growing a collection of over fifty varieties of cactus dahlias, which are now at their best. The new yellow, Canary Queen, is a variety of exceptional beauty, fine long stems, the flower borne well above the foliage. Alpha is a striking novelty, a good white striped and spotted crimson. Lord Roberts, Mr. Haszard says, is certainly the best white to date. Lucius is a fine orange scarlet with very long stems. Mayor Tuppeny is another good sort, center petals yellow, outer petals orange, with crimson edge. The habit of growth is good. Clara J. Stredwick is a bright salmon shading to yellow, a splendid bloom with very narrow petals. The plant grows only about two and one-half feet tall and is full of perfect flowers. Countess of Lonsdale is a rich salmon and very dwarf. Britannia is salmon pink. The new dark-colored ones, Night, Uncle Tom, Aunt Chloe and J. H. Jackson, are being watched with interest.

DAHLIA NOTES.

The present year has been the most favorable for dahlias experienced for years. From all over the country the most favorable reports have been received. The flowers are not only fine, but the plants have made good growth and they have been blooming profusely. If the cool, wet weather continues, the dahlias will continue to bloom the balance of the season. It is well, however, to here sound the note of warning.

The soil should be kept stirred to the depth of an inch or two and no grass or weeds allowed to grow. This stirring of the soil is not only to keep down the grass and weeds but to keep the soil from baking. With the large growths that dahlias have made it would only take a short drought to give them a severe set-back.

While all dahlias have been doing well, Twentieth Century and the newer cactus dahlias seem to have given the greatest success. Many correspondents express their surprise that the new cactus dahlias should bloom so early and so profusely. As a rule, the cactus are stronger growers than the show and fancy sorts, but few were prepared for the immense amount of bloom they have given this year. The trouble with the old Juarezi and the varieties immediately following was that they bloomed so late in the season, and as these older varieties were the most widely known, cactus dahlias were not taken up so quickly as their merits would warrant. We have been told so many times, "Yes, we like the cactus dahlia; we think it most beautiful and charming, but it is such a late and shy bloomer that we prefer the others." Varieties like the Countess of Lonsdale, Bruin-hilde, Volker, Standard Bearer and a number of others, bloom much more profusely than the old-fashioned show and fancy types. Then again, the weak, drooping stem of the cactus flower has been a drawback. This fault is disappearing in many varieties, notably the new pink Kriemhilde. The flower stems are long and erect, causing the flower to face out boldly when used in bouquets or decorations.

Twentieth Century has probably so far been the most successful of the new dahlias. The immense flowers, with their beautiful combination of colors, long graceful stems and fern-like foliage render them particularly striking and attractive. The new collarette, President Viger, has also earned an enviable position among the American dahlias. It has been an extremely early and profuse bloomer, while the white collar and the deep garnet ground were extremely striking and attractive.

A TABLE CENTERPIECE.

A section of a dinner table centerpiece is here illustrated. It is intended for a long table, and may be used repeatedly at intervals, with light garlands of smilax connecting the sections; or it might be used as a solid piece, making a continuous line the whole length of the table. The illustration serves to show the character of the trellis and decoration but gives little idea as to the effect produced, as the photograph was taken with this section of the decoration on a small stand, where it could get a good light. The wire rack is gilded and left partly exposed and smilax trained high over one end and low at the opposite end. Blanche Ferry peas were used in this instance. It will be noted that the wire trellis is but little higher than the long-stemmed sweet peas, the total height, base and all, being twelve inches. I have used this several times and found it very well liked. This same design might be used on the top of a chancel rail, for an aisle gate at a wedding, or for a buffet or mantel screen.

Trellis of Sweet Peas for Table Centerpiece.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

VIOLET GROWING.

BY GEORGE F. CRABBE, GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The cultivation of the violet is a fascinating vocation; pleasant and profitable when the crop proves a success; disappointing and expensive when failure of crop is the result. There are so many trials and tribulations to go through before a successful crop is assured that many a grower in sheer despair, has abandoned their cultivation for some more certain crop. Yet, with healthy plants, careful cultivation, proper soil and good, constant care, there is no reason why the violet cannot be as sure a crop as any other variety of plants.

There are not many growers who can say positively "My crop will be a success," for experience teaches us that, no matter how great our success last season, we can fail miserably this. Yet these failures help to guard against a repetition of the same mistakes.

Our first set-back was the black fly. It was our first acquaintance and he was allowed to get too strong a foothold before his identity was discovered; and then, while every effort was made to dislodge the enemy, it was too late, the damage was done. The next season we kept the fly in check, but had a different mishap. For covering the cracks on the bottom of the benches we used inverted sod. The quack grass grew and we set the men to work pulling it out. They found it easier to pull when wet, so they kept the beds soaked with water. When the beds were in that condition a rainy week set in and the soil would not dry off, the plants, having what we what is the matter. We were attending the Chicago chrysanthemum show. Our violets were fine; they were blooming freely and selling at a good price. Like many other florists similarly situated, we were building air castles as to what we would do with the profits of our promising crop and planning to put more houses to violets the next season. The weather during show week was warm, the thermometer standing from 55 to 65 degrees at night. The wind blew and the rain fell and was blown in mist through the ventilators and over the plants. As it was so warm, the hands decided it best to leave the ventilators open, at least until my return. What a sight I beheld! Eight hands picking the spotted leaves off those magnificent plants that but a few days previous we were banking on so confidently. They were so checked that it was not until toward spring that they fully recovered. Had the ventilators been closed the crop would have been saved. I have mentioned our principal failures, thinking it might possibly be of value in preventing others from falling into the same costly errors.

Propagation.

We propagate our stock the last of March and through April in two ways, viz.: by division and by sand rooted cuttings. To propagate by divisions we select the strongest runners, remove from the plant and put into 2-inch pots. It is immaterial whether the divisions when potted have roots on or not. The sand rooted cuttings are also put into 2-inch pots, and all are covered with long strips of cotton until thoroughly rooted, when the covering is discontinued. Newspapers would do just as well for small quantities. We are careful to put the covering on before the sun strikes the plants in the morning, and remove it immediately after the sun's rays no longer strike the house. Give as much light as possible, while not letting the sun strike the plants to wilt them. As soon as the plants have filled these pots with roots they are ready for planting. Those that we cannot plant until later in the season we put into 3-inch pots and grow them on. A well rooted violet plant from a 3-inch pot we prefer to a field-grown plant, as it does not suffer a check when planted. We plant direct to the bench. Our plants are grown wholly under glass the year around. Very few are grown in the field in this vicinity, unless it is the Princess of Wales, single.

We prefer a clay loam of about three parts to two parts of muck sod and two parts of well rotted cow manure, all thoroughly mixed and chopped fine. Under no circumstances is old soil used. We plant with eight inches between the rows, and by the first of October we have robust, bushy plants with foliage touching and covered with buds. Picking begins about the first of October and in a couple of weeks is in full headway.

Varieties and Treatment.

The principal variety grown is the Lady Campbell, considered as being the least liable to disease, the strongest grower and the most free bloomer, producing three flowers to one of the dark varieties. Swanley White is successfully grown with us, but in limited quantities. In dark violets Imperial is the best. While requiring the same treatment as Marie Louise, it has a larger term "wet feet," and immediately we had the most beautiful crop of black spot imaginable, the crop being ruined. We finally dried the soil out and with care brought the plants out free from spot and in fine shape, but instead of picking 40,000 blooms at Christmas we had to be content with a quarter of that number, and vowed we'd never be caught that way again.

The last set-back (and may it remain the last) occurred at a time when most growers have more or less trouble from the same causes and under similar conditions and find it hard to determine just flower, a stronger stem, and is a little hardier in its constitution. The Farquhar is no longer grown here.

Lady Campbell and Swanley White both require 45 to 50 degrees of night temperature and a day temperature 10 degrees higher. The dark varieties require 38 to 40 degrees at night and 5 to 8 degrees higher in the day. The warmer varieties require a steadier temperature than the dark. Should the latter occasionally drop to 35 degrees they would be injured, but in the case of the former the flowers would be checked.

At the same time give all the air your conveniences will allow. It is a stimulant to the health of the plants and an antidote for disease. Let the wind, even if cold, blow on the plants if they are healthy. Do not be afraid if you see the leaves moving with the breeze. They are drinking in deep breaths of fresh air. You cannot grow violets properly in a close, ill-ventilated house. Such a one is apt to be damp and muggy, the right conditions for spot.

From the time of planting until about the middle of October the plants should be kept on the wet side. From that date on they should be a bit on the dry side. From the foregoing date until the middle of December is the critical time of their existence. If you get them through until then, or even until the first of December, you can reasonably bank on what kind of a crop you will have for the season.

Keep the soil constantly stirred, so as to let the light penetrate to the roots. Pinch off all decayed and dead leaves. Remove all runners on Campbell and Swanley White as fast as they appear, retaining the one center crown. On the dark violets the same process should be gone through with, although better results are claimed for the system that retains three or four crowns, pinching the strongest runners about three inches from the plant for this purpose. Longer stems and more flowers will result.

Keep the atmosphere in the house dry at all times. Even at the risk of getting the houses too warm, turn on a little steam, if only sufficient to take off that raw, chilly dampness. Particularly should this be done when the early fall rains set in. The neglect of this precaution frequently allows spot to put in an appearance. A hand-rake is used for stirring the soil, but better still if the man in charge knows how to stir soil with his fingers. It is much better and he never has to hunt for his rake; it is always by him.

Pests and Diseases.

Black spot is frequently caused by overwatering. Wet feet, we call it. Also in mild weather when the ventilators are open and a warm rain sets in, before you are aware of what is going on the wind swishes the rain over the foliage in the form of mist, which is very distasteful to the sweet, capricious beauty. Again, a close, ill-ventilated house should be avoided, as it is sure to breed spot.

Frequent syringing on bright mornings will serve to keep red spider down. If you have been taking care of your plants you will have very little trouble with spider. Eel worms are a rarity in this vicinity. As soon as a plant stops growing and ceases to have that bright glass characteristic of a healthy plant, pull it out and replant from stock that should always be kept on hand in 3 or 4-inch pots for that purpose. This disposes of the worm or any other trouble that may ail the plant. There are other enemies—insects and diseases—with which we are as yet unfamiliar.

Great care should be exercised in watering, in order not to get the soil too wet, as it will then become sour, and in winter it is hard to get it back to healthy, growing condition. Morning is the best time to water, and in cloudy weather and in the fall judgment should be used to select a time to water when the foliage will dry out before night.

Narrow, 10 to 12-foot houses grow good violets, but on account of the sash, ventilation is harder to handle during the critical period. Large houses from 100 to 300 feet long and 29 feet wide, containing 4 to 5-foot benches, with 3x4½-foot ventilators, all on the north side of the house, half of them opening to the ridge and the alternating sash hinged at the ridge and opening at the cross bar, houses running east and west, admit more air and light and are less liable to a sudden fall of rain getting in before the ventilators can be closed, as it is easier to close the ventilators than to let down a lot of sash.

The successful growing of violets may be summed up in four words: "Take care of them."

COST OF COAL.

Robert Craig states that with him, last year's coal bill was more than $5,000 higher than in ordinary seasons, with William K. Harris it was $3,000 to $4,000 more than usual, and with Henry A. Dreer, Riverton, N. J., the increase caused by the strike was not far from $7,000.

RUST ON CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Will you kindly tell me through the REVIEW a remedy for chrysanthemum rust, as I think it is; brown, rusty spots on the under side of the leaves. Can these affected plants be used as stock plants for another season? C. A. M.

Without a doubt the brown rusty spots mentioned as being on the under side of the foliage is the rust. These brown spots, when ripe, burst open and a brown powder is scattered round and every grain of this brown powder is a disease germ, carrying and reproducing the disease everywhere where conditions are favorable for its development. We have found that sulphide of potassium dissolved in water in the proportion of one ounce of the potassium to two gallons of water and sprayed on the under side of the foliage will hold the disease in check and prevent it from spreading to adjoining plants. Be sure to get the sulphide and not sulphate of potassium, as the two are, I understand, quite different articles.

The plants may be used for stock next year and if they are sprayed with the solution mentioned, a time or two in the early spring, the rust will not appear again the following year. We have not had rust two years on the same variety and for the past two years have not had it at all. There was a great hue and cry some years ago concerning this disease, but one seldom hears of it now. It is much more liable to appear when the season is wet than when the season is dry on plants growing outside, and the obvious inference is not to syringe plants under glass more than is necesand a credit for every debit entry, so that the books can be balanced and discrepancies located. I have found that a very complete record can be had by running three books, a cash book, journal and ledger. The cash book, as its name implies, holds a record of all the cash transactions in the business, the left hand or debit page being for all moneys received and the right hand or credit page being for moneys paid out. The and credit to credit. A notation is made in the cash book and journal of the ledger page to which they have been posted, this notation showing that they have been carried forward into the ledger and also give a ready means of looking the entries up should occasion require. Each entry is also paged in the ledger, showing from where it was posted.

As the footing of the two columns of the journal correspond, and both sides of the cash book balance, when these amounts are forwarded to the ledger and the balances taken from it they must correspond when the cash on hand is added: When these balances are taken from the ledger and tabulated we have a trial balance. Should there be any variation in the amounts of the debit and credit columns of the trial balance there is the omission of a ledger account, or an error in carrying the amounts forward from the cash book or journal to the ledger, or an error in striking the balance in the ledger. The fact that the ledger accounts must balance is the best feature of the double entry system, as you are enabled at any time to strike a balance, and if the books do not balance you know that an error has been made and you can then look for it in order to make corrections.

At least once a year the books should be closed. I have found July 1 to be the most convenient time to do this, as it is between seasons. In order to close the books a loss and gain account is opened in the ledger and to it are posted the various items of expense from the ledger and also depreciation on houses, tools, heating plant, fixtures, etc. These expense items all go on the debit side of the loss and gain account. On the credit side are posted all the receipts, from whatever source obtained. An inventory of all the stock on hand is made and if it amounts to more than called for by the stock account in the ledger, the excess amount is posted on the credit side of the loss and gain account. If it is less the discrepancy is posted to the debit side of the loss and gain account. The difference in the footings of the two columns of the loss and gain account will tell whether you have made a profit or sustained a loss during the time the books have been open.

You will see from the loss and gain account which I have submitted that the books show a loss of $636.09. If, however, a proper set of books had not been kept, if no depreciation had been allowed for fixtures, no depreciation allowed for greenhouses, or for heating plant; if interest on the capital invested had not been charged up as an expense, we would have a very different showing. In this case we would have a profit of $2,171.05, as shown by this second loss and gain account.

Which of these loss and gain accounts is correct, which is honest, which will tell you exactly where your business is going, which will enable you to put your finger on the leak, if a leak exists, or will awaken you to a realization of the true standing of your efforts? You may say that it is not correct to write off depreciation for fixtures, greenhouses or heating plant; that they are all there and that you will use them until they have to be replaced, when you will make a charge for them. But is this honest with your business? Does not each year receive a certain amount of use from these items and should it not be charged for that use? Depreciation is one of the heaviest expense items in our business and its omission may make a considerable difference in the season's showing; but is it right to leave it out?

The same thing will apply to the capital invested. You may say it is your money and you do not have to pay insary to keep down insects. I have seen it spread all through a batch of plants standing outside in a week, when it was raining all the time, while plants thirty feet away in a greenhouse were untouched. If the subscriber will use the solution and keep the foliage of the plants dry he need not worry much about the rust.

BRIAN BORU.

GREENHOUSE ACCOUNTING.

BY ROBT. F. TESSON, ST. LOUIS, MO.

After having acceded to the request that I prepare a paper under the heading, "Systems and Accounts for Greenhouses and Forms for Determining the Cost of Production," I found that instead of having an easy subject I had been assigned a tough proposition. The moment you seriously start to consider the subject it becomes so elusive, so diversified, appears in so many shapes and presents so many points that have to be considered, that it is impossible to do the subject justice in a single paper, and the one that I have prepared to read you today treats of the subject in the barest outlines.

I am afraid that the subject of systematic accounting is looked upon rather as an impossibility by a great many of our members and as something, anyway, that is too fearsome to be tackled by the ordinary florist. And with this summing up the matter is let rest, he being content to take things as they come, and, as the saying has it, goes it blind. This, however, is radically wrong. We all should know, both for the protection of ourselves and our creditors, what we are doing. We should know at the end of the year, or sooner, whether the business has made or lost money; if we have made money, where it came from; if we have lost money, where it went. Were our gains derived from properly conceived and carried out plans, or from some accidental or outside source? Were our losses caused by failure of crops, by lower prices, by heavy expenses or through lack of system in attending to the details of our business? This knowledge can only come from a properly conceived and carried out system of accounts. The object of all systems of accounts is to exhibit the results of the transactions of the business during specified periods, arranged in such a manner as to inform the proprietor of the business of the amounts of revenue and how they have been produced, the amounts of expenditures and their details, and the net income remaining. The best system, therefore, is the one which will furnish these particulars in the clearest possible manner, with the least expenditure of time and labor.

Difference in the requirements called for by the various branches of our business cause changes to be made in the details of the system adopted; the underlying principle remaining the same, however, in all cases. Every business should open a set of books, preferably a double entry set; in a double entry set of books there is a debit for every credit entry, balance between these two pages shows the cash on hand.

The journal is used for credit transactions and all entries of amounts payable such as rent, light, taxes, etc.; and for amounts receivable, such as bills for goods sold, or, in other words, bills receivable are made in this book.

In the ledger an account is opened with every person with whom we have credit dealings and with items that we wish to keep track of. Under this head would come capital, greenhouses or plant, land, machinery and tools, heating plant, stock, etc. Expenses would be subdivided into labor, fuel, repairs, advertising, interest, insurance, miscellaneous expenses, etc. All items entered in the cash book and journal are posted to the ledger under their proper headings, the items from the debit side of the cash book to the credit side of the ledger, and from the credit side of the cash book to the debit side of the ledger. erest on it; still if you borrowed it from bank or trust company to put in your business you would have to pay interest for its use; if you borrowed it from an individual you would have to pay for its use. And now when you have borrowed it from yourself for the business why should not the business pay interest on it? If it was not invested in your business you could place it in a bank or trust company and draw 3 per cent for it; you could buy bonds with it and get 4 per cent; you could invest in deeds of trust and get 6 per cent for its use. Why, then, should it not be drawing interest when invested in your business? You have borrowed it from yourself rather than from some one else.

These two samples of loss and gain accounts should be studied. They will bear a lot of thinking over. They will show the real from the apparent gain, and I am apprehensive that it is the apparent gain that we see and by which we are misled.

From the loss and gain account we gain another pointer. This is the cost of operating the business, and by finding the number of square feet of bench surface or producing area contained in the houses we get the cost of operating the plant per square foot; or in other words we know how much each foot of bench space must produce in order to pay operating expenses.

Cost Accounting.

The principal idea in keeping a set of books is to enable one to know exactly what the business is doing, and the one feature in business that will enable you to make your business pay is the ability to tell what it costs you to produce a given article, so that you can intelligently put a price on it that enables you to make a sufficient profit to justify the transaction. The system adopted and carried out that enables you to do this is called cost accounting. Records are kept of all the items that enter into the cost of production, so that the exact cost of the finished product is known. These systems vary with different lines of business; the same principle, however, underlies them all. They have been brought to their fullest development in manufacturing enterprises, where records are kept of every item that enters into the cost of production.

The florists' business, that is the growing end of it, has always impressed me as being a strictly manufacturing enterprise. You have, in the first place, your plant or greenhouses; you have the tools for doing the necessary work; you have your raw material to work with; you employ labor, and lastly you turn out the finished product, either plants or cut flowers. Now, what opinion would you hold of a manufacturer of boots and shoes, of cigars, of hardware, or of any manufactured article, who after having produced these articles did not know for what he could sell them to make a profit because he did not know what it had cost him to produce them? Yet how many of us are in this business condition? If we are producing cut flowers can we tell the cost to us of a dozen roses or carnations or hyacinths? If we are growing plants what does it cost to get a kentia into a 5, 6 or 7-inch pot or a geranium into a 4-inch. When this matter of cost is considered from an outside point of view, it seems that this would be the first question that would be determined, instead of being, as I think, about the last that is taken into consideration by the person growing the stock.

You may be all right; you may be receiving prices that are paying you; but do you know it? Are you sure that all of the items produced are paying equally well? Are you not making up on some lines what you have lost on others; and at the end of the season when final plans are being made for another year can you tell what lines to go light on and what lines to push? Can you decide what varieties to cut down and which to increase? If you cannot do this, and do it intelligently, you are not making the most of your opportunities.

Without entering into all the details of cost accounting I will show a few form records that will start one to systematizing his business and that can be elaborated to any length. I have had made for use a special form of blank-book, although any blank-book can be ruled to serve. The special feature in the one mentioned is its size and ruling. The pages being 17 x 12 and when opened presenting a surface 17 x 24. It is ruled horizontally into seven spaces, one for each day in the week, and vertically into as many spaces or columns as may be desired, and the columns can be of any width. The copy shown has been used for cut flowers and gives the number and grade of flowers cut. These columns can be used for a number of purposes. Under a wide column headed "Remarks," information can be inserted, dates of moving stock can be put down, the arrival and planting of bulbs and their condition can be noted, bulbs brought into the houses for forcing for Christmas or Easter can be entered and later their earliness or lateness can be noted for future reference. Thus by a few seconds' work with a pencil an established record is made that can be referred to for years to come.

The item of the first importance in ascertaining the cost of production of cut flowers is to ascertain the number and quality produced per given foot of bench space. I think it more satisfactory to figure per foot of bench space than per plant, as owing to the differences in the distances the plants are placed in benching the records of production in any one place would vary from year to year, while a comparison with another place to see what the differences are would be entirely misleading. This record of quality and quantity is provided for in the book shown. In order to find the number of square feet planted to any one variety it is necessary to measure up the benches after planting, and this need be done only once during the season. Dividing the number of square feet into the number of blooms cut gives the production per square foot. I like to have this production worked out every month, so you can tell at the end of the season when you cut the most flowers. You would rather cut three to a foot in December than six to a foot in June, and the record will stimulate you to increase the winter production when you note the tendency to rest shown at this, the period during which the best returns are received.

I show two records of Meteors for successive years, the first being with young stock planted early and the second with the same stock carried over, and the one having this record would hardly throw out one-year-old Meteors. I also show a record of handling paper whites for two years in which case the gross profit has been determined.

I do not think it necessary in ascertaining the cost of production to have a card follow each lot of plants through their life in the houses. This could be done with several lots or any special lot to familiarize oneself with the workings of the system, the principal point being to allow for all the items that enter into the cost of production. A card, however, should be provided for each lot or variety of which a record is to be kept. Suppose, for instance, a record is wanted of the cost of growing palms. A card would be prepared as shown calling for the cost of the production per 100 or 1,000, as the case might be. The first item would be cost of seed or plants; if seed was sown a cost of seed would be made and left open until the percentage that germinated could be ascertained, when the proper amount would be filled in. Then would come labor of boxing and putting away. The next item, would be for care and space occupied by the seed flats, made at the time of pricking off; then would come cost of pricking off into 2-inch pots; a memoranda of the time taken or of the number finished in a day would give you the basis for estimating this amount. Then if they are cleaned or handled before being shifted, a charge is made for the time. The next charge would be made at the time they were shifted into 3-inch pots, this being the same method adopted when they were potted into 2-inch, and so on, the system being pursued until the plants are sold. In case the plants were purchased or imported their cost and duty and freight would be entered instead of cost of seed, all the subsequent charges being similar. In determining what charge to make for space occupied the knowledge that we have already obtained from the set of books submitted regarding the cost of operation, and further the determining erty has proved itself to be, require still more careful watching to tide them over the change.

Bride and Bridesmaid will now begin to require less water and the reduction should be brought about gradually as evaporation decreases and root action becomes less active. Beauties being of a grosser habit, will still call for a goodly supply, but during continued dark weather they are quite as impatient of an overdose as some of the apparently more delicate varieties.

Golden Gate and Ivory are of all the teas the least susceptible to these changes and are on this account the best slow. We use one of those sod crushers made up at Tonawanda, near Buffalo, and two men with one of those machines will do as much as a dozen men with screens and do it better, because it breaks up all the lumps. Grinding the manure permits spreading it on the beds in a thin layer, a half inch in depth, which is all you want at this time, besides putting it into better condition for the roots to get at it. Stir the surface of the soil just before putting on the manure and give a watering after the mulch has been put on.

Now you will be ready to put the supports on as some of the varieties are sending up blooming shoots and as some of these will be getting longer they will need something to hold them upright. All that will be necessary for the present and for some little time to come will be to hold the plant together so that the base of the flower-stem cannot fall away from the plant and perhaps break off. There are many devices on the market and most of them have merits of their own. The main thing to consider besides the holding up of the plant is that the support should not crowd the plant. Most of the wire supports are now designed to be made larger or smaller according to the size of the plants and the strongest objection to them has been done away with. Their cost at first seems quite heavy where large quantities of carnations are to be supported, but they are all made of galvanized wire and will last many seasons and in the long run their cost is not so heavy as it at first seems.

Perhaps the most popular method in use now is a wire support for the body of the plant and a network of wire and string about a foot above the bench to hold the flower stems and later on another net work above that. This method permits of somewhat freer access to the center of the beds when weeding and stirring than our old method, but also necessitates frequent going over the plants to put the shoots inside the rings. We shall this year use the same method that we have used for several years past.

the cost of operation per square foot of bench space, shows us that the cost of operation is 50 cents per square foot of bench space and charges on that basis would be made. If catch crops are put in that only occupy the benches for a short while the charges would be heavier against the crops grown in winter than in summer.

I think that from the foregoing any one that is at all interested in this subject can work out a system of accounts and cost record that will prove satisfactory and profitable and that will be of permanent value. It may take a little time to work it out and keep it in operation, but there is a vast amount of satisfaction as well as profit in knowing exactly what you are doing, and the more exact this knowledge is the more valuable it becomes.

During the next month, when, in all probability, we will have to use more or less firing at night, it will be well to keep a sharp eye on the benches, particularly where the pipes are directly under them, as the transition from natural to artificial heat affects the plants in many ways. Under natural heat the soil dries out from the surface downward and continues to dip until it reaches the boards or tile. In artificial heating, where the pipes are under the benches, these conditions are in a great measure reversed, and great care will have to be taken not to let the soil on the boards get so dry as to injure the roots.

Appearances are very deceptive, especially where a mulch has been used, and nothing but a strict examination of the soil can be safe. There will also be other portions of the benches which, under the altered conditions, will demand closer attention. In Meteor houses, where a higher temperature has to be maintained, great care is required to keep the benches all equally moist, for if the roots are allowed to become over dry during this change a crop of yellow foliage will be the result, from which it takes them a long time to recover.

Varieties which are as erratic as Lib-and most suitable kinds for the less experienced grower.

Ventilation will require particular care during this period. The ventilators should never be closed tight unless to keep out rain, as this causes sweating, which soon softens the foliage.

A careful study of each particular case and the attending conditions with a little reflection will usually keep us on the safe side and carry us safely over this critical period.

I have described it several times in these notes and will not go into details unless some reader should want it described later, when I shall be glad to do so. I will merely say that it consists of wires stretched lengthwise of the bench between the rows and strings run straight across between each row of plants, and be sure you stretch the wires tight.

I was glad to see in the REVIEW that the A. C. S. is going to consider the advisability of examining carnation seedlings several times in a season before awarding certificates of merit. This would be a decided step forward, I think, and every grower of carnations will be benefited by it, whether he be a seedling grower or a cut bloom grower.

Delivery Wagon of J. S. Simmons & Son, Toronto.

The A. C. S. has done great work in raising the standard in quality of the varieties introduced to the trade and through its influence the chances of a variety producing blooms of inferior quality being sold in any considerable quantity have been reduced to a minimum, but we are asking the society to do still more for us, and we have a right to do so. A few years ago our demands of the seedling raisers were mostly for larger blooms, better colors, and better stems and in fact a general improvement in the quality of the products of the plants.

In producing this quality in many instances there was necessarily some sacrifice of quantity, and now we are demanding the latter in addition to our former demands. We have as large and fine blooms as any one could wish for, but unfortunately most of these varieties are shy or late bloomers. We have enough of that kind now and while we will welcome any improvement in quality, we are more anxious to have varieties that will produce large quantities of good blooms up to the present standard. Mr. Scott is to make a special study of the matter and give us his conclusions at Detroit in February and I have no doubt that he will find many reasons why it would be a good thing for the trade as a whole. I for one have been convinced long ago that it is only a question of time until it will have to come.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Result of Indoor Culture.

Before giving results obtained by this method it may not be amiss to say that, as described in notes of May 7, it is a compromise between field culture and culture entirely under glass.

Our plants were cut from flats late in April and potted into 3-inch; as soon as the roots had begun to encircle the ball, a shift was made to 4-inch. The first week in June they were placed pot to pot in frames; no further shift was necessary, the only attention given being to top, water as required, and stand over once, spacing to allow for growth made. By July 15 we had them all planted and growing nicely, no losses having occurred outside or since housing.

Lawson was the variety most largely grown on account of its known habit of giving short stems early in the season. Other varieties were also tried, among them being Estelle and Enchantress, but in comparison none equal the plants of Lawson, which variety seems particularly suited to this treatment.

In comparing field-grown plants with pot-grown stock, a marked difference is noted, although our field plants were housed but a week later. In comparison of plants, while less heavy, the pot-grown stock has grown more rapidly and gives stems fully twice as long as field plants. By judicious topping, no doubt heavy plants will result by October, which is ample time in which to get our stock in good condition for the season's strain. While this system entails some extra handling of plants, the balance is restored at housing time by the absence of anxiety, spraying, shading and extreme care in ventilation.

The matter of water supply is necessarily more or less dependent on the hose and sash, as in periods of drought or continuous bright weather, artificial watering has to be employed and in case of excessive rain sash can be used to avoid an over-supply; but to have this matter under control counts for much.

The method allows one to adjust the nature and fertility of the soil to suit the needs of the variety grown and would seem to support my belief that proper selection of soil and control of moisture supply will lead to the elimination of trouble from stem-rot, more especially so when it is considered that this disease has made no appearance at any time among the plants grown in this manner.

Although all varieties will not take kindly to this treatment or cannot be said to bring returns enough earlier than field-grown plants to warrant the change, there is no question that varieties very susceptible to stem-rot or impatient of disturbance in lifting and consequently slow in getting established, will under this or a similar system give much better and earlier paying returns. I would not advocate the handling of one's whole stock or all of any one variety in this way, for there is nothing so rejuvenating to any plant as to give its roots their own sweet way undivorced from mother earth.

This should be given thought with an eye to future production of plants for another year. GEO. S. OSBORN.

LATE PLANTING.

We notice nearly all growers favor benching carnations early. There may be very good reasons in some establishments to make it necessary to plant from September 15 to 25. In the opinion of experienced growers would they advise planting in full of buds or to break the tops back close, and when should the last topping be done with September 15 to 25 in view for housing? P. A.

I would have to have very strong reasons to make me defer planting in my carnations to as late as September 15 to 25. In fact I would almost despair of raising carnations for profit under such conditions. A few years ago it was the rule to plant almost any time just before hard frosts occurred and many growers attempted to handle the plants so carefully that the buds that were formed outside would open up in the house into good salable blooms, usually without success. The more progressive ones took off all the shoots that had formed buds, believing that the plants would resume their growing much quicker and produce a crop of good blooms earlier. In this they were right, but gradually they began to realize that this fall crop which they had been cutting off and throwing away could be saved by earlier planting, and earlier planting became the rule. Since then we have found that earlier planting improves the midwinter quality so much that we would very reluctantly go back to September planting.

Carriage Decorated by Wm. Jay & Son for Toronto Floral Parade.

It would have paid you to lift your carnations and pot them any time before August 20, into about 4-inch pots, and then plant them on the benches just as soon as you can after they have rooted through well. You surely have a bench or two that you can spare to put the pots on. The extra work would not be very great, because they will become established in the pots quicker than they would on the bench, and when they are planted on the bench there will be no wilting, etc. They will take hold much quicker from the pots than they would from the field, too. You will gain almost as much as you would by planting them on the benches at the time you pot them.

However, if you have them in the field until the date you mention you should remove the blooming stems as soon as the buds are well set and a few days before you plant you should go over them and remove all those that would show a bud by planting time. If the plants are of fair size I would not top them so close from now on as I would earlier in the summer. They should be encouraged to throw blooming shoots from now on rather than grass, but you should not allow the plants to waste their strength on perfecting the blooms. You can by good managing cut a very fair crop of blooms by Christmas, but they will not be as good as they would be from earlier planted stock, nor will there be so many. You will also lose at least a 10 weeks' cut and from 25 to 50 per cent in quality up to March 1. Will the use of your houses for some other crop between August 1 and September 25 repay you for this loss? You know your business better than I do, but think this matter over carefully before you decide to plant so late. A. F. J. BAUR.

THE FOLIAGE PLANTS.

Rejuvenating the Stock.

From July to about the end of October is the season of most rapid growth in this class of plants, the warm nights keeping them in a state of continuous activity. And it is also during this season that the patching up of the various remnants of plants that have been used for decorating is going on, an operation that occasionally pays where one is compelled to do more or less cheap competitive decorating.

An Areca lutescens that has been badly used up by exposure to frost, draughts and dust is seldom worth keeping for hospital treatment, for this palm does not easily recover from such a condition, but there may be some kentias that could be washed out at the roots and then bunched together in such a way as to produce a passable plant for decorative purposes.

This method of washing out the roots has been frequently described, the object being to remove the old soil to such a degree as to permit of planting two to four plants that may be imperfect in themselves in one pot of a convenient size, a strong force of water removing the soil without any material injury to the roots. But the warning should also be repeated that any plant that has been subjected to this treatment must be repotted as soon as possible in order to avoid drying out the roots, should then be well watered to settle the soil, and be placed in a shaded greenhouse where frequent syringing may be given during bright weather and, in short, should receive a rational course of treatment tending to promote a new growth.

Phoenix canariensis and other strong rooting palms are sometimes given even much more heroic treatment than this, inasmuch that the over-abundant roots of these palms are sometimes chopped off in order to facilitate repotting into the same sized pot they have been occupying, but this practice is not a safe one to recommend to an inexperienced grower, and as a rule it is much better not to root-prune a palm.

Latania Borbonica is not an easy plant to kill, even though a specimen that has been long used in a dwelling often becomes very shabby and may require some clipping of the tips of the leaves to remove the dead portions, but this palm soon makes a fresh start during the summer, and before Thanksgiving may become quite presentable again.

But if any palm should become badly infested with insects and at the same time be in bad condition from exposure I would not advise any hesitation in regard to the course to be pursued, for such a plant should be at once condemned to the rubbish heap.

Aspidistras.

Aspidistras are always useful to have, and if one has a few large plants that can be spared for stock purposes, it may be found profitable to divide them now, as they will soon recover from the operation and make some more leaves before the plants are needed.

A well-filled pot or tub of aspidistra that has not been disturbed for several seasons may be divided into a number of useful plants of the 5-inch or 6-inch size, and in addition to this there will be found a lot of old rhizomes in the soil that may be cut up into short sections and thus used for further increase of stock. The joints are very close together on these underground stems of the aspidistra, and in consequence they may be cut into sections about one inch in length, the roots being cut back so that the cuttings may be planted more conveniently. These cuttings or root sections are then to be planted to a depth of about one and a half inches, in light, sandy soil either in a bench in the propagating house or in the flats, the latter being most convenient in many places from the fact that the flats may be moved about if necessary. Nearly all of the joints of an aspidistra possess a dormant eye or bud, or will produce one, and though the process of growth may take some months, yet a large majority of these root cuttings will ultimately grow, and as soon as they form a leaf may be taken up and put into 3-inch pots.

Aspidistras will endure partial starvation of their roots about as long as any plant with which I am familiar, but they will also respond to more generous treatment, and a fair proportion of good stable manure and also a sprinkling of bone dust will be found highly beneficial to them at the time of repotting.

Few insects trouble these plants, but during the hot weather there may appear some thrips upon them, if any of these pests are about, but this difficulty may be overcome by vigorous syringing and fumigation.

Crotons.

At midsummer there is little difficulty in rooting croton tops, Ficus elastica and other species of that genus, dracaenas and in fact any of those foliage plants that are commonly propagated by slitting a young growth and then tying up the wound in a handful of damp moss. Large and highly colored croton tops may be more easily rooted by this method than any other, the tops being left on the parent plant until the roots show freely through the moss, after which the cuttings are taken off and potted up in pots of a suitable size, 3-inch pots answering for the purpose unless the cutting be from an extra strong growth.

The newly potted cuttings should be kept somewhat close for a few days, and shaded from the sun until they become established, but it is well to remember that crotons are rather hungry subjects, and may be shifted on quite rapidly, strong cuttings rooted in July being capable of forming good plants in 6 or 7-inch pots before Christmas, provided they are shifted on and given proper cultural attention. The chief essentials are warmth, light and plenty of moisture, both overhead and at the roots.

Thrips on Ficus.

Those not familiar with the ravages of the tiny yellow thrips on ficus are sometimes at a loss to understand what is the cause of rusty looking scars on the young leaves of the ficus, such evidence being quite likely to appear at this season if any of these troublesome insects are at work. These injuries cripple the leaves to a greater or less extent, and if any such marks are apparent it would be well to make an examination at once of the under side of the foliage of ficus, the most likely time to find the insects being in the early morning or else late in the afternoon.

The insect in question is very small, moves rapidly, and is whitish or yellow in color, and if any are suspected to be about it is a good plan to give a strong fumigation with tobacco dust or tobacco stems on two or three successive evenings. Forceful syringing will also tend to dislodge the thrips, but syringing alone will probably fail to effect a cure, as it is practically impossible to reach all portions of a lot of plants with a stream of water, and the nicotine vapor will search out the insects in a much more thorough manner.

VARIEGATED FERNS.

When considering the great number of species and varieties of ferns, it is remarkable to find how few truly variegated forms exist. A good number are what may be termed accidentally variegated, such as Pteris cretica, P. serrulata, and P. palmata, in which part of the fronds appear freely splashed with white or yellow. Such forms are also occasionally met with in the genera Asplenium, Lomaria, Nephrolepis, etc.; but in all these cases the variegation is not constant, notwithstanding the care and attention bestowed on them by the cultivator. In Adiantum cuneatum variegatum, the character is often retained for a good length of time, but large specimens are seldom, if ever, seen; if only this form could be grown successfully in large quantities it would prove an acquisition for decorative purposes. The only other variegated Adiantum is A. macrophyllum albo-striatum, a most beautiful plant when well grown, the young tinted fronds freely streaked with white, rendering it particularly attractive.

The pteris family contains the most useful of variegated ferns. Foremost of these; from a decorative point of view, is P. cretica albo-lineata, which grows well in a cool house, and stands the atmosphere of a dwelling room as well as most ferns. A crested form of the foregoing is P. Mayi, a very beautiful compact plant, and most useful in small pots. P. argyrea, generally known as the silvery pteris, is a very vigorous plant, and useful in all sizes from small thumb pots to large specimens. It should receive a heavy compost, and succeeds best under stove treatment, when the silvery markings are more pronounced. It is a variety of P. quadriaurita. Another variety, but quite different in growth, is P. tricolor, a most beautiful plant when well grown, but it is somewhat difficult to cultivate, the conditions most suitable being a light open compost, warm stove treatment, plenty of water at the roots, and shade; the old fronds soon turn brown if too much exposed, and water must be withheld from the foliage. A very pretty pteris is P. nemoralis variegata, which succeeds well under the same conditions as described for the foregoing.

Quite distinct to the other pteris is P. Victoriae, with erect, narrow fertile fronds; while the barren ones are only a few inches in length, the fertile ones, in which the silvery markings are more conspicuous, rise a foot or more high. It is easily raised from spores, and succeeds well under stove treatment; a very handsome crested variety of it is P. Reginae cristata, in which the variegation is much brighter. P. tremula variegata has not proved so highly decorative as was expected when it first came under notice. The variegation is very distinct and pretty, but the foliage is of a somewhat soft texture and does not stand the atmosphere of rooms for any length of time.

There are a few variegated ferns requiring cool house treatment, all of which hail from Japan, and are of very easy culture. The most beautiful is undoubtedly the deciduous Athyrium goringianum pictum. This plant is furnished with a fleshy rhizome from which, in the spring, a good crop of variegated fronds is produced, and their beauty is greatly enhanced by the pretty claret colored rachis. It is a most suitable plant for rockwork ferneries. Very distinct from the foregoing is the robust Nephrodium aristatum variegatum; its dark shining green fronds have a distinctly light yellowish variegation, and their hard nature renders them valuable for decoration and for growing in exposed situations. The fronds of Gymnogramma japonica variegata show a distinct variegation when in a young state, but when mature this is scarcely visible. Polypodium appendiculatum may also be included among variegated ferns, the claret colored markings being very pretty, more particularly when the fronds are first produced.

The above comprises all the variegated ferns of any merit. In all classes of plants, variegated forms are much sought after, and any new introductions in ferns would be gladly welcomed.—W. J. DYSON in the Gardeners' Magazine.

THE CYPRESS MARKET.

The lumber trade reports the summer rather dull in the cypress market but fall business opening strong in the west, if demand is a little late in awakening in the east. Stocks are well cleaned up and not only is the market closely controlled, but the demand is so heavy that prices are firm, with a tendency toward slightly higher levels. Cypress is good stuff and has come into general use for very many purposes, besides for greenhouse lumber since the advance which has put the price of white pine of same grade at a higher figure than cypress.

THE CHINA ASTER.

In Bulletin No. 169, of the Department of Agriculture, there appears the following, compiled from bulletins of the Cornell and Massachusetts Experiment Stations:

The China aster, which has come into prominence in comparatively recent years, is closely related to the chrysanthemum, and, as its name implies, is a native of China. It was originally single flowered and of limited range of color—blue, violet and white—but under cultivation it has been made to assume a great variety of forms and colors, rivaling the chrysanthemum in these respects, although the aster has not been developed to the size of the larger varieties of chrysanthemums and has not yet been made to show the brilliant shades of yellow which are so prominent in certain of the varieties of the latter flower.

In a bulletin of the New York Cornell Station, L. H. Bailey states that—

The China asters are among the best of all the annual garden flowers. They are of the easiest culture, most free of bloom, and comprise a multitude of forms and colors. They are therefore admirably adapted to profuse and generous effects in schemes of planting. They are also worthy of wide attention because they are adapted to many of the purposes for which chrysanthemums are grown, and they can be raised to perfection wholly without the use of glass. They attain their best in the decline of the season, from late August till frost, at a time when many of the annuals and the greater part of the perennials are spent and gone. No garden flowers carry such a profusion of bloom and color down to the very closing in of winter. The aster border still had blooms when the snows fell in November, and when even the wild golden-rods had waned and died.

The China aster is an annual and especially effective in borders. It grows well in almost any soil, but prefers a rich, moderately moist, but well-drained loam. It responds generously to liberal fertilizing. Recently there has been quite a general and widespread failure in successfully growing the China aster, owing to various diseases and insect pests. R. E. Smith, of the Massachusetts station, has been studying this subject and finds among the more important troubles of asters a stem-rot disease or wilt, which is characterized by a wilting and final dying of affected plants, accompanied by a discoloration and rotting of the stem just at the surface of the ground; a yellow disease, which appears as a spindling yellow growth of the branches and leaves and a peculiar abnormal development of the flowers; and root lice, which cause the plant to stop growth and finally wilt and die. In such cases the roots are found to be covered with masses of small, bluish-colored plant lice.

The stem-rot or wilt, although first showing itself at any time during the plant's growth, appears to be contracted only in the seed bed or pricking-out flats. Both this disease and the root lice may be avoided by proper methods of cultivation. For the yellow disease no treatment is known. None of these troubles can be remedied after they have once appeared.

Based on the results of his work, Mr. Smith gives directions for growing asters, applicable more especially to regions north of southern Pennsylvania, as follows:

Start your own plants. Seed planted as late as June 1 will give an abundance of bloom before frost. Procure seed directly from a reliable seedsman. It costs no more and is much more liable to be fresh and true to name. Sow the seed in the open ground at any time after the ground gets into good condition, in good soil where asters have never grown before. Fall sowing out of doors may also be practiced. For very early flowering sow in cold frames or in the greenhouse, but this, especially the latter, is much more liable to produce stem-rot.

Avoid at all times the use of soil where asters have grown before, especially where the stem-rot or root lice have occurred. Prepare the permanent bed by working in a liberal dressing of barnyard manure during the previous fall and a light application of any good commercial fertilizer in the spring. If this is not practicable, remember that as a general principle the richer the soil the better will be your asters. Plant if possible in moderately moist soil. This will give better growth and less trouble from grubs and worms.

As to varieties of asters to grow, Mr. Smith says:

Asters may be classed into early, mid-season, and late, coming into bloom ordinarily about July 20, August 15, and September 1, but varying, of course, with the time of planting. The Queen of the Market, in various colors, is the standard early variety, together with the similar Queen of Spring, Queen of the Earlies, etc. The recently introduced Tom Thumb Comet or Poodle is also worthy. Of the mid-season, the Victoria, Peony Flowered Perfection and Giant Comet are best known, but by no means include all the best kinds. The new California Branching Comet is especially striking, and many others might be mentioned. Of the late varieties Semple's Branching stands pre-eminent as one of the finest of asters, especially for commercial purposes. The pink Mary J. Semple is considered by many the finest of all asters. It is with difficulty that such a list as this is brought to an end, on account of the many beautiful kinds left unmentioned. The dwarf varieties are numerous and odd, but of no great value for cutting.

MYRTLE.

I enclose a specimen of myrtle and would like to know the variety and where same can be obtained. T. H.

The plant in question, so far as may be judged from the rather scant specimen, may be Vinca minor, periwinkle, sometimes popularly called running myrtle although it does not belong to the myrtles but to the apocynaceae. Almost every florist can supply periwinkle. It grows readily but is not always able to stand our winters. Being evergreen the leaves should have the protection of a light mulch. It is a useful plant for cemetery decoration. Some of the advertisers would do well to make a note of it. JOHN HIGGINS.

LONGIFLORUMS FROM JAPAN.

The bulbs imported from Japan are chiefly L. longiflorum. Among them are several distinct varieties which differ from each other principally in the periods of blooming, but also in foliage, flowers and general habit. Some have the leaves close together on the stem, the longest and broadest at the base, gradually shortening as the summit is reached. Others have broad leaves, not so numerous as in the case of the plant just mentioned and with less difference in breadth and length between those at the base of the stem and those near the apex. Some of the forms appear to be of a fixed type so far as scarcity of blooms is concerned. This is attributed, by George W. Oliver, to seedling stock raised from unselected parentage and the failure to breed continuously from the most desirable of the seedling plants. If this is the case, as there is good evidence to suppose, it is little wonder that the imported stock lacks uniformity in many of the most desirable characteristics.

Among the numerous forms there is one which shows great superiority over the others. In every respect it may be regarded as an ideal lily. It is said to have been found in a certain locality in Japan and named after the place where it was discovered. It is offered by two dealers under the names L. longiflorum giganteum and L. longiflorum eximeum giganteum. It is said to be a difficult subject to propagate vegetatively; consequently it is higher priced than any of the others. Some years ago when first sent to this country it was thought to be a natural hybrid between L. longiflorum and L. Brownii. The leaves of this variety are not as numerous as in some varieties of L. longiflorum; they gradually taper from base to summit, but in this respect are not as pronounced as in some other forms. The stem for several inches above the base is of a blackish-brown color. The flowers are graceful in shape, the tube is short, and the diameter across the perianth is large. The texture of the flower is much firmer than that of any other cultivated lily, and the color is of a dazzling clear white. Either on the plant or in a cut state the flowers, by reason of their thick texture, last longer than those of any other form of L. longiflorum. With regard to the time it takes to force, it occupies a position in this respect midway between L. longiflorum and L. Harrisii. Unfortunately, however, disease is quite as prevalent in this form as in others. Therefore, the propagation of the limited amount of stock available by scales, offsets, or division, and under the same conditions as those existing in the Bermudas will be accompanied with no better results than are found in the L. Harrisii product of the island. A bright future for this plant is predicted, not only on its individual merits but also as a parent, both male and female, from which to raise new forms through crossing with other varieties of L. longiflorum.

In the greenhouses of the Department of Agriculture there are at present several combinations between this plant and the most approved forms of L. Harrisii. The plants are still in the seedling stage, but they will be watched with very great interest to determine the results of careful cross fertilization with the other varieties. Although the plants are so small that 100 could easily be put inside of a thimble, they are expected to flower within seven months.

Some bulbs of this little-known variety which were planted out in the open during the autumn of 1901 along with other L. longiflorum and L. Harrisii plants, to test their hardiness and blooming periods and also to learn of their adaptability to the soil of this section, showed that they were not only hardy, but that the blooming period was ten days in advance of the earliest of the L. longiflorum. The bulbs planted were small and when lifted, during the latter part of August, were found to have increased considerably in size, besides making several small bulbs at the bases of the stems. The soil used is composed of friable loam, having been under cultivation a long time, but no manure had been given within two years before planting. Two dry spells occurred during the period of growth and this retarded their development to some extent.

LEADING CANNAS.

In his paper before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, Antoine Wintzer, of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., gave an analysis of the canna lists of fourteen leading catalogue houses. The total of varieties listed was close to 300 but most of the lists contained no more than fifty sorts. Italia was the only sort listed in every one of the fourteen catalogues. Following are the varieties listed by four or more:

4 Admiral Avellan.	4 L. Patray.
4 Alphonse Bouvier.	9 Luray.

PIPING.

We are building three houses 12x78 with boiler shed and propagating house adjoining an old house. There is about 4,000 feet of glass surface in the new houses, two of which are to be used for carnations and one for roses. There are two benches in each house. How should they be piped? We have a Kroeschell boiler for hot water and wish to use 2½-inch flows and 2-inch returns. We shall have to provide for 20 degrees below zero. Also please advise how many 2-inch pipes will be needed in the propagating house, 5x30, with north wall 4½ feet high and double boarded?

H. & S.

For the new houses described an arrangement of hot water heating pipes as shown in the diagram will be effective. In the rose house there will be three 2½-inch overhead flow mains and three coils of three 2-inch pipes. In the double roof carnation house three lines of 2½-inch flows and two lines of 2-inch flows, with eleven lines of 2-inch returns in coils as shown. For the propagating house described, four lines of 2-inch pipes will be necessary. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

FROM OUR ENGLISH EXCHANGES.

The Gardeners' Chronicle.

PLATYCERIUMS—At Kew Gardens the platyceriums in the fern house have done much better since being grown in what is termed the natural way, that is, instead of being planted in pots or pans, they are attached to tree trunks to which cork bark has been nailed in such a manner as to form pockets to hold sphagnum moss and peat. Thus treated, the plants can be freely afforded water without any danger of the soil becoming soured. Platyceriums, apart from their noble appearance, are interesting as possessing two kinds of foliage, the one sterile, flat, and comparatively little lobed, reminding one of a huge prothallus; the other erect and deeply lobed, with dense masses of brown spore cases on the under surface. They grow naturally on the branches of trees to which the sterile foliage is appressed, and most of them produce off-sets by means of which they may be propagated. In some cases buds are formed on the roots.

ACTION OF LIME IN SOIL—Lime added to garden soil may be productive of beneficial results in any, or all, of three different ways. Firstly, lime affects the physical structure of stiff, heavy soils, like clay land, producing a flocculation of the silt and preventing its deposition in individual particles, thus making such land more open, porous, and easier to cultivate. Secondly, lime has a soluble influence upon undecomposed rock particles, assisting their decomposition, and consequently adding to the fertility of the soil containing them by setting free the potash and phosphoric acid they contain. And, thirdly, lime is an admirable corrective of soil acidity. The action of the nitrifying organisms results in the production of nitric acid, and if this acid accumulates in the soil beyond a certain point it causes the suspension of activity in the nitrifying ferments and injures the growing crop; in other words, it makes the soil sour. Lime is capable of combination with this acid, thereby preventing its accumulation in a free state and keeping the soil sweet. Excess of humus and lack of drainage also directly cause a sourness of soil that may be corrected by the addition of lime.

SWEET PEAS—The best dozen varieties of sweet peas as voted by twenty-seven cultivators are Black Knight (23 votes), Blanche Burpee (21 votes), Coccinea (18 votes), Countess of Lathom (16 votes), Duke of Westminster (23 votes), Hon. Mrs. Kenyon (27 votes), Lady Grisell Hamilton (27 votes), Miss Willmott (22 votes), Navy Blue (20 votes), Prince of Wales (21 votes), Prima Donna (22 votes), and Salopian (26 votes).

CUCUMBERS—A correspondent writes in regard to the cucumber leaf disease that excessive moisture should be avoided; a more moderate temperature and freer ventilation adopted, the latter condition being too much dreaded by growers. The seed remains perfectly free from disease and there is no fear of its introduction from that source. The prevention of disease, therefore, is a matter in the hands of the cultivator.

ORCHIDS—M. Linden, the well known orchidist of Brussels, believes that degeneration of orchids in cultivation occurs only where the plants have been badly established. The first two years after importation, in his opinion, decide the future of the plants; if by that time they are perfectly established and healthy, they are likely to remain so under suitable conditions, but if they are ill conditioned then, their future life will be but an existence. He condemns leaf-mold as a rooting medium. The plants seem to do well in it at first, but later the roots rot in it. Last year he said: "We (M. Linden and his skillful grower M. Van Cauwenberghe) do not believe that the material, the sustenance for the plant, is of primary importance in orchid culture. Whether the plants are cultivated on blocks (cattleyas), in pots, in green moss, live sphagnum, leaf mold, or in the roots of polypodium, is a very secondary matter. Orchids need no manure, and we never give them any. Aeration, the amount of moisture given at different stages of growth, the resting period, and a proper temperature, constitute the chief factors of success." M. Linden then says that if an orchid is in bad condition, it is in green sphagnum that it will most easily regain vigor.

GARDENERS' COMMISSIONS—The "Prevention of Corruption" is the title of a measure intended to meet a serious condition in the gardening as well as other trades. It provides that "if any agent corruptly and without the knowledge of his principal accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain, from any person, for himself or for any other person, any gift or consideration as an inducement or reward, for doing or forbearing to do any act in relation to his principal's business, or for showing or forbearing to show favor or disfavor to any person in relation to his principal's business; or if any person corruptly gives or offers any gift or consideration to any agent as an inducement or reward . . . shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable to conviction on indictment to imprisonment."

DAHLIAS—A grower of these writes that though the National Dahlia Society awarded twenty-seven certificates of merit last year, yet scarcely a flower could be said to excel the best ones of the preceding year. He expresses the hope that more discrimination will be used in future. He feels that too frequently the awards are made by members of the trade to each others' flowers.

THE Italian National Chrysanthemum Society issues a quarterly periodical publication called "Il Crisantemo."

AN English gardener whose strawberries were taken by birds and who found the usual bird scares ineffective finally tried the experiment of placing in the strawberry beds a couple of talkative parrots. This was successful, the birds being evidently much afraid of the noises made by the parrots.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Trade is at the lowest level since summer came and the average returns to the growers this week are a discouragement. Demand is not only lighter than ever, but receipts are heavier and it is impossible to do anything at all with a great deal of the stock. Asters particularly being dumped in large quantities. Beauties are more plentiful and not selling any too briskly, the shorts being particularly difficult to move. The crop of Brides seems to be far heavier than Maids with many growers, at least they are more in evidence around the market. Red roses are not so plentiful. Carnations from the field are at hand for all requirements and the cut from the early planted houses is beginning to come along. There are longiflorum lilies again, as auratum are on the wane and some splendid dahlias are seen, but they do not sell very fast. There are good gladioli but prices are very low. Green goods go slow, especially asparagus.

The Convention Visitors.

Chicago took the convention visitors in hand on Friday afternoon. Open house was kept at 56 Wabash avenue, with music and refreshments, until six o'clock, when supper was served at the Auditorium, to about 485, followed by an evening at the concert at the Coliseum. The hotel banquet hall and the tables were very tastefully decorated by Phil Hauswirth and he is entitled to much credit for his work throughout the week. On Saturday the visitors scattered in parties to visit the various greenhouses. Bassett & Washburn report 247 visitors at their place that day. Where-ever a stranger went he found eatables and drinkables spread for his refreshment and it was not the least of the pleasant features that the consensus of opinion was that never have the establishments in this vicinity made a better showing. One of the laughable experiences was that of William Currie, W. R. Smith, E. A. Feters and Mrs. Feters with O. P. Bassett's automobile.

Various Notes.

Raymond Reinberg, the two-year-old son of George Reinberg, was drowned last Saturday afternoon in a tank of water in the rear of his home. The little fellow had climbed to the edge of the tank, which is 16x16 feet and five feet deep, when he lost his footing and fell in. No one witnessed the accident. A half hour after little Raymond had left the house his body was found floating in the tank by Christ Brecht, an employee. Mr. and Mrs. Reinberg have the deepest sympathy of everyone in the trade in their great loss.

Leo Niessen, the Philadelphia wholesaler, spent a couple of days this week in looking over the methods employed in the cut flower business here. He says that Chicago undoubtedly handles several times as many flowers as Philadelphia, but that the quality does not average so good and that we do not handle the stock so carefully in consequence. A. H. Langjahr, the Brooklyn wholesaler, also examined the methods in vogue here.

L. Coatsworth has been laid up with muscular rheumatism but is able to be about again.

A. Lange has been engaged in a little controversy with the state factory inspector, who charged him with employing a boy under sixteen. Justice Wolff sided with the inspector.

E. S. Thompson had a nice showing of Park Belle and seedling gladioli at Randall's, August 21, and will be over September 1 with another batch. He also has some very good dahlias.

C. L. Washburn goes to Wausaukee, Wis., tonight for a few days outing before taking up the activities of the new season.

G. E. Pieser is at home from his outing at Lakewood, Wis., and Will Kyle is back from Kalamazoo.

George R. Scott is no longer with the Kennicott Bros. Co.

E. C. Amling has had his place tastefully decorated with asparagus this week.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market shows change from last report. Roses are very plentiful and many of them of rather poor quality, due probably to the cloudy and warm weather. The good roses are in fair demand. Beauties are more plentiful and lower in price. Kaiserins appear to be going off crop; they are scarcer and not so good. Maids are improving and some pretty fair stuff is seen. Asters are awfully plentiful in common sorts, white especially. Semple's are displacing the others in the orders for choice stock, and of these and the best Queen of the Market more could be used. It is easy to get a fair price for good asters, but poor ones are bad stock. The REVIEW quotations on asters were too high last week, for which the writer is to blame. Note present quotations. Valley is improving; some very fine spikes can be seen. Gladioli are awfully plentiful. I do not believe that prevailing market prices today can possibly pay anybody not guilty of child labor. Of dahlias there will be more to say later. Carnations are now at low water mark; just a few fine ones can be had. There is no demand whatever for greens, with the possible exception of a little maiden-hair fern. Growers of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, smilax and Adiantum Farleyense will make money by holding their stock over for the present.

A Merchant Prince.

Everybody knows that the term "robber baron," as applied to our business, means a rich grower who waits until some poor retailer or commission man is short on an order and then swoops down upon him, refusing to give up the desired flowers until he has secured every penny the poor fellow has except car fare home. Fortunately there are no real "robber barons" around the City of Brotherly Love—our growers are not so cruel—but we have, and we are proud of it, a genuine "merchant prince." By this term is meant one whose merchandise may be found in great quantities on very many steamers crossing the ocean today, who has dealings in a large majority of the cities and towns throughout this country, and whose transactions aggregate so large a sum as to seem fabulous to any of us. Yet hard work, enterprise and sound judgment have brought all these things to us today. As an example I would give the house of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. Through the courtesy of Mr. Bayersdorfer I was enabled to examine the vast warehouse, some of the things seen here for the first time. Out of such a collection of beautiful and useful things it would be difficult to select and describe a few of special interest. It is a task worthy the graphic pen of Secretary Stewart, but far beyond Phil. Still it must be attempted.

It is evident that the demands of the plant business are growing more and more importunate year after year. This is evidenced by two beautiful crepe papers for pot covers, one a ball pattern straw, very pleasing in appearance; the other, a crimped affair, comes in any shade of color desired to produce an effect. The baskets are in endless variety, here and there a nest whose dainty shape suggests the creative genius of some clever French brain. Then come the vases of Bohemian glass, large transparent ones exquisitely ornamented, and smaller ones of colored glass, just the thing for fragile, shorter-stemmed flowers. These two together recall mantel effects made with a tall vase of Beauties on one side and a tiny vase of orchids on the other. A statice or Scotch holly, perfectly made and of a pleasing shade of green, is considered a great addition to the list of holiday attractions. Then there were some great American Beauty vases of sterner mold than glass, and a new green stem-colored wire, intended to appear perfectly natural when used on the roses in a bouquet, and—but you say, "Phil, you are wound up," so let's work awhile.

Various Items.

M. Rice & Co. report an unusually heavy rush of convention orders. They are working overtime at this usually short hour season.

Eugene Bernheimer has just returned from a trip up the state. He reports carnations as rapidly filling the houses. While the stock is short, the plants that survived the May drought flourished. They look very well now.

William J. Baker is receiving some nice valley.

C. A. Dunn has just returned from Reading and vicinity.

Carl Jurgens, of Newport, is sending in some nice valley to Leo Niessen.

Some of William J. Baker's consignors say that a commission man is like a family doctor; he should be carefully chosen and never changed. A pretty tribute to W. J. B., is it not?

Emil Leiker, of Lansdowne, is sending in some nice Flora Hill to Edward Reid.

Chas. H. Buening, of Easton, has built three fine new houses, open between, about 150x25 each, for roses and carnations.

J. F. Horn & Bro., of Allentown, show the unmistakable sign of prosperity—building.

John Savage, of Mt. Airy, has a fine house of Asparagus plumosus.

Eugene Bernheimer has added a new home-made addition to his large refrigerator. The new part is 10x7x4 feet and will be used for greens.

Base Ball

Last Saturday saw a very close game at Atco, N. J., between the employes of Samuel S. Pennock, led by Mr. Watson (no, not G. C.) and the workers on W. P. Peacock's big dahlia firm. Unfortunately the home team was late in toeing the mark. For this they suffered, the visitors being obliged to catch a train at the end of the fifth inning and winning by the score of 4 to 3. Maybe they would have won anyway. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

On our return home from the convention we found the cut flower trade still dragging along the same as when we left it. We also found first-class stock still scarce, the best quality finding ready sale. There is plenty of poor stock, which nobody seems to want, even at the low rates. Good Kaiserin and Meteor sell well, while Bride and Maid are still small and sell at a low price. Of carnations, both under glass and outdoors, Mrs. Fisher is the best. Some good Flora Hill are also in the market. The colored varieties show the effect of the hot spell. Field-grown stock is becoming more abundant. Quite a few auratum lilies are now in at $1 per dozen. Hydrangeas do not sell so well. Tuberose stalks are in good demand, with plenty of them in the market. Asters that are home-grown are not extra. The best are being shipped in and the demand is good when of extra quality. The growers claim that the outlook for a better quality of stock in a very short time is good.

The young rose stock is in a very promising condition, more so than at any previous time. The same may be said of carnations. All are looking fine, especially the newer varieties. All plants are now making a fine growth, and particularly those that are planted on low ground where there is plenty of moisture. Out in Kirkwood, where most of the violets are grown for this market, the plants are unusually fine. They all claim that the St. Louis market will be better fixed for stock the coming season than ever before, and this will be welcome news for the retailers here.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis delegation returned home Sunday from the Milwaukee convention. The members expressed themselves as never having had a better time, and too much praise cannot be given the Milwaukee boys for their entertainment. They did everything and more than they promised, and it is up to St. Louis next year to return the compliment. We are also under many obligations to the Chicago craft for their entertainment of Friday and Saturday. The Milwaukee convention will always remain a bright spot in our memories.

The bowling contest was about the best arranged affair yet held at any convention and much credit is due to our friend, Phil Hauswirth, of Chicago, for the way he handled the contest. Philadelphia, having the best team, won and we offer our congratulations. We missed the genial captain, George Moss, but a team that can win without its captain deserves much praise. We felt sorry for our friends from Chicago, but it was their own fault and they will know better next year. We will be on our own dung hill and will also do better.

George McClure, of Buffalo, is in town, spending a week with his son, who is at Shaw's Garden, in charge of the orchid houses. Mr. McClure is an enthusiast on bowling and was, of course, sorry Buffalo did not win out at Milwaukee. He also expressed himself as having a good time at the convention, and that the Milwaukee boys did themselves proud in every respect.

I will close my letter for this week by saying that we are all glad to be "back among the old folks once again" from the best convention the Society of American Florists has ever held.

J. J. B.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

There is a slight demand for white flowers, but otherwise very little business is doing. Yet even at that the sales foot up higher than last year. Hot weather is using up the outdoor stock in a hurry. Roses, with the exception of American Beauty and Liberty, are a glut. Short-stemmed stock of Bride, Bridesmaid, Gate, Kaiserin, Ivory, etc., can scarcely be sold at any price. There is a fair demand for the better grades. Beauties are increasing in quantity and some are very good.

Carnations are still scarce, but there are signs of an increase in supply very soon. Several growers are beginning to cut from new stock, and the flowers are good, with fairly long stems. During the past week E. G. Gillett received the first consignment of carnations from the B. K. & B. Floral Co., of Richmond, Ind. These were the first carnations that this firm have cut and they were very good. The variety was Dorothy.

Some very fine asters are now to be had and there are plenty of buyers for them at good figures. The supply of second grade ones is not so large and they bring more money. Gladioli are still very good, but the market is getting tired of them. Some very good dahlias are coming in, but this flower never takes well in this market. The store men will not buy them.

Various Notes.

The Cincinnati party has returned from the convention and all are singing the praises of the Milwaukee Florists' Club. Judging from what they say, the convention was the best ever, and a mark was reached in attendance and entertainment which will be hard to beat. But if such a thing is possible, J. J. Beneke, president of the St. Louis Florists' Club, will do the trick. The Chicago boys deserve lots of credit for the manner in which they entertained the visitors.

A visit to the Lockland Lumber Company plant, at Lockland, O., during the past week proved to be very interesting. This firm is in the midst of the largest business they have ever had in greenhouse material. There was almost ready for shipment a large quantity of material for six houses, 32x150 for S. Alfred Baur, of Erie, Pa. This material had been treated to a preserving process, discovered by the superintendent of this plant, who is a graduate of the University of Berne, Switzerland, and a man of many years of practical experience. This method of preservation is the outcome of years of study and experiments and is decidedly a new departure in the preparation of greenhouse lumber.

The success of the flower shows during the fall festival seems assured, judging by the number of entries already booked. There will be a committee from the Florists' Society to see that every one is treated well, and if you cannot come with your exhibit your stock will be carefully looked after.

Chas. E. Critchell and Miss Bess Critchell had a narrow escape from death while returning home from their vacation. They were in a very bad wreck, Miss Critchell being badly used up. Charlie was more fortunate, a few severe bruises, but he was still able to attend the convention at Milwaukee.

R. A. Betz and family are spending a two weeks' vacation at Wawasee, Ind. Chas. E. Critchell is in town.

C. J. OHMER.

WANAMAKER WISDOM.

"Some one has said if there are ten bakers in town, the one who gives the best loaf for six-pence is sure at last to sell the most bread. That's the bottom of all trade. The one who furnishes the best of anything gets the most trade in that line."—John Wanamaker.

LOOMIS, CAL.—A. Mitting says that the way he grows carnation plants in the field is to plant as shallow as possible and earth up a little. He has the rows two feet apart and runs water between them, the water then wetting under the rows and the carnations grow without check all summer. By having this ridge along the rows it keeps the plants from stem-rot. He cultivates between the rows and the plants grow so fast it is a back-breaking job to keep them pinched back.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We have the G. A. R. encampment with us at present and the city presents a gala appearance. Miles of ever-green garland have been used to decorate the principal streets and the use of decorative palms and hardy outside flowers has been very lavish in the show-windows around town. Gladioli, dahlias, coreopsis, asters and amaryllises, together with large quantities of huckleberry, brake ferns and oak branches have been used and made a demand for this class of stock that will last for some days to come. Outside of decorating there is very little doing. Flowers are very cheap and plentiful. Asters are at the height of their season at present and are of good quality throughout and very cheap. Roses hold their own in price and are of better form and color. Carnations are plentiful enough for all demands. Tuberoses and amaryllises are seen everywhere and can be had for any price.

Various Notes.

Many of the carnation growers are getting ready to plant their greenhouses at this time and most of them are planting the usual list of varieties, Flora Hill for white, Estelle for scarlet, Lawson, Crocker, Schwerin, Mrs. Joost, Scott and Triumph for pink, and Pingree and Eldorado for yellow. Some Prosperity, Cressbrook, Mrs. Bradt, Genevieve Lord, America and Jubilee will be planted but they are not as largely grown in this section as the varieties first mentioned.

The fact that the California State Horticultural Society is forging ahead rapidly was shown by the fact that forty applications for membership were presented at the last meeting. Some very fine specimens of dahlias were exhibited and a very enthusiastic meeting was held.

James Bell, of Dwight Way, Berkeley, has leased his grounds to a company of Japanese gardeners.

John Vallance, of the Cox Seed Company, read a very interesting paper on "Seeds, Their Germination and Peculiarities," at the last meeting of the Oakland branch of the California State Horticultural Society. Mr. Vallance has had many years' experience in this line of work and his remarks were highly instructive to the large audience present.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

There is surcease of the heavy rains, there is more sunshine and the thermometer marks a higher temperature. The thermometer of business, however, went down last week almost to the zero mark. Barring a few funeral orders, general apathy prevailed. The stock of cut flowers is abundant for all calls. Growers are busy with repair work, and if any one of the craft ventured on a trip to the Cream City convention, he kept it hid from scribes as well as pharisees. Doubtless it is all the worse for the craft. There is little news to dispense.

Various Items.

Thomas Vincent, who has a store on West Baltimore street, has rented another on North Charles, corner of North avenue, a very promising locality. J. Adam Ritter, whose place is in that immediate vicinity and who does a handsome business, is spending the summer in Atlantic City.

Alexander Scott, formerly of the Exchange here, is engaged in improving and developing his property on the Hanford road, a suburb which is increasing rapidly in value and population.

Mr. Johnson, for several years office man and bookkeeper with S. Feast & Sons, has severed his connection with that concern, finding the conditions unfavorable to his health.

Alexander McCormick, Jr., a florist of Fullerton, has received the Republican nomination for commissioner of Baltimore county, which is the largest, most populous and wealthy county of our state, this office corresponding to the mayoralty of cities. The same gentleman is president of the Timorium Fair Association, which draws great crowds of visitors and presents many attractions in the way of stock, farm and garden products, as well as horse racing, etc. There are sections with moderate prizes for plants in pots and tubs, cut flowers and floral designs and vases. The fair is held from September 1 to 5.

Another fair in the county is that of the Prospect Park Association, from September 8 to 12, where premiums are offered for groups of palms, collections of cut flowers, bouquets and funeral designs.

James Glass, of Erdman avenue, makes a specialty of ferns and in his house may be seen an almost countless collection of many sorts and sizes, the cultivation of which he follows with great intelligence and consequent success.

Messrs. Madsen and Anderson, formerly partners, and now near neighbors, of Govanstown, who are recognized as the champion growers here of American Beauties, have their respective places in apple-pie order. The untoward season denied them as favorable a start as usual, but they may be expected to turn out products of the usual high standard when cutting time comes. Mr. Anderson is repiping his houses and has converted his steam boiler into a hot water one and will heat by that agency hereafter.

TORONTO.

Trade during the last week has been decidedly slow and it is the remark of many of our retail men that it is the slowest of the season. With the decrease of trade, as is often the case, we notice the increase of supply. Good roses are coming in abundance. This does not speak any too well for the chances of plenty of stock for October, when it is usually wanted. Asters are in great quantity and stock keeping very good.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Simmons are taking a tour of the resorts on the Atlantic coast. They are expected home about the first of next week.

We are all looking forward to a big time at the C. H. A. convention to be held here September 2 and 3.

ST. PETER, MINN.—T. Kloss is building a new greenhouse 28x100.

RIVERSIDE, CAL.—P. H. Dorsett, of the Department of Agriculture, is considering the advisability of locating here.

OTTAWA, ONT.—R. H. Wright has one of the handsomest new stores in America, at 54 Sparks street. The fixtures are fine and the storehouse extends back to the next street.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

ALL nursery stocks were low in the east and they had fifty-five days drought to retard growth.

THE American Pomological Society holds its biennial meeting at Boston, September 10 to 12.

GEO. H. WHITING has built up a prosperous nursery business at Yankton, S. D. A recent order was for 175,000 Carolina poplars.

THE Standard Nursery Co., of What Cheer, Ia., has been incorporated with $10,000 capital stock by George W. Zeigler and others.

W. W. STELL, the nurseryman, of Paris, Tex., has bought 1,500 acres near Brownwood, on which James W. Moore, a grandson, will be in charge.

EAKER BROS., of Vinton, Ia., have leased storage and packing facilities at Albert Lea, Minn., and propose to transfer their business to that point.

J. W. DICKEY, proprietor of the Pleasant Valley Nursery, near Scotland, Ind., wishes to deny the report that he will go out of business. Some 500,000 grafts have been planted this season.

NURSERIES AT SHENANDOAH.

In a two-column write-up of the city of Shenandoah, Ia., in the Chicago Record-Herald, William E. Curtis speaks as follows of the nurseries there:

More young trees are grown in and shipped from this little city than from any other town in the world, and the Shenandoah Nursery is claimed to be the largest and most modern establishment in existence. The proprietor is D. S. Lake, who came here from a little town near Concord, N. H., shortly after the civil war and worked as an ordinary farm hand. When he left his old home one of his neighbors owed him some money which he was not then able to pay, and instead of the cash sent him a bundle of grafts which he said might possibly be sold to advantage and he could keep whatever he could get for them. Instead of selling them Mr. Lake leased a piece of ground on the borders of the village and set out his young trees. From that beginning he has now 600 acres in trees, berries and shrubbery and is said to be worth half a million of dollars, all of which has been made on that place. His business is chiefly wholesale and extends to every state in the Union and to several foreign countries. His exports to France are very large. Mr. Lake's annual plantings average 1,000,000 apple grafts, 50,000 cherries, 75,000 plums, 100,000 evergreens and a large assortment of ornamental shrubs and trees. He also grows and sells millions of forest tree seedlings, and about 10,000,000 of apple seedlings every year.

The Mount Arbor Nursery, owned by E. S. Welch, is second only to the one I have just mentioned. It covers about 300 acres and more than 5,000,000 young plants are shipped annually to every state in the Union, Canada and Mexico. Mr. Welch was a laborer in the Shenandoah Nursery until a few years ago, when he borrowed money and set up for himself. There are two other nurseries of lesser dimensions which make Shenandoah the largest center for that business in the world, with salesmen in every state. Altogether not fewer than 25,000,000 grafts and seedlings are shipped out of this town every year, two-thirds of them being young apple trees.

WE HAVE been enjoying a good trade as a result of our ad in the REVIEW.—COTTAGE GREENHOUSES, Litchfield, Ill.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

PROSPECTS for corn have improved considerably in the past ten days.

MITCHELHILL & Co., St. Joseph, Mo., are building an addition, 40x65 to their seed warehouse.

JOHN M. CLARK, of the Leonard Seed Co., is in Northern Michigan, crop inspecting and doing a little fishing on the side.

REPORTS as to the condition of clover seed crops are very good, not only in Germany and Austria but also in France and Russia. Stocks of red clover are, however, very low on the continent.

PHILADELPHIA.—S. B. Dicks, representing Cooper, Tabor & Co., and James Comont, representing James Carter, Dunnett & Beal, of London, England, were callers recently. Recent advices from the seed growing districts of France are more hopeful. A demand for seeds for the season of 1904 is already quite marked and is setting in earlier than usual by at least two months.

FUNK BROS. SEED Co., Bloomington, Ill., has taken up the matter of breeding corn for the purpose of not only producing perfect ears and grain but adding to the protein, starch or oil content. As corn growers in the Mississippi valley are, many of them, growing their crops for particular purposes, they see a direct commercial return in proportion to the success of their experiments. Prof. Bailey used several photographs, taken in the course of their experiments, to illustrate an article on plant breeding in Country Life for June.

WISCONSIN PEA CROP.

The harvesting of peas in Door county, Wisconsin, is about finished. Thrashing of Alaskas, Extra Earlies, Gems and Advancers has commenced. Some milling is being done and the hand picking has started. Deliveries show a fair quality and the quantity comes up to the revised estimates in most cases. The Telephones, Marrowfats and other late sorts promise to meet expectations and the weather is favorable for getting them under cover in good shape. Alaskas evidently suffered most from the spring frosts and summer rains, but there appears to be sufficient of them in the hands of farmers who grew on their own account to make up the shortage of deliveries to regular contractors. The quality of these promiscuous stocks will hardly be up to the standard, as farmers usually are not well enough posted to distinguish the good from the poor, quantity of bushels being their principal aim.

flowers. These so-called "scientists" for their own importance would create a Government seed establishment overshadowing all seed houses or private enterprises among American seed merchants, and would soon enlarge the free seed distribution from 43,000,000 packages as during this spring of 1903, not alone to 50,000,000 packages, but soon thereafter to 100,000,000 packages, of a retail trade value of $5,000,000, the same to be given away to a special class of citizen-farmers and carried free through the mails at the cost of several millions of dollars and at the expense of every other class of citizens of the United States. This is class legislation with a vengeance, and without a parallel.

It is a gift by the Government of seeds which if sold by merchants would represent commercial transactions to the amount of $5,000,000, a most alarming reduction in those opportunities which merchants have a right to expect in the way of doing business. The United States is interfering most unfairly, and to an extent almost beyond conception, for the Government distribution is practically equal to the entire put-out of flat packets of seed by all merchants in the United States, the Government thus reducing the seed packet trade in the United States to the extent of 50 per cent, or just cutting it in half.

What would be the effect upon the dry goods trade if the Government should undertake to distribute free, through the mails, 43,000,000 pyramids of pins, to the value of 5 cents each, or what would be the effect upon the grocery trade if the Government should undertake to distribute free, through the mail, 43,000,000 cakes of 5-cent soap? In either case such distribution would be stopped at the first session of Congress, or many members of Congress would go out of office.

MILWAUKEE

After the Convention.

The Milwaukee convention now goes into history. It will not be necessary to tell those who were present that it was a grand success in every way, but there should have been a much larger attendance to see the great trade display. The Society of American Florists does more than any other trade organization for its members, and the problem of increasing its membership should be solved. It seems to take a little more than cold facts printed in our proceedings to appeal to the craft to join this valuable society. The time to act is now. Do not wait until train time next year and then find out who is going. Perhaps the fact is that we feel so proud of being a member of the society, and think that we are going our neighbors one better by being a member, that we do not praise it half enough on our return home from the conventions. Tell your neighbors that you have met the shining lights in our profession. Tell them the knowledge you have gained has been of incalculable value. Tell them they can not conduct their business so as to keep abreast of these progressive times without being a member. Every member should resolve now to appoint himself a committee of one to solicit memberships and should have influence enough to bring in at least one new member, which would mean the doubling of our membership for next year, and we feel sure we ought to escort our president-elect, Philip Breitmeyer, into St. Louis several thousand strong.

The programme mapped out was followed successfully without a hitch or the loss of a moment's time. The opening address of President Burton was well received, and the mayor's welcome started the ball a rolling. Adam Graham responded for the society and the convention was on in full blast. The president's reception was held in an ideal place and proved a great success. The bowlers had a grand time, which is saying enough. In addition to the outing tendered the ladies, they had a knack of entertaining themselves, which left no idle moments. The outing on the lake was an enjoyable trip; the weather was ideal and the crowd merry. We were like one large family and it afforded an opportunity to show the great social feature connected with our meetings. Chicago boys did themselves proud in bringing us together in one grand love feast and the entertainment at the Coliseum was a rare treat and highly appreciated.

As a final resolution, we wish to thank all members for so liberally responding to our invitation in attending the convention, the exhibitors in making their displays, which feature materially assisted in making it a great success, the advertisers in aiding us in our cause, Chicago for its hospitality, Phil Hauswirth for his laborious task in conducting the bowling tournament so successfully, Robert Kift for keeping the session hall well filled, Miss Fulmer for her entertainment at the president's reception, and the weather bureau for providing the beautiful weather. UTICA, N. Y.

Utica Florists' Club Outing.

The Utica Florists' Club held its outing at Buchanan's Grove Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 12. The weather was chilly, which made it unpleasant for those who were not taking part in the races.

There were over fifty in the party which gathered to partake of the fine spread at about 4 o'clock. Not a man present would have owned that he had not eaten anything in a week, but they certainly did clean up that feast. The races were good, but the most interesting feature was the fat man's race.

Besides the members of the Utica Florists' Club there were present Hakes and Schesch of Ilion, Graham of Little Falls, Traudt of Canajoharie, Limmer of Schenectady and Bryan of Rome, and, as guests of the club, Quinlan, Bard, Davis, Dunn, Greuman, Campbell, Burt, Dutton, Dow, Huller, Ham, Sr., and Ham, Jr., of Syracuse. In the afternoon they had a baseball game, and, of course, Utica won. It beat Syracuse 11 to 5. The committee was W. A. Rowlands, A.

R. Wilcox, W. E. Day; judge of sports, Seward Hakes; starter and announcer, F. J. Baker.

Here are the names of the events, the winners and the prizes:

Hundred yard dash—William Kaufer, of Utica, ton of coal donated by Sterling Coal Co., of Utica; Earl Davis, basket pot cover donated by Sigmund Geller, of New York.

Standing broad jump—William Day, of Utica, barometer donated by C. F. Meyer, of New York; Mr. Grueman, of Syracuse, knife donated by W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo.

Obstacle race—Mr. Meslerley, stein donated by White Pottery Co.; J. J. Williams, of Utica, florist knife donated by Michell Seed Co., of Philadelphia.

Throwing baseball—E. Crowe, of Utica, specimen plant donated by H. A. Dreer, of Philadelphia; Earl Davis, of Utica, two wreaths donated by Reed & Keller, of New York.

Three-legged race—Ed. Crowe and Earl Davis, 100 lilies donated by Lucas & Boddington, of New York.

Twenty-five yard hop on one leg—Will Day, of Utica, box of cigars donated by Emil George.

Sack race—Will Day, of Utica, box of cigars donated by H. Gilmore; Earl Davis, of Utica, pipe donated by H. Gilmore.

Putting 15-pound shot—Davis, of Utica, box of cigars donated by Michell Seed & Bulb Co.; Dunn, of Syracuse, two reams of paper donated by Bowes Bros.

Lean man's race—Will Day, $10 crate of flower pots donated by Syracuse Pottery Co.; Earl Davis, six pot covers donated by L. J. Kreschover, of New York.

Running broad jump—Will Day, case of wire designs; Jess Williams, vase.

Fat man's race—Dr. W. J. Rowlands, "Scott's Florists' Manual" donated by Florists' Review, of Chicago; second, Frederick Boyce, of Utica.

Hop, skip and jump—Will Day, tub of paint donated by Hammond Paint Co., of Fishkill; Earl Davis, box of cigars.

Throwing hammer—William Death, of Utica, coil hose donated by H. Petersen; Will Day, two wreaths donated by Reed & Keller, of New York.

Race for men over 50 years—Mr. Schesch, of Ilion, 100 paper boxes donated by Dayton Paper Novelty Co., of Dayton, Ohio.

Throwing ball in barrel—Charles Kramer, of Utica, vase and standard.

Half-mile run—Will Day, $10 gold piece donated by C. C. Kellogg & Sons Co.

NEWARK, N. J.—Articles of incorporation were filed August 18 by the T. L. Lowdon & Sons Company, with an office at 525 Main street, East Orange. The corporation is to operate in New York and will do a general florist, seed and landscape gardening business. The capital stock is fixed at $50,000, divided into 500 shares of a par value of $100 each. Of this 400 shares are to be common stock and 100 preferred. The incorporators and their holdings are: James B. Richardson, eight shares; Walter B. Bond, one share, and Gardiner W. Kimball, one share—all common stock.

NEW ORLEANS.

The installation of the newly elected officers of the New Orleans Horticulturists' Association took place August 20. J. E. Newsham, of the committee on conference with Central Park commission, said that the co-operation of the florists had been heartily accepted by the commission. Paul Abele, of Abele Bros., and Richard Eichling, of U. J. Virgin's, exhibited plants and flowers. Dave Newsham, who is making a collection of flowers and plants for the association's exhibit at the World's Fair in St. Louis, reported that his collections were succeeding very satisfactorily and that he will have a very fine exhibit. A finance committee, composed of the following members, was appointed by the chairman: J. St. Mard, A. Schalk and C. R. Panter.

New Orleans had a party of six at the S. A. F. convention. Several of them are yet in Chicago.

NEW BRIGTON, PA.

Business is very slow at present, but everybody is busy with preparations for next season. At August Meyer's they have all their chrysanthemums benched, about 2,500 fine, healthy plants. The asters here are coming on fine. They have the houses cleared out ready for carnations. They will bench about 3,500 plants and they are looking fine in the field. John H. Meyer has resigned his position with his father and quit the greenhouse business altogether. He was liked by everybody in the valley and all are sorry to see him leave. At J. J. Bolton's place everyone is hustling to get things into shape, and at the Engle place also.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL, BY WM. SCOTT.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business, and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopaedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold. Following we print a few extracts from letters received from buyers of the book:

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.
GEORGE M. KELLOGG.
Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.
Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.
Chicago. JOHN THORPE.

No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florists' business.
J. T. TEMPLE.
Davenport, Ia.

The Florists' Manual is worth five times the price. It is just what a busy florist wants.
Columbus, O. B. RUEHLER & SON.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.
Milwaukee, Wis. W. A. KENNEDY.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.
Macomb, Ill. F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.
Ithaca, N. Y. L. H. BAILEY.

We have gotten much valuable instruction from the Florists' Manual and prize it highly.
Franklin, Tenn. TRUETT BROS.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.
Etna, Pa. M. NAUMAN.

Price $5.00, Carriage Prepaid.

I greatly appreciate the Florists' Manual. It is a splendid text-book.

JOHN WELSH YOUNG.
Germantown, Pa.

The Florists' Manual is a gem. No florist can afford to be without it.
Madison, N. J. A. J. BURR.

If everyone has enjoyed your book as I have it's a successful publication. It is different from our usual horticultural works, being plain and concise—just what one wants.
Flushing, N. Y. H. D. DARLING.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Business is at a complete standstill. It seems as if all of the growers have started to ship in from their young stock, and when all this is added to the immense quantities of summer stock in the market, the condition of things can well be imagined. It is with difficulty that No. 1 and No. 2 roses can be cleared out at all. They are more often bunched up and sold at so much per box, rather than by the 100.

Beauties are selling better, if anything, though at times they are sold extremely low. To make matters worse chrysanthemums are expected this week.

The spurt that was expected owing to the yacht races has not materialized. To sum the whole thing up, it is the worst summer trade experienced here; entirely too many flowers for the very light demand.

Various Notes.

Peter Crowe, of Utica, has sold to W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, 6,000 plants of his new fern, Adiantum Croweanum. Mr. Kasting has the wholesale handling of this good variety, and arrangements for a large output next season are in progress, the above being only a foretaste of what this enterprising wholesaler intends to do toward its dissemination.

Alexander Wallace has written a book, The Heather in Lore, Lyric and Lay, a beautiful work of about 250 pages, soon to be published by the A. T. DeLaMare Co., and a book, judging by its prospectus, full of information and interest, especially to Scotchmen, as it is the first exhaustive book on the subject ever written.

August 19 the first violets of the season were received by Ford Bros. Mrs. M. J. Moore, of Highland, N. Y., having the honor of opening the campaign.

Schloss Bros.' new violet scarfs are a great success.
